"Britain Needs a Policy"

William H. Mooring, representing in Hollywood the Rothermere and Odhams press, including the London Daily Mail, Sunday Dispatch and Daily Herald, passed through New York Wednesday returning from a sojourn in London.

"The chief need of the British industry today," observed Mr. Mooring, "seems to be to form a British industry, with some communal consciousness and a formulated policy. The British industry very much needs an equivalent of the Hays Office of the American industry. Comparisons of the operations and methods of the two industries, British and American, make the vast utility and service of a strong trade association most conspicuous.

"In Britain we have many competent men working diligently for their individual successes, but without coordination.

"The British industry needs to make up its mind."

Neely Bill

The unexpected reintroduction in the Senate of the Neely anti-block booking bill resulted this week in a hurried conference of distributors' sales executives and attorneys at the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

However, in Washington the bill was considered to stand little chance of being voted on this session as the Senate is far behind in its work and has an early summer adjournment as its objective. It was also pointed out that even if the Senate should pass the measure, there would be little likelihood that the House would act this year.

C. C. Pettijohn, MPPDA counsel, visited the White House this week, presumably on business concerning the Neely bill.

In a formal report Senator Matthew Neely, author the measure, said ". . . . present monopolistic control of motion pictures calls for regulation in the public interest."

Soviet Director

A new director of the Russian film industry has been appointed to succeed Boris Z. Shumiatsky, who recently was ousted following charges of waste and extravagance, according to Amkino, Soviet film agency in New York. N. Napoli of Amkino said he did not know the identity of the new leader and he also reported his office had not been notified of other changes that have taken place during the reorganization. V. I. Verlinsky, Amkino president, is in Moscow now and is not expected to return to the United States until next month. He has shipped a number of films to this country and Amkino this year will distribute 22 pictures, an increase of five over last year, Mr. Napoli said.

The Agent Issue

Revived by the action of Joseph M. Schenck in barring Myron Selznick from the studio lot of Twentieth Century-Fox is the issue of the relationship of artists' representatives to high cost of production. The "outside picture" clause of contracts provides that a star under contract to one company at a stipulated salary shall have permission to make one or more pictures a year, "outside" this contract, for another producer, at a figure subject to adjustment by the agent in negotiation with the "outside" producer. Producers say that most agents use this clause as a lever for establishing salary precedents in anticipation of future negotiations with contract employers.

Backgrounds are explained on page 29.

Not for Theatres

Legislation imposing graduated taxes running as high as $1,000 per outlet on chain stores, introduced in the House of Representatives Monday by Congressman Wright Patman (Dem.) of Texas, will not apply to exhibition circuits, it was disclosed this week by the author of the measure.

While Mr. Patman expressed the view that there are abuses in the motion picture industry which should be eliminated, he voiced the opinion that correction should be secured by some means other than taxation.

It was explained that the bill is designed solely to eliminate chain stores and turn all retailing over to the independent merchants. The measure provides specifically that the taxes shall apply to "retail stores."

Rates of taxation are based on the number of stores, and run as high as $1,000 for each store over 500, to be multiplied by the number of states in which the chain operates, so that the maximum rate can be as high as $49,000 a store. In the case of the A & P, operating over 14,000 stores in 38 states and the District of Columbia, the annual tax bill under the Patman measure would be in excess of a half-billion dollars.

Lobbying Stage

Lobbying among members of Parliament for and against provisions of the new British Films Act was in progress this week as the bill neared its third reading and a vote of the full membership in the House of Commons. Loudest among the voices heard were those of producers, demanding increased quota percentages. These demands, voiced at the final committee sessions, were refused in part by Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, who, however, agreed to an increase in the exhibitors' quota percentage from 10 to 12½ per cent.

PRODUCERS DROP BOARD LEGEND

The legend "Passed by the National Board of Review," affixed to the main titles of motion pictures, passed this week with its abandonment by Paramount Pictures in Hollywood. It is now being placed only on the production titles of Samuel Goldwyn and some independents.

Rome Calls

Warren G. Doane and Jeanie Macpherson are at work in production in Rome for ERA Film Productions, the company formed by Vittorio Mussolini and Italian banking interests following the return to Italy of the premier's son from Hollywood, it was learned this week on the Coast. Mr. Doane was at one time general manager of the Hal Roach studio, Miss Macpherson has been long identified with Cecil B. DeMille Productions as a scenarist. ERA Films, it is understood, will produce for Italian and European release only.

Labor and Unions

Some far-reaching potentialities are seen in the latest developments in unionization and the employment of labor, the American Federation of Musicians deciding this week to turn attention next to motion pictures in its campaign to alleviate the widespread unemployment in its ranks.

Having succeeded, by contract, in putting musicians to work in broadcasting, the AFM's leaders are now about to converge on Hollywood to work out some method for reemploying music men in films, either in studios or theatres, where, it is charged, some 22,000 have lost out as a result of sound.

Cohen Settlement

Emanuel Cohen left the Coast for a three months' vacation abroad this week after reaching an amicable agreement with Paramount over the cancellation of his releasing contract which had a year and a half to run.

Under the terms of the settlement, Mr. Cohen will receive an undisclosed sum and Paramount will take over the lease on the General Service Studios used by Mr. Cohen for production of his Major Pictures.

The agreement provided that neither party would reveal the full terms of the settlement and for this reason Mr. Cohen would neither deny nor confirm a report that he would receive $500,000 from Paramount.

Paramount described the agreement as "solely an adjustment of the financial obligations accruing to both parties as a result of abrogation of the deal. Both Paramount and Major are responsible for certain costs and charges and each assumes its full obligations under the agreement."

Trade Agreement

A British Government delegation of nine trade experts sailed from London Wednesday aboard the Queen Mary to take part in Washington negotiations for a new Anglo-American trade treaty. When the conferences were first announced by Secretary of State Cordell Hull last month, Francis L. Burt, Washington correspondent of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, reported that reductions in the import duties on motion pictures may be offered in return for relaxation of the present restrictions against the entry of American films into England.

Daniel C. Roper, secretary of commerce, in connection with the approaching arrival of the English committee forecast consummation of a reciprocal trade treaty by late spring. He reported as an example of present trade relations the export of sound equipment worth $563,000 in 1937 compared with $720,000 in 1936 and an increase in film exports to England from 63,347,000 feet in 1936 to 63,942,000 feet in 1937.

FCC FAVORS PRESENT RADIO SETUP, WITH 'STANDARDS' FOR 'PROPRIETY'

Study of Newspaper Ownership of Stations, Network System and Profits of Broadcasters Suggested in Report

Broadcasting in the future may affect the motion picture industry "just as the latter has affected the legitimate stage," the Federal Communications Commission was told in a report on the social and economic aspects of broadcasting prepared by Commissioner T. A. M. Craven while acting as chief engineer of the commission.

The report was completed secretly sometime ago, but was withheld, it was explained in Washington by Chairman Frank R. McNinch, because of uncertainties and implications involved in the North American Radio Conference then being planned, which was held in Havana, Cuba, last month, and so the details of the report were released only last week.

While the engineering department foresaw the possibilities that radio might seriously affect films, it went no further into that phase, its principal comment being made in connection with a survey of newspapers as affected by broadcasting.

General conclusions of the report were:

The American system of competitive private broadcasting should be retained but, if necessary, strict standards be established to insure its proper operation.

Super-power should not be adopted at this time, because of its possible adverse effect upon small local stations;

Adoption of a policy with respect to newspaper ownership of broadcasting stations should be postponed until an exhaustive study of the subject can be made.

The network system renders an essential service, but investigations should be made of the contractual relationships between chain companies and affiliated stations to insure competition between networks, individual stations, advertisers and talent.

Studies should be made of the profits of broadcasting stations of all classes.

"We believe that compared to all foreign systems with which we are personally familiar, the American system of broadcasting has demonstrated its acceptance by the public in greater listening hours and larger ownership of receivers in proportion to the population," the report declared.

"We know of no reason for changing the doctrine of fair competition, both local and national, among individuals as well as among organizations, and we believe that adherence to the diversification doctrine of licensing stations in any community or region, as well as in the nation as a whole, is a sound public policy.

"It is our conception that this rapidly growing but young industry has already rendered much excellent service in the interest of the public and that, while it can be improved, it should be given the opportunity to do so with the cooperation and guidance of the Federal regulatory body."

However, the report commented, "in effecting a preservation of the existing American system of broadcasting it may be necessary to establish standards of public service and to take such steps as are necessary to insure their being complied with."

Small Group of Licensees

The major factor involved in the use of super-power, Mr. Craven held, is that a small group of licensees would have control of radio facilities capable of reaching the entire nation.

"Unless care were exercised in the regulation of those licensees, the possibility exists of having granted to a few people, from natural resources of the Federal Government, the control of a system of mass communication having untold potentialities of being utilized to influence public opinion," it was pointed out. "Hence it seems that in the determination of the question of super-power must also come the consideration of the ability of the Federal Government to control these facilities, both from the standpoint of individual licensees as well as combinations thereof, in such a manner that they will operate always in the interest of the public.

More Data on Profits Asked

"The evidence is not conclusive of the immediate general need for super-power, and in view of the fact that there is a risk involved to the welfare of facilities for local self expression in smaller communities, the engineering department urges most strongly the most careful scrutiny and consideration of each individual application that may be presented in the future.

"We firmly believe that any enlargement of the differential between the highest power station class and the lowest power station class should not be encouraged unless, after full consideration of the effects on the lower power classes of stations, it can be shown conclusively that a super-high-power station is necessary and that beyond doubt it will be in the public interest."

Financial reports now filed with the commission do not give sufficient data to permit any study of station profits, and it is suggested that more detailed data be required so that such an inquiry can be made, explaining, however, that the requirement for comprehensive financial reports should not necessarily be considered a step in the direction of rate regulation.

Recommending studies of the relation between chains and their stations, the report not only emphasizes the need of retaining competition but also suggests there is room for improvements in programs. Although the report was drafted last June, the suggestion was almost identical to those heard in Congress in December after the Mae West-Charlie McCarthy broadcast for Chase and Sanborn.

At that time, Francis L. Burt, of MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S Washington bureau, reported that "the violent unfavorable reaction to the Mae West broadcast has served to climax a growing dissatisfaction with the failure of Frank R. McNinch to do the 'cleanup' for which he was transferred from the Federal Power Commission."

It was as a result of the broadcast, too, that the smoldering demands for a congressional investigation of the radio industry and the FCC reached their highest point. The Congressional attacks were led by William P. Connery, Jr., Democrat, of Massachusetts, who promised a bill for a federal investigation. Donald L. O'Toole, Democrat, of New York, joined in the demand for a probe by declaring that "if a company has not sufficient sense not to allow such a program, then censorship must be exercised."

SENATOR PROPOSES REVIEW OF SCRIPTS

Legislation, calling for the establishment of a radio review board within the Federal Communications Commission, will be introduced into Congress, Senator Clyde L. Herring, Democrat of Iowa, said last week.

The setting up of a bureau of review, to which broadcasters would submit their programs voluntarily, would be a step toward "cleaning up the air," the senator said. He asserted that "there isn't a broadcaster in the country who wouldn't be glad to submit his program, before delivery."

The senator also criticized the recent Chase and Sanborn program on which Boris Karloff presented Edgar Allen Poe's "The Tell-Tale Heart." The episode was "gruesome," Mr. Herring said, adding that he did not believe it proper to present programs in which the horror theme dominated.

Canadian Minister Orders Radio Study

Finance Minister Dunning of Ottawa, Canada, has instructed the Tariff Board to make a complete investigation of the radio industry in Canada. The probe, which will take several months to complete, will embrace production, distribution and sale of receiving sets, radio tubes and parts of sets. In addition the board will study the bearing of the patent law upon the manufacture, use and importation of, cost and use of radio in Canada of the alleged pooled control of patent rights.

It has been charged that Canadians were prevented from buying important radios not made in Canada because Canadian manufacturers held the patents and threatened to take action for patent infringement.

At Ottawa, the Parliament prepared to check on the operation of the government owned radio system, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, and a House of Commons committee was expected to be appointed to hear officers of the company.

The government is insistent upon adopting a 50 per cent increase in license fees on receiving sets. The revenue is needed, C. D. Howe, transport minister, said, because two new high-power stations are to be built this year.

Karl Hoblitzelle, Texas circuit operator, has been elected president of a commission composed of 45 prominent Texans to raise $500,000 for Texas' participation in the New York World's Fair and the San Francisco Golden Gate Exposition. The commission was appointed by Governor James V. Allred.

RADIO MEN WARNED ON MONOPOLY; CENSORSHIP OPPOSED, POLL SHOWS

Association at Washington Convention Votes to Employ a Paid President; McNinch Says He's Considering Inquiry

In a session marked by a warning against monopoly in the radio industry and by an announcement that the chairman of the Federal Communications Commission will urge an investigation of monopolistic trends, the National Association of Broadcasters this week voted to employ a paid president to occupy a position similar to that held in the film industry by Will H. Hays, head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

The warning that monopoly in any form would lead to government ownership of all radio facilities was sounded by Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana. He also advised the radio executives, meeting for their 16th annual convention at the Willard Hotel, Washington, against taking sides in political controversies and against programs such as the Mae West "Adam and Eve" skit recently presented under sponsorship of Chase and Sanborn coffee.

Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the FCC, told the delegates that he planned to recommend a commission investigation because the commission, he said, has a positive duty to destroy radio monopoly if it exists.

In speaking of vulgarity on the air, Mr. Wheeler said: "Entertainment which transgresses the standards of decency and good taste undermines the prestige of radio and subjects licensees to a risk which they need not assume. I do not believe that the public will long tolerate the use of radio for a type of program which violates fundamental concepts of decency and which is not acceptable at the family fireside."

Cites Responsibility

President Roosevelt's message to the convention, read by Mr. McNinch, was similar to that voiced by Mr. Wheeler, who is chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

"The broadcasting industry has, indeed, a very great opportunity to serve the public, but along with this opportunity goes an important responsibility to see that this means of communication is made to serve the high purposes of a democracy," the President's message read.

"I have the high hope that the industry under the guidance of and in cooperation with the Federal Communications Commission will prove itself to be worthy of the great public trust reposed in it."

Warns Against Profiteering

Mr. McNinch read the President's message on Monday and on the following day addressed the convention in his own behalf. He concurred with Senator Wheeler's stand on monopoly and warned broadcasters not to look too closely at profits if they desired to maintain the present system of radio. He reminded the delegates that they were but the trustees of a public resource and that the public is "quick to discern the devices of the profiteer."

Careful scrutiny of advertising script, particularly in patent medicine programs, was urged by the FCC chairman. He declared he was opposed to the advertising of intoxicating beverages on the air.

In speaking of monopolies he advised the radio delegates not to permit their industry to "fall into the grievous errors that other industries have fallen into in the past." The railroads and power industry and other industries have "paid the price of public condemnation for their own folly" in permitting themselves to come under the "domination of a few powerful and greedy men," Mr. McNinch declared.

He said he had in mind suggesting to the FCC that it soon start the investigation of radio to determine whether there is monopoly and any undue anti-social centralization of control.

Mentioned for Presidency

Mr. McNinch was mentioned in reports as a possible choice for the paid position of president of the Association but to this he merely said: "It's just more talk."

The new president will be paid approximately $25,000 a year and it is believed he will be from outside the industry.

Under the association's reorganization plan, there will be 17 district heads and six directors at large. It was to this group, acting as a board, that the association voted authority to employ a president. James W. Baldwin, present managing director and former secretary of the old Federal Radio Commission, is resigning.

Mr. Wheeler, in his address, touched on the subject of extending the present six months' license period. An extension to three years, he said, would be opposed in Congress. He said he favored making the period one year.

Mr. Roosevelt also discussed this subject in his message. "During the past year," he said, "we have witnessed basic developments and progress in radio which will have a profound effect upon the application of broadcasting in this country as well as on the North American continent. One of the greatest advantages of the system of licensing broadcasting is that it is sufficiently flexible to lend itself readily to adjustment to meet our changing social and economic needs."

T. A. M. Craven, Federal Communications Commissioner, told the delegates they should

NBC AND CBS PLAN NEW COAST STUDIOS

Expansion of the broadcasting facilities of the national networks continues to center on the coast as a result of Hollywood now being their principal source of talent supply.

Both the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System have buildings under construction in Hollywood and each, it is estimated, will cost $2,000,000. The new NBC building will be located at Vine Street and Sunset Boulevard and the CBS building will be at Sunset Boulevard and Gower Street.

Three new stations have joined CBS and one has joined NBC. The three NBC stations are KARM, Fresno and KROY, Sacramento, Cal., and WBRK, Pittsfield, Mass. The new NBC station is WBRE, Wilkes Barre.

Gallup Survey Results in 50 to 41 Per cent Vote Against Federal Control; Lohr Says Code Is Impossible

Although Congressional halls often have resounded with threats of censorship for radio broadcasts, a majority of the radio audience in the United States is opposed to government control, according to a nationwide survey conducted by Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion.

The survey shows that 50 per cent of the radio owners feel government censorship would be harmful while 41 per cent believe it would be beneficial. The poll indicates that of the 24,500,000 set owners in America, 14,500,000 prefer to have no censorship while 10,000,000 are in favor of it.

Coincident with release of the survey results, Lenox R. Lohr, National Broadcasting Company president, declared in Hollywood that imposition of a self-regulatory code affecting the entire radio industry is impossible. Mr. Lohr said many scripts of both local and national programs are changed at the last minute; that there can be no central body for reading all scripts, and that a state of great confusion would exist if each station agreed to abide by certain industry-wide self-imposed regulations and then unintentionally violated them.

He also said he did not feel censorship ever would come from a body outside the radio industry because of difficulties arising in the same direction.

Talk of censorship in Congress grew the loudest after the recent Mae West burlesque of "The Garden of Eden," over the NBC network for Chase and Sanborn coffee.

Despite this, the American Institute said that only 15 per cent of those replying to the inquiry were offended by any broadcast in the past year.

The main objection to federal control of broadcast, Dr. Gallup announced, is that direct federal censorship would be a dictatorial usurpation of power which soon would lead to censorship of other media besides radio. Impairment of free speech was given as another reason, Dr. Gallup continued, many voters declaring that both public opinion and the broadcasting companies are now exercising a sufficiently effective censorship.

Those in favor of government censorship contended that better programs might result and that misleading advertising would be eliminated. Vulgarity was not mentioned as a leading reason by those who favored censorship.

A breakdown of the figures shows that censorship was opposed particularly by radio owners in the upper income levels, whereas those of below average incomes were divided about evenly. In the average and above average groups, 64 per cent said censorship would be harmful. Among radio owners of below average income the vote was 51 per cent against censorship.

The fourth annual convention of the Variety Clubs of America, will be held at the Netherland Plaza Hotel, Cincinnati, Ohio, April 24-25. Joe Oulahan, Queen City chief barker, and Queen City Variety Club will act as host.

'PROFITEERS' WARNED

"effect a cohesive organization which gives full recognition to social service to the public." The American system of broadcasting, as contrasted to Government owned or censored radio, "has been proved beyond question to be the best for our country," he said.

Mr. Craven's viewpoint on broadcasters looking to profits differed with that expressed by Mr. McNinch.

"It is proper that radio in this country be operated by private industry and equally proper, and necessary that the industry be encouraged to earn profits, when it renders good service to the public," Mr. Craven declared.

Mr. Craven also reported on the radio conference in Havana last year and the agreements effected there to alleviate the chaotic conditions in radio on the North American continent due to international interference.

In his discussion on monopoly, Mr. Wheeler pointed out that there are "several species" that might "get a stranglehold on radio."

"All deal with power," he continued. "One is power in watts—high power protected over unlimited areas. A second is power in number of stations concentrated in identical ownership. The third relates to the power and the status of the networks.

"Each deals with the extent of influence, of coverage, in the hands of a single person or group. And in each case you have another element of 'power', that which reposes in radio because of its peculiar faculty in molding public opinion—a unit of force and influence that cannot be achieved by any other medium.

"Only broadcasting's own folly would make the threat real. And that would evolve if we allowed any entities in the industry, or outside of it seeking entry, to become too large, too potent; to permit them to reach the point where the influence they exert is so great as to create political animosities and internecine strife that could only result in its destruction."

The first demonstration of a newly developed facsimile apparatus was made at the convention. The new system, developed by Charles J. Young, RCA Victor research engineer, and his associates, utilizes ordinary white paper or newsprint paper at the receiving end, the RCA Manufacturing Company announced.

"The picture, drawing or text to be transmitted is placed on the roller drum of the 'scanner'," the company explained. "A beam of light travels horizontally across the page as the drum revolves. The light is reflected and focussed on a sensitive photo-electric cell in the various degrees of shading corresponding to the picture. The photo-electric cell transforms the light into electrical impulses which are flashed through the air.

"The receiver is synchronized to the transmitter-scanner. The signals are made to actuate the printer mechanism. The fluctuations in the intensity of the incoming signals press the paper and carbon together against a single spiral of wire to make marks corresponding to the light and shade of the original at the scanner."

Seven radio stations have placed orders for the new apparatus, it was announced, and all have applied to the FCC for permission to carry on their experimental programs. The stations are KMJ, Fresno, and KFBK, Sacramento, Cal., both owned by the McClatchy Properties, publishers of the Fresno and Sacramento Bee papers; KHQ, Spokane; WBEN, Buffalo, owned by the Buffalo Evening News; WTMJ, owned by the Milwaukee Journal; KGW, owned by the Portland Oregonia, and WOR of the L. Bamberger Company of Newark, N. J.

Under the reorganization of the broadcasters' association there will be a new schedule of dues based on a classification of net income from the sale of time. Stations with incomes of $15,000 will pay monthly dues of $5, with the scale graduated upward to $500 a month for stations having a yearly income of over $2,000,000. Under this system, it is estimated the NAB will raise approximately $250,000 annually.

Each district among the 17 newly created divisions designated a director and the 17 district directors then nominated 12 candidates for directors-at-large, two of the directors-at-large to represent small stations, two medium sized stations and two large stations. The station classification will be determined on a basis of power.

District directors elected included

District 1, John Shepard, Yankee network; district 2, Harry C. Wilder, WJTN, Jamestown, N. Y.; district 3, Clair McCullough, WGAL, Lancaster, Pa.; district 4, John Kennedy, WPAR and WBLK, both of West Virginia; district 5, W. Walter Tison, WFLA, Tampa, Fla.; district 6, E. W. Craig, WSN, Nashville, Tenn; district 7, Mark Ethridge, WHAS, Louisville, Ky.; district 8, John Fetzer, WKZO, Kalamazoo, Mich.; district 9, Walter Damm, WHMJ, Milwaukee; district 10, John Gillin, WOW, Omaha; district 11, Earl W. Gammons, WCCO, Minneapolis; district 12, Herb Hollister, KANE, Wichita, Kans.; district 13, O. L. Taylor, KGNC, Amarillo, Tex.; district 14, Gene O'Fallon, KFEL, Denver; district 15, Ralph Brunton, KJBS, San Francisco; district 16, Don Thornburgh, KNX, Los Angeles; district 17, C. W. Myers, KGW, Portland, Ore.

Elected as directors-at-large were the following:

Representing clear channel stations: Harold Hough, WBAP, Fort Worth, and Lamdin Kay, WSB, Atlanta.

Representing regional station interests: Frank M. Russell, WRC, Washington, and Elliott Roosevelt, Hearst radio.

Representing local stations: John Elmer, WCBM, Baltimore, and Edward A. Allen, WLVA, Lynchburg, Va.

Resolutions passed at the close of the convention included expressions of thanks to President Roosevelt, Mr. McNinch, Mr. Craven and Mr. Wheeler for their participation in the convention proceedings and for their interest in the industry.

The convention ended with a banquet at which the entertainers included Kate Smith, and Ted Collins, Benay Venuta, John S. Young, Graham McNamee and Stoopnagle and Budd.

Paramount Theatre Partners Hold Meetings in Miami

Meetings of Paramount's Florida theatre partners were held in Miami, Fla., Friday and Saturday with home office officials in attendance. Meeting with the heads of the Sparks and Lynch circuits were Barney Balaban, Paramount president, who is vacationing in Miami; Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president and theatre head, and Austin C. Keough, secretary. Mr. Balaban will remain in Florida for another week.

Honor Louis B. Mayer

A dinner in honor of Louis B. Mayer, retiring president of Motion Picture Producers' Association, is scheduled to be held at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, February 21st. Mr. Mayer, president of the association for the last seven years, was elected first vice-president at the annual meeting last week.

Ohio Court Rules Playdate Measure Unconstitutional

RKO, acting for itself and in behalf of other distributing companies, scored a legal victory in Columbus this week when a three-judge Federal Statutory court ruled that Ohio's anti-playdate law was unconstitutional. The court held the law violated the 14th amendment to the United States constitution by depriving the plaintiff of its property without due process of law.

Ohio's legislature adopted the law a year ago but enforcement was halted pending the outcome of the legal test of its constitutionality. The measure, sponsored by Allied States Association, was intended to make illegal the designation of playdates by distributors in exhibition contracts.

The court overruled the contention of the state's attorney general that the statute was a valid exercise of the police power of the state and held there was no moral issue involved. The attorney general was named defendant in the action.

Similar litigation is pending in Wisconsin, where distributors also obtained an injunction to prevent enforcement pending a court ruling on the action.

In New York, Gabriel L. Hess, attorney for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, said: "The distributors were confident that they would succeed in having the law declared unconstitutional because before the law was signed by the governor, the attorney general of the state declared it unconstitutional."

Abram F. Myers, counsel for Allied, commented on the decision in Washington.

"While disappointing in immediate results, the decision adds needed clarification to the law," Mr. Myers said. "It holds simply that the designation by the distributors of playdates does not involve any moral issue. The court rejected the contentions of the distributors that the law interferred with interstate commerce or that it infringed upon the copyright law or that the public exhibition of motion pictures is not affected with a public interest. In these particulars the decision is a precedent in favor of the North Dakota theatre divorcement law, which becomes effective in March.

"It is hoped that the state will appeal on the moral issue on which the court did not give sufficient weight to the right of the theatre-going public to hold the exhibitor responsible for the proper dating of pictures."

However, in Columbus, it was generally believed an appeal will not be taken.

Paramount Wednesday filed application asking for temporary injunctions to prevent North Dakota officials from enforcing the state's theatre divorcement law which is scheduled to go into effect March 15th. Under the law distributing companies would be forced to divest themselves of their theatre holdings.

Higher Taxes Not Contemplated

Denial that Governor Martin L. Davey of Ohio had in mind a higher state tax on admissions was made Wednesday by Charles E. Justus, member of the finance committee of the Ohio legislature, who added that the present tax could even have been lowered if it had been requested.

Some exhibitors in Ohio evidently had obtained the impression that Governor Davey intended to raise the state gross admissions tax of three per cent.

FOUR A'S CHALLENGES IATSE INROADS; NEW TALENT DRIVE SEEN IN ALL FIELDS

Screen Guild's Bid for Closed Shop Seen First Move to Block Union's Drive for Power and 100,000 Members

Component organizations of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, affiliation of screen, stage and radio talent guilds, prepared this week to meet the challenge of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees implied in the announcement by the executive committee of the International that a planned expansion of activity would include all branches of the amusement industry not now in its fold.

To queries concerning further details of his plans George Browne, IATSE president, said, "Our statement is: We will take in all branches of the business. They can make whatever they like of it." His statement was made following a meeting of the International executive committee in San Antonio.

A move by the Screen Actors Guild in Hollywood to enforce a closed shop for extras in west coast studios in place of the "guild shop" which has obtained until now under the Guild contract with producers, was taken as the first definite action to circumvent the IATSE plans.

"Astonished and disturbed" by the reiterated claims of the IATSE. Frank Gilmore, president of the AAAA, said he did not believe the International membership would approve the claims if presented at the annual convention. He said he "could not understand how the claims of the IATSE could be presented seriously."

Would Give IATSE 100,000

The International now includes projectionists, cameramen, sound technicians, scenic artists, carpenters, laboratory workers, makeup artists, and exchange employees, comprising a membership of 60,000. Mr. Browne said extension of jurisdiction would increase the membership to 100,000. The Alliance committee, he added, believed that leadership over performers "should be ours" because, as he put it before the committee took formal action, "we feel that since we are the parent of theatrical organizations and the strongest, these people quite properly belong with us."

Union with other branches of the industry's workers would be accomplished, if at all, by a large-scale consolidation, not upon an individual basis, Mr. Browne elaborated, explaining that his organization aimed at an amalgamation with other groups, such as the Screen Actors Guild and Actors Equity, to give all greater bargaining power.

Convention in Cleveland

The committee voted for Cleveland as the site of the group's bi-annual convention, opening June 5th, and voted to require union operators for 16 mm. projectors wherever used for commercial purposes.

The Screen Actors Guild announced its move for a closed shop for extras in letters to producers signatories of the 10-year guild contract advising them that, unless objections are raised, the membership books of the Junior Guild will be closed to California residents. Under the contemplated procedure junior members admitted in other states could not join in California unless with the special approval of the board of directors.

Junior members were advised of the move at a mass meeting Sunday night by Franchot Tone, senior board member. Mr. Tone cited the prevailing unemployment in the extra ranks. The Guild has 12,500 members enrolled, but the number is being reduced through delinquencies, withdrawals and the rule obviating the necessity for juvenile players enrolling.

Closed Shop Promised

It had been reported in Hollywood that the first move of the IATSE in the extra ranks was to be an invitation to join with the promise of a closed shop. Under the Guild contract, obtained last year, with the aid of the IATSE, no closed shop is granted, but a stipulation is made that all extras must be Guild members and that the Guild must keep its membership books open at all times.

Mr. Browne and William Bioff, his west coast aide, were to go to Chicago from San Antonio and then directly to Hollywood.

AFL PROMISES ITS BUSINESS TO EMPLOYERS

One of the highlight decisions made by the American Federation of Labor at its executive board sessions in Miami, was the unprecedented attempt to organize the purchasing power of its millions of members and place it behind the products employing them, to the hoped-for exclusion of products of non-AFL concerns.

The Federation has always urged its members to support AFL-made products, but this new effort involves a promise to line up the $6,000,000,000 purchasing power of Federation Laborites for their employers.

The AFL is seeking, in effect, a quid pro quo agreement with as many manufacturers as possible to sign contracts with its affiliated unions in return for a guaranteed market. The inference, it appears, is for the employers to abandon CIO union agreements.

The first step in the drive will be a "momentous national education campaign," according to William Green, AFL president.

Hy Daab Resigns as Columbia Ad Director

Hyatt Daab, director of publicity and advertising for Columbia Pictures, for the past 18 months, resigned last Friday. No successor has as yet been selected.

Mr. Daab was formerly advertising and publicity director of RKO Radio and, then served on the Jersey City Journal and the New York Telegram. Prior to joining Columbia, he was in the publicity department of Warner Brothers.

New York Regents Appoint Committee To Handle Appeals

While no public statement has been forthcoming from the New York State Department of Education, it was learned this week that the Board of Regents, at their meeting last week had named a permanent subcommittee to review appeals when original application for a license is refused by the Motion Picture Division.

Members Named

Susan Brandeis of New York, first woman to be a member of the Board of Regents, constiuting the University of the State of New York, and daughter of U. S. Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis, is one member. Another is George J. Ryan of Flushing, president of New York City's Board of Education. The third appointee is Gordon Knox Bell of New York, elected last week by the Legislature to fill out former Chancellor James Byrne's term.

Ex-officio members of the committee, with full power to attend and engage in deliberations are Chancellor Thomas J. Mangan and Vice-Chancellor William J. Wallin.

Projection rooms of the Department of Education's picture division will likely serve as review rooms for the Regents' sub-committee. Two projection rooms are available in the State Office Building, 80 Centre Street, New York City.

"Nocturno" Appeal Disapproved

The board has disapproved the appeal of Gustave Schwab on "Nocturno," German film previously denied a license by Irwin Esmond, head of the New York censor board.

It was pointed out unofficially that since establishment of the Legion of Decency and self-imposed enactment of the Production Code by leading film producers, avoidance of such objectionable settings and portrayals of immorality is general. Hence, it was said, the Department of Education could not very well license foreign made films containing such material when American producers voluntarily avoid breaches of the Code.

The board is understood to have taken no action on the American Committee for Maternal Welfare's appeal on "The Birth of a Baby." It is believed the decision will be made at the board's March meeting.

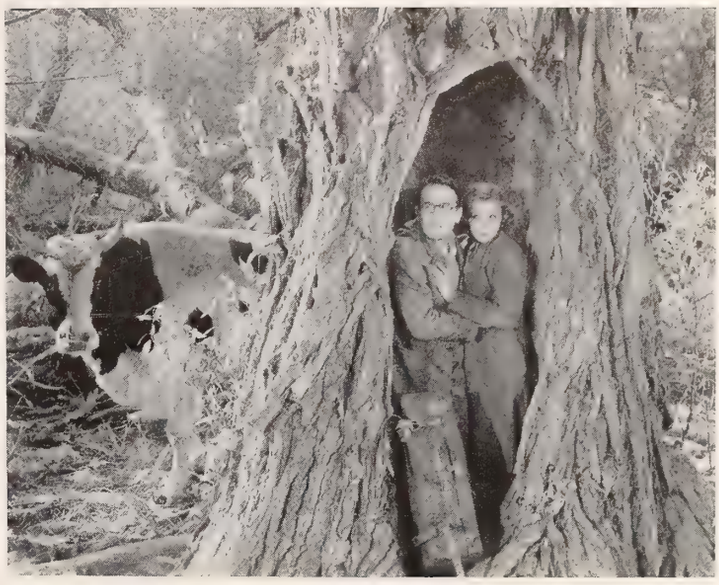
Meanwhile, in Portland, Ore., the request of W. G. Smith of Los Angeles and the Jewel Productions company for a temporary restraining order against the City of Portland to prevent city officials from banning the exhibition of the foreign-made motion picture, "Ecstasy," was taken under advisement in United States district court by Judge Claude McColloch.

In the arguments presented at the hearing on an order to show cause why the temporary restraining order should not be issued, the counsel for the plaintiff charged that the city council of Portland had nullified the censorship ordinance on appeal by refusing to grant a hearing on appeal as demanded at the time the censor board refused to grant a permit for the showing of the film. Both sides are to submit briefs in the controversy.

"PROFESSOR BEWARE" IS

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

A HERALD Pictorial Preview



NOT in several years have the annual polls which indicate a picture personality's draw at the box office listed Harold Lloyd high in their tabulations. There is a definite reason, which actual figures prove for this circumstance. Mr. Lloyd, unlike more active popular stars, makes but one picture every two years. Yet each of his last three starring films, "Movie Crazy," "The Cat's Paw" and "The Milky Way," grossed approximately $1,700,000.

Believing that no other than himself could give a better answer, I asked Mr. Lloyd why he waited so long between pictures. He said, "I'd like to be in more pictures—if I could get suitable stories. It's no longer possible to make comedies with a hodge-podge of gags. Story values are highly essential. If I can't get something I'd like to do, something I feel that those who pay to see me would like also, I prefer to wait until the right thing comes along. I'm confident we have the right thing in 'Professor Beware.' For quick description, in the picture we are following the old silent technique of fast action and swift moving farce, blending all with up-to-the-minute story, dialogue, production and musical values. The show is virtually a transcontinental chase beginning in Los Angeles and ending in New York. A smattering of romance is being tossed in, but, basically, the entire flavor is comic. The action thrills, missing from some of my recent pictures, will blossom again. It will have a slam bang finale."

What happens, in the manner above described, details the experience of a mousey museum clerk who believes that he and a girl whom he meets resemble "Neferus" and "Anebi," the principals in a love story of ancient Egypt. The final tablet in his collection is broken and, unable to decipher the hieroglyphics, he cannot learn the lovers' fate. Ensues a cross country chase in quest of a solution to the riddle with the modern hero and heroine meeting many weird adventures.

BIENNIAL LLOYD COMEDY

He becomes mixed up with a pair of honeymooners in a trailer; both sleeping on the desert. The girl dreams of romance, the boy fights against it. Escaping her, he is trapped in a cattle car and trampled by steers, tossed into jail; both are frozen in a refrigerator car. Married, the boy is the object of parental wrath. But he leads a mob to rescue his bride, attacks the wrong yacht, but finally, against backgrounds of chills and thrills, wins his bride and his father-in-law's approval.

"Professor Beware," which marks Mr. Lloyd's return to the rank of independent producer and in which he is investing $1,000,000, will not be a one-man show. Never fearful of sharing the limelight, the producer-star has surrounded himself with a cast of competent players. Some of the comics who will be seen with him are Raymond Walburn, Lionel Stander, William Frawley, Sterling Holloway, Cora Witherspoon, Guinn Williams and Etienne Girardot, all of whom have demonstrated their abilities in many popular pictures. The roster of character actors includes Montagu Love, Thurston Hall, Ward Bond, Mary Lou Lender, George Humbert, Christian Rub, Wright Kramer and Tom Herbert. The girl, "Anebi," Phyllis Welch, is new to the screen. A graduate of "little" and "summer" theatres, Broadway, where she appeared in "A Slight Case of Murder" and with Ina Claire and Osgood Perkins, and radio broadcasting, where she was featured with Lawrence Tibbett and Jessica Dragonette, Mr. Lloyd tested hundreds of candidates before he selected her.

The director, Elliott Nugent, boasts a long succession of comedy hits, the most recent being "It's All Yours." "And So They Were Married," "College Scandal" and "Three Cornered Moon" are well remembered.

"Movie Crazy" and "The Cat's Paw" were Motion Picture Herald Box Office Champions. Mr. Lloyd is putting into "Professor Beware," which Paramount will distribute, the entertainment and commercial essentials which he believes will cause his latest film to be similarly honored in the months subsequent to June 1, 1938.

MUSICIANS TURN TO HOLLYWOOD TO REDUCE UNEMPLOYMENT RANKS

Petrillo, a Factor in Coup Over Broadcasting, Plans Conferences on Coast with Joseph Weber and Producers

Armed with their victory over broadcasters, the American Federation of Musicians now is more insistent than ever in its demands on the motion picture industry to put thousands of musicians back to work, both in theatres and Hollywood studios.

The recent enactment of a contract between the AFM and virtually all of the nation's 518 radio stations practically forcing radio to employ more musicians and to limit radio broadcasting of recordings, will add some $2,013,000 yearly to the pay checks of the country's musicians, and the union will now turn its concentrated attention to the picture buisness.

The AFM's quarter-of-a-million dollar picketing campaign in New York to force reemployment of musicians in theatres which formerly had live music, displacing it after sound films, has been a complete failure. Now other means are to be taken, nationally, by the AFM, to alleviate the unemployment situation in its ranks. The exact nature of the new approach, however, is vague at this time.

Petrillo a Factor

James C. Petrillo, head of the Chicago division of the American Federation of Musicians, and a power in organization of musicians, was largely instrumental in effecting the coup in broadcasting, by means of which employment is spread, through the licensing of companies making musical recordings for broadcast purposes. These companies, according to Mr. Petrillo, will not deal with radio stations that refuse to hire musicians during periods when recordings are being broadcast. The pact is for two years. All stations involved, Mr. Petrillo added, have agreed not to reduce amounts paid to musicians, even if they broadcast only a small number of recordings.

Having now won the concessions in the broadcasting field, "Hollywood is next," the Chicago leader told the press, adding the Musicians' Federation is now determined to place orchestras in motion picture theatres.

"Sound films since their inception have taken the place of 22,000 musicians formerly employed in theatres," he asserted. "In the past few years, instead of men working in theatres, about 300 in Hollywood are doing this entire job," through the music they play for sound tracks on pictures.

He charges that producers in Hollywood are making further savings in musicians' salaries by removing sound track from old films to use as accompaniment for new pictures.

Going to Hollywood

Mr. Petrillo will leave Chicago on March 1st for Hollywood to begin a study of the situation with the hope that wholesale reemployment of musicians will result someplace along the line in the film industry.

Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, also will go to Hollywood shortly with the same view, following his attendance at the Miami sessions of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Weber is expected to spend several weeks conferring with the producers and to ask them to adopt a plan to absorb unemployed musicians. He hopes to return to Florida in June to the annual convention of the American Federation of musicians with a concrete working arrangement.

As a result of the conversion of musicians' labor chiefs on the studio center, Pat Casey, union representative of the major producers, left this week for the west coast to determine what the union heads have in mind.

Mr. Petrillo will bring to Hollywood with him some ideas enforced in his Chicago bailiwick, where spreading of employment for musicians now is being effected by de luxe houses granting one day off a week, with full pay, to musicians, who on that day are replaced by unemployed substitutes.

His idea is understood to revolve around the employment of musicians in film theatres during the playing of musical films, regardless of whether they actually work or not in the orchestra pit. First to be approached, it is said, would be the circuits affiliated with major producers, Mr. Petrillo attempting to have the theatres hire a number of musicians in proportion to the number employed in the musical film. House orchestras should be employed for overtures to roadshow pictures, according to Mr. Petrillo.

Stokowski Optimistic

An even more optimistic prediction for the future of musicians in motion pictures is expressed by Leopold Stokowski, who occasionally forsakes his concert conducting for a musical job in pictures. Mr. Stokowski sees some 18,000 musicians going to work in film houses to control the tunes in new films coming up.

Mr. Stokowski had just completed a trick orchestral job and predicted that it would be the starter in opening an entirely new field for depression-ridden musicians.

He credited Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse with the developments which he believes eventually will result in 18,000 jobs for musical men, basing his calculation on the employment of one musician in each of his estimated 18,000 theatres in operation. However, in his figuring, there are some 15,000 houses, and not 18,000, now running.

"Every movie theatre in America will have to have a first-class musician at work, controlling the sound equipment," he said. "Otherwise, forthcoming musical films won't sound right on the screen and the public will be dissatisfied."

Mr. Stokowski has just produced the musical accompaniment for the new Mickey House picture, entitled "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," which, when released next fall, will have two kinds of prints, one for use in "ordinary" movie houses, and the other for showing in those theatres equipped with sound for reproducing perfectly the music of a full symphony orchestra.

"There are only a handful of the latter kind of theatres in the whole country," Mr. Stokowski said. "Our new picture admittedly is an experiment, but it is one film which will be really satisfactory only in those houses properly equipped and staffed to handle it. The other print of the sound track, for use in the majority of theatres, sounds like an imitation of the one which will be shown in really modern theatres."

He said that other studios also were beginning to produce sound pictures of high fidelity, which are "ruined" in the unreeling in a vast majority of theatres.

"The proper sound amplifiers are necessary, of course, but the man at the controls is more necessary still. Most theatres control the sound from the projection booth, where the operator can't hear it properly and wouldn't know what to do about it if he could.

"What there must be in every movie house is a musician sitting in the audience with the sound control dials before him.

"He must watch the picture before him, and he must play upon his amplifiers as he would an organ."

Test Suit in New York

A test suit by 11 members of Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians, in New York, against the local to determine the union's right to limit the number of jobs which can be held by members earning more than $54 weekly, was set down for an immediate trial in New York Supreme Court by Justice Thomas F. Noonan.

The local agreed to enforce the resolution until after decision has been rendered and the plaintiffs withdrew their motion for a preliminary injunction. The resolution was adopted by a referendum vote of 2,780 to 1,945 December 29 and was scheduled to take effect February 15. Permission to bring the suit for the purpose of deciding the legality of the resolution was granted by the union.

Claimed Unconstitutional

The union-member petitioners contend that price scales and working conditions are fixed by the constitution and by-laws and can be amended only in the manner provided in the constitution. It is alleged that the resolution attempts to avoid these requirements and that the limitation of one job to a member will fail of its purpose to spread employment.

The plaintiffs are David Grupp, Sam Borodkin, Harry Urbout, Charles Dell Staigers, Norman Weiner, David D. Voorhees, Mitchell Miller, Max Manne, Harry Glantz, Sam Feinsmith and Gilbert Koerner.

CIRCUIT ASKS FOR "HATS OFF"

The Loew's circuit in New York is asking women customers to "please remove your hats." Each house shows a short trailer reproducing a letter from a patron in the borough in which the theatre is located. The letter explains why the wearing of headgear interferes with the enjoyment of the picture.

Since the request comes from a patron and not the management, it is believed offense is avoided.

CIVIC GROUPS JOIN IN LEGISLATIVE MOVE ON DOUBLE BILLS IN CHICAGO

Committee Claiming Support of 50,000 Homes Asks City Council Limit Shows to 2½ Hours as Health Measure

Double features, the subject of numerous national and local polls and controversies, are being attacked on a new basis in Chicago, where militant groups now are pressing for adoption of a city ordinance, previously proposed, which would limit all motion picture performances to two and one-half hours.

The ordinance, which would be the first anti-dual legislation of its kind in the country, is being demanded by mothers and teachers on the ground that dual bills last from three to five hours and endanger the health of children.

A committee, said to represent 150,000 school children and 50,000 homes in the city, descended late last week upon City Hall and lodged a protest with Herman N. Bundesen, commissioner of health. The group was headed by Mrs. W. H. Ross, state visual education chairman of the Illinois Congress of the Parent-Teacher Association; Mrs. Louis Perlman, recreation chairman of district 24; Mrs. Charles Balch, state recreation chairman; Mrs. B. F. Rold, of the state visual education committee; Mrs. W. R. Gross, president of the High School Council, district 23-24, and Mrs. G. A. Millard, of the North Side Council.

Health Authorities Consulted

Many health and child-study authorities were consulted and all agreed that it is a hardship on a child to sit through a four-and-a-half-hour show, the committee informed Dr. Bundesen.

Although he would not disclose his own stand, Dr. Bundesen said he had submitted an opinion to the sub-committee of the city council.

Chicago's film row, however, appears to be of the opinion that the duals problem is getting too much attention.

When the clubwomen descended upon the City Hall and asked the aid and support of Dr. Bundesen, and also Aldermen Terrell and Lindell, the local press hailed the event in glowing headlines. Meetings for public discussion were promised by the city officials. The first was scheduled for last Friday at the LaSalle hotel, but it didn't come about. The reasons given are several.

Some say that the attitude of some of the clubwomen, supposedly allied with the anti-dual groups, was not in accord with the leaders handling the situation. Others held that the present plan for having the city outlaw duals on a health basis was too flimsy. The bickering continues.

From City Hall it is reported that it is legally possible for the city council to ban long shows through authority vested in them by various statutes. Theatremen say these powers are also broad enough to bring about regulation in other directions.

Local exhibitors personally are almost 100 per cent against double features, but from a business standpoint many think they are the only means of getting needed revenue. The Balaban & Katz circuit is the dominant leader in the fight for the duals. The independents, Warners, Essaness and several other large circuits are strongly opposed. The independents and smaller circuits are said to be the moving factor in the current agitation.

The newspapers have been quick to turn the spotlight on any action, but none has moved editorially to back a fight against the double features. Independent exhibitors point out that B. & K. is the heaviest advertiser in the theatrical pages. One newspaper had a "war on duals" in mind some weeks ago, it is learned, but found that a large proportion of its circulation seemed to want "two pictures for a quarter".

The Better Films Council of Chicago has not joined the protests against duals. Its leaders feel that the time to act is when they have prepared a plan that will not fail.

In a telegram of support to the Chicago PTA, Samuel Goldwyn, strong opponent of duals, said, "If the Parent-Teacher Associations of America will raise their mighty voice in protest, I firmly believe that the double bills will be destroyed. I believe that the double bill programs are indeed harmful to our children and feel, as a parent, when a child sits from four to five hours in a theatre it is an unhealthy situation."

Mr. Goldwyn also took occasion to criticize chance games in theatres.

In conclusion, Mr. Goldwyn wired: "The Legion of Decency did the motion picture industry the greatest favor in its history, up to that time, by pointing out that some producers were exceeding the bounds of good taste and endangering our great industry. I believe that the Parent-Teacher Associations will do the theatre owners of America an even greater service if they will prosecute to success this great crusade that you have launched in Chicago."

A similar movement was predicted for the Los Angeles area by Mrs. R. T. Goodhue of Glendale, Cal., chairman of the Los Angeles County Parent-Teacher Association.

James Coston, head of Warner theatres in Chicago, and Emil Stern, of Essaness, both have said publicly that they would be willing to drop duals if other theatres would do the same.

Plans of Allied Theatres and other independents to file suit against B. & K. on monopoly charges have been postponed and no action is expected until after the city council has acted on the dual bill question.

In Evanston, a suburb, action based upon the health argument met with no apparent success. The council's health committee said it had no jurisdiction.

On the exhibitors side, in Kansas City John Wolfberg, operator of the Strand, adopted a one feature policy but, after a week's trial, supporting the move in his advertisements, returned to dual bills.

MGM ABANDONS PLAN TO MAKE 3-REELERS

The plan of the short subject department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to produce three-reel featurettes as a means of combating double feature bills was vetoed by the sales department this week with the result the company's shorts will be confined to one and two-reelers, during the 1938-39 season.

The market can not absorb three-reel subjects because of the prevalence of dual bills, the sales department pointed out. The 1938-39 schedule, therefore, will remain about the same numerically, as this year during which 82 shorts are to be released.

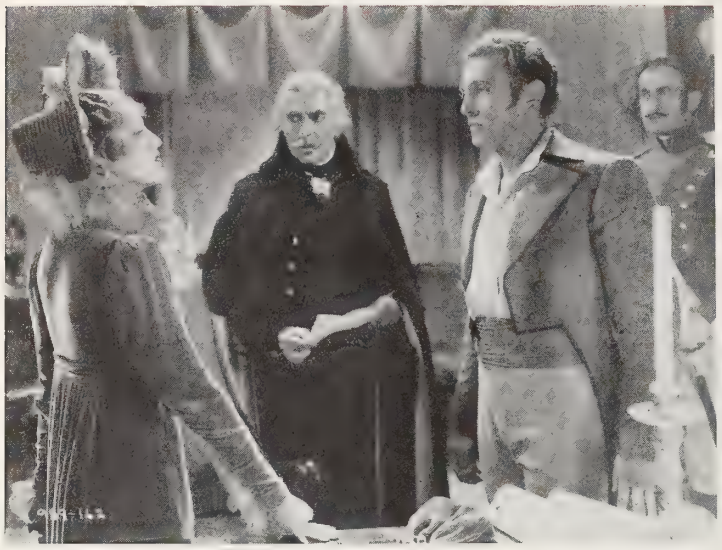
35 Roxy Payments Granted by Court, Closing Case

Francis G. Caffey, United States district court judge in New York, this week granted additional allowances of $215,440 to attorneys, creditors' committees and witnesses for services in the Roxy reorganization.

The order, together with $61,000 for disbursements previously awarded, disposed of 35 petitions which asked for a total of $636,800 and virtually marked the end of reorganization proceedings for the Roxy.

The court said the allowance petitions were "modest, or at least not unreasonable" and then pointed out that $287,000 was available for distribution. "A ratable apportionment of payment" might be necessary, Mr. Caffey said.

Howard S. Cullman, trustee, was instructed to set aside $30,000 as a reserve for possible payment to George W. Garrison, and Roemer-Kenny, Company, Inc., if their appeal is sustained. The court refused their request for $528,692 brokerage fees for alleged negotiation of the sale of the Roxy under a reorganization plan to Twentieth Century-Fox.



The largest award, $47,500, went to White & Case, attorneys for the Pound first mortgage bondholders' protective committee, proponents of the plan of reorganization. They had asked $65,000. The committee itself received $15,000 out of $23,318 requested, plus an additional $1,176 for disbursements.

Mr. Cullman was granted $37,500, in addition to $80,000 previously received. He had requested $120,000 additional. Proskauer, Rose & Paskus, his attorneys, received $33,000 out of $50,000 requested. Kramer & Kleinfeld, counsel for Class A stockholders who were not permitted to share in the reorganization, received $1,800 for their services. They had asked $10,000. Marshall, Bratter & Seligman, attorneys for the Tipton bondholders' protective committee, principal opponents of the plan, asked for $10,000 and received $3,750.

Miss Crewe Returns to Journal

Miss Regina Crewe, who severed her connection as motion picture editor of the New York Journal-American a month ago, will return to the newspaper in the same capacity next Monday.

Sonja Henie, Twentieth Century-Fox star, plans an airplane flight to Norway with Dick Merrill as pilot next summer. Officials of the Bureau of Air Commerce indicated they would not forbid the flight providing the plane had a good chance of arriving safely. No application for a permit to make the flight has been filed with the bureau as yet.

"SNOW WHITE" REACHES THEATRES IN THE FIELD, SETTING NEW RECORDS

Railroad Runs Excursion Trains to Reading, Pennsylvania; Tennessee Governor Parades from State House to Theatre

Leaving behind a series of shattered records for its test run at New York's Music Hall, where 800,000 paid $532,000 in admissions in five weeks, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" this week finally reached the field. From the box office registers of the first dozen theatres reporting, it appears that this world's first feature length cartoon is going on to unprecedented business.

The fifth and final week at the Music Hall brought 163,000 persons to the box office, paying $101,000, showing the steady strength since the opening week's attendance of 175,000 and a gross of $108,000.

From Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Duluth, Indianapolis, Louisville, Minneapolis, Nashville, Norfolk, Oklahoma, Pinehurst, Providence, Reading, Richmond, Stamford and Washington came wires of unprecedented box office returns or advance sales.

Extra shows, early-daily openings, single-bill policies, long lines and emergency calls for police to prevent stampedes, was the order in the first-run field showings.

61 Policemen Called

Sixty-one policemen were called to handle the crowds at the Hippodrome in Baltimore. The customers paid $22,000 in a week, the first three days alone exceeding any previous full week. Matinee business was heaviest. The throng at one time was out of control for four hours. Clothing, hats, gloves and jewelry were found in the street. Records were set for all RKO theatres in the Boston area, and the cartoon was held for a second week. On Saturday 17,540 attended, 30 per cent higher than any previous Saturday, and 12,600 came on Sunday. The opening day record was broken; so was the high for the first four days, and the cartoon ended on a seven-day gross of $42,000, another record. John Curran, RKO's exploiteer, said he had to show credentials to police to get through the crowds to reach the office.

Congratulates Opposition

Something new to motion picture advertising in Chicago was witnessed when Balaban and Katz, operating first-run theatres in opposition, inserted paid advertisements in local newspapers congratulating the Palace for playing the Disney picture.

"Snow White's" business at Cleveland's Albee started off to a 20 per cent increase, last Saturday, and finished with a $25,000 gross for a record in attendance and receipts for a non-holiday week.

The Cleveland Press started off an editorial with "We Want Snow White," because, "Even if our appreciation of art is held in no flattering esteem, we still have our curiosity." Cleveland's RKO exchange reported that exhibitors seeking Sunday playdates declared they were willing to take the consequences—presumably in fines—if arrested for violating the "Blue Laws."

The Granada in Duluth, Minn., gave RKO a four-week guarantee, starting March 11th.

The gross in the Indiana, Indianapolis, for last Saturday exceeded that of any picture on record there. Despite rain and fog that followed, four days' gross reached about $16,000, nearly three times greater than the previous week's picture.

Ninth Week at Carthay Circle

"Snow White" continued in its ninth week at the test run at the Carthay Circle in Los Angeles. In the eighth week, the picture grossed $12,500, higher than the fifth, sixth and seventh weeks.

At the Rialto in Louisville the opening business, last weekend, exceeded by 35 per cent that of any RKO picture ever to play the theatre, and the picture was expected to finish the week with a $16,000 gross. The Courier-Journal and Evening Times had an eight-page "Snow White" section.

RKO's Orpheum reported wide interest in the March 4th opening of the two weeks' minimum booking.

Governor Parades

Nashville's Knickerbocker reported a new house record for Thursday and Friday, exceeding any Saturday. Newspapers featured pictures of one patron age nine, and another, 91, standing in line. Dewey Mousson, manager, reported the house sold out eight minutes after opening. Gordon Browing, governor of the state, paraded with dwarfs from the State House to the theatre.

In New York, RKO's circuit reported receipt of the following national booking dates for "Snow White" on its own circuit:

Palace, Rochester, Feb. 18; Keith, Syracuse, Feb. 18; Proctor's, Newark, Feb. 18; Keith, Dayton, Ohio, Feb. 18; Keith, Lowell, Mass., Feb. 18; Palace, Chicago, Mar. 4; Hillstreet and Pantages, Los Angeles, following road show at Carthay Circle; Palace, Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 25; Mainstreet, Kansas City, Feb. 25; Orpheum, New Orleans, Feb. 24; Brandeis, Omaha, Mar. 3; Iowa, Cedar Rapids, Mar. 4; Orpheum, Davenport, Iowa, Mar. 11; Orpheum, Sioux City, Mar. 3; Orpheum, Minneapolis, Feb. 18; Orpheum, St. Paul, Mar. 4; Orpheum, Denver, Feb. 18; Golden Gate, San Francisco, Mar. 2; Lincoln, Trenton, Feb. 18, and State, New Brunswick, Feb. 18.

The Broadway RKO Palace and Brooklyn RKO Albee scheduled 10 showings, minute-for-minute, of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" for Saturday, starting at 9 A. M.

For the first time in their history the Newport and Colley theatres in Norfolk, Va., will play a picture day and date, opening on Saturday.

Advance demands in Oklahoma City resulted in three extra midnight showings at the Criterion, preceding the opening. The management reported business at each performance exceeded the average full day's intake.

Eight-year attendance marks of the Caroline theatre in Pinehurst, N. C., were broken this week, though it was off-season at the resort city.

The Albee, Providence, in four days established a better record than any full week. Each day was better than the preceding.

Railroad Excursions

At the Park, Reading, Pa., on the opening, last Friday, the cartoon set a new all-time high, and Saturday and Sunday were above the average full week. The Reading Railroad is operating special excursion trains, at cut rates, from ten cities. The managers extended its booking to four weeks.

Richmond, Va., broke all-time Saturday, Sunday and four-day records, at the Byrd theatre, and a run of three weeks was anticipated.

The Palace theatre, Stamford, Conn., reported heavy advance sales Saturday.

Keith's, Washington, broke its house records. The second Saturday was greater than the first. Gross the first week was $17,500.

Ralph Rolan, RKO executive, who returned this week from Cleveland, said he had been advised by branch managers that for the next five years they expect to gross from $5,000 to $15,000 in each territory on holiday repeats on the Disney feature.

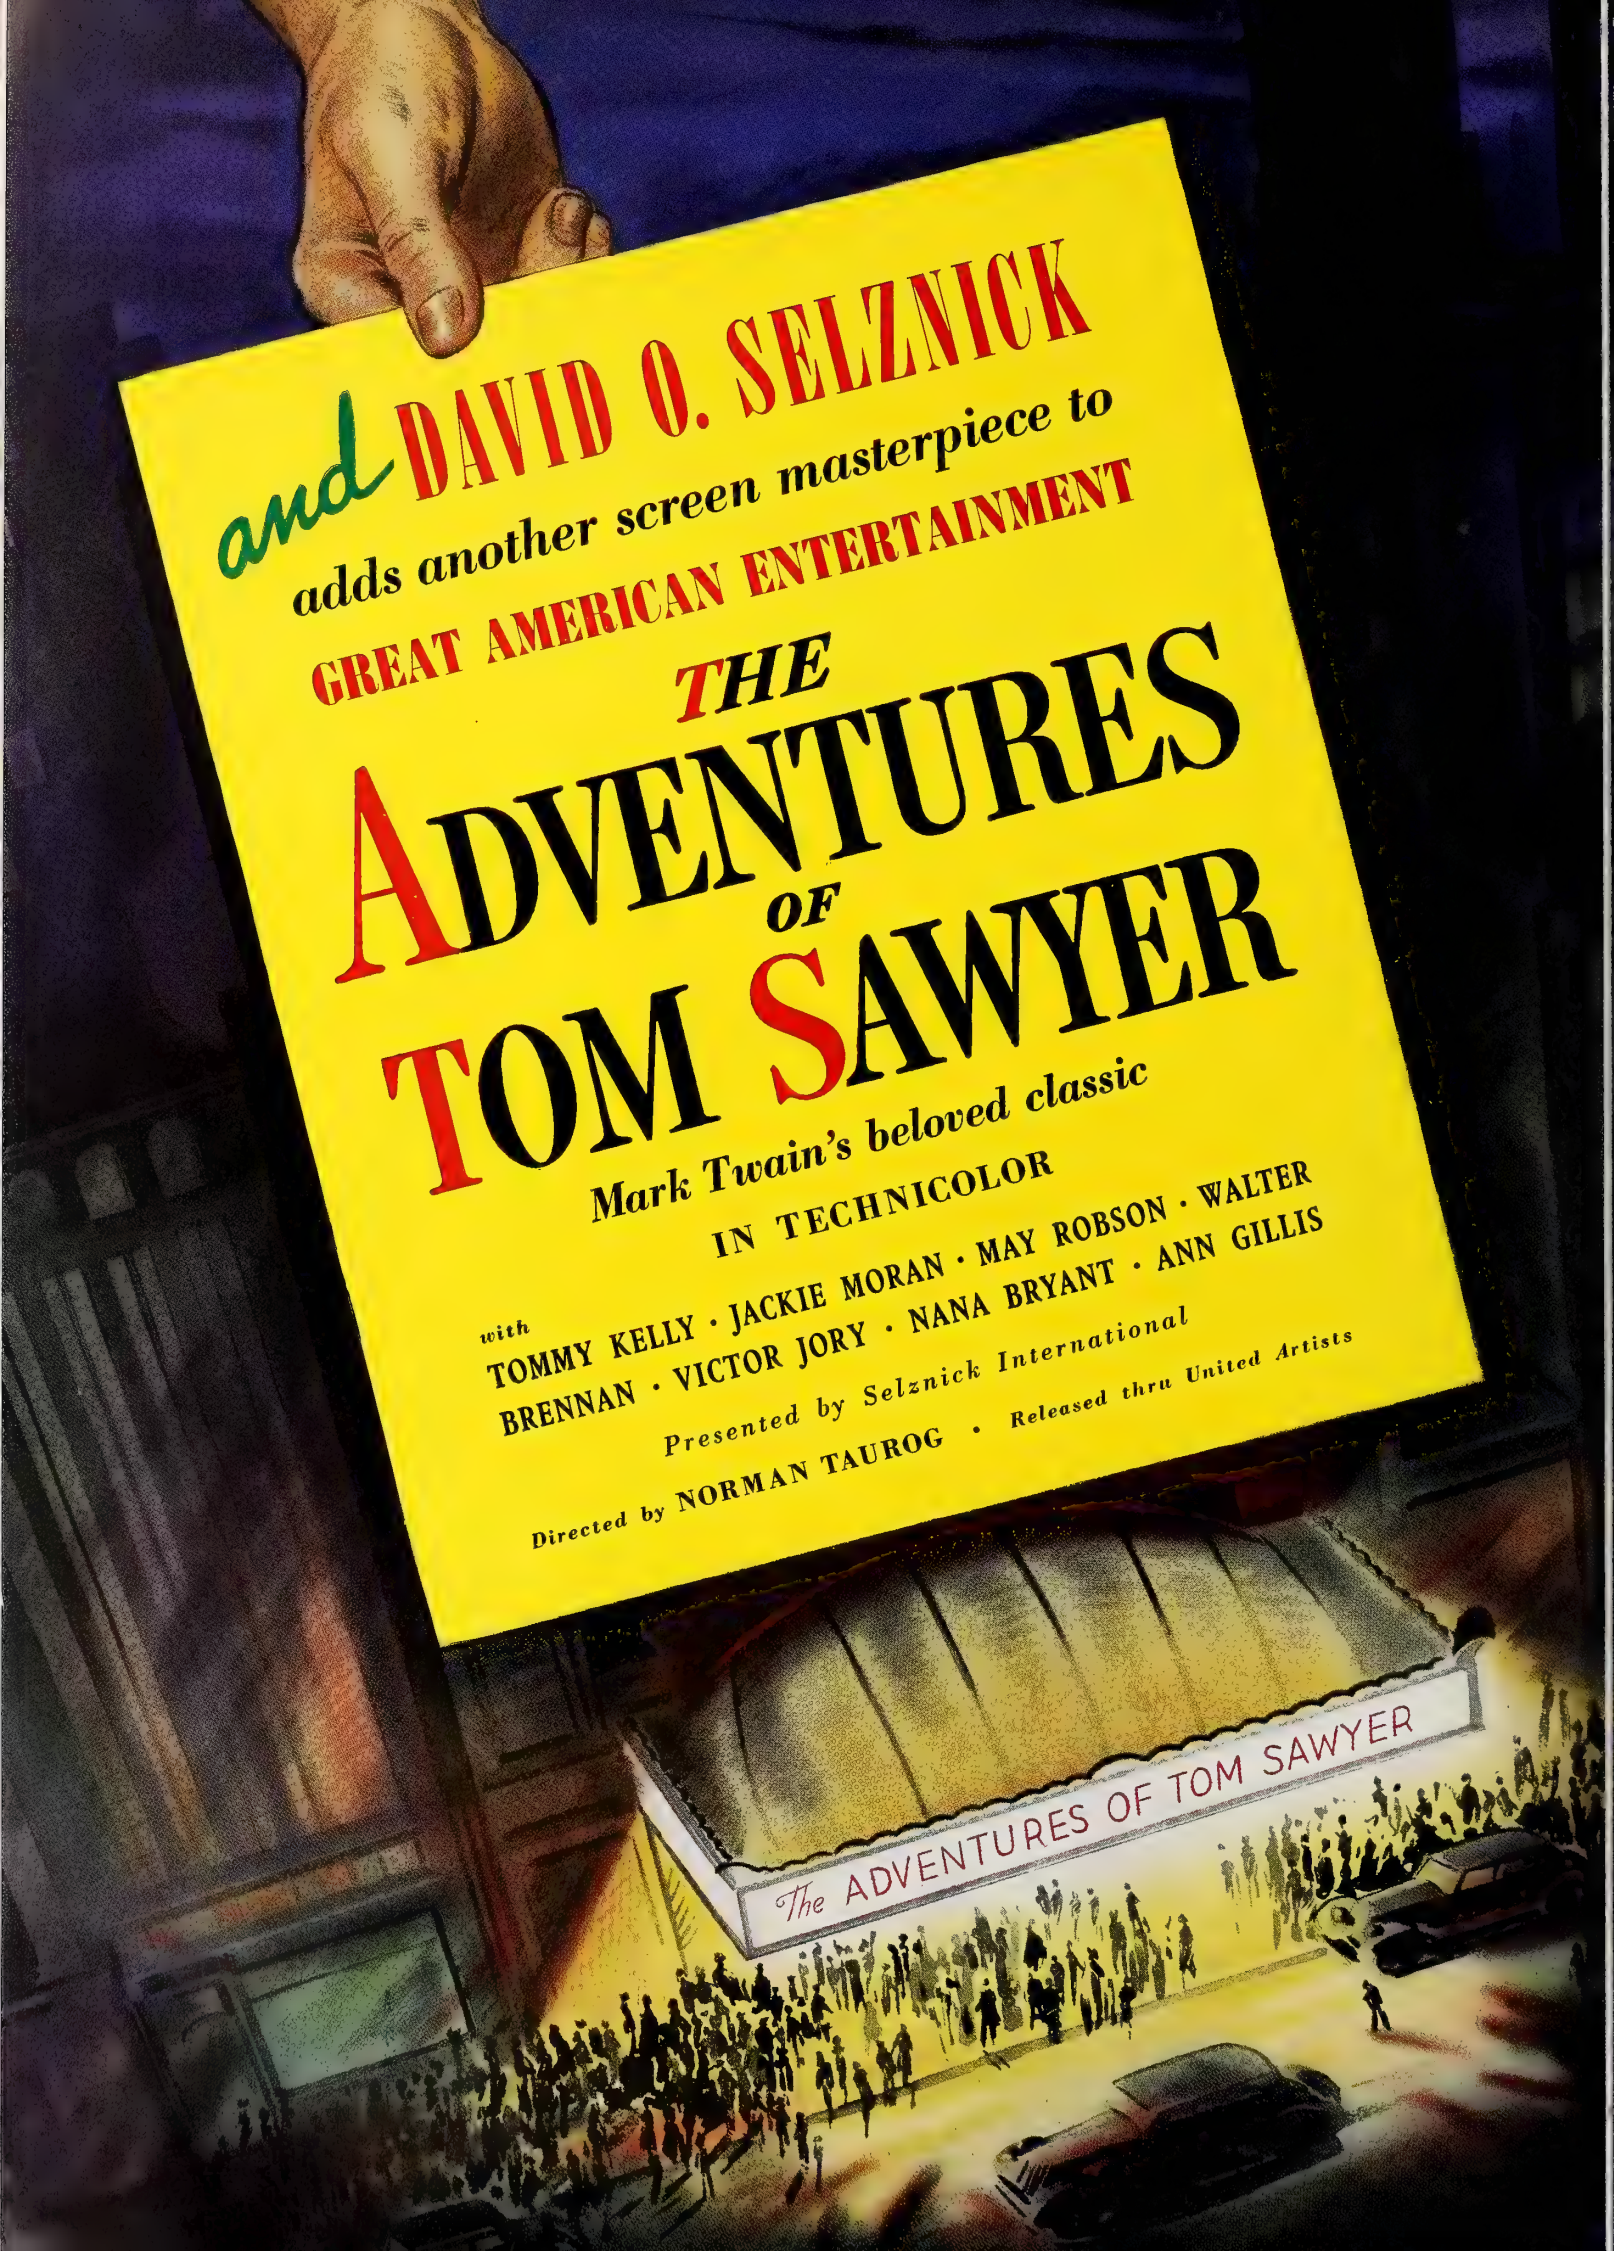
A world gross in excess of $5,000,000, possibly up to $7,000,000, is anticipated by the RKO sales department, based on an expected gross in the United States of more than $3,000,000.

RKO Radio is supplying theatres with a special short subject of the crowds which stormed the Music Hall. These Pathe News Music Hall trailers are being screened in addition to the regular trailers.

MPPA PROTEST BRINGS 'GOSSIPER' DISMISSAL

The first "crack-down" by the Producers Association on a radio gossiper was disclosed Wednesday when the studio credentials of Bob Garrett, conductor of a "Pick of the Pictures" program on KEHA, were revoked following a broadcast in which he told his audience that studio officials of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer had used the body of an actor who had died before completion of a picture to complete a final sequence.

Jack Gross, station manager, immediately dismissed Mr. Garrett after being notified of the MPPA action by Tom S. Pettey, producers' public relations director.



The broadcast occurred on January 23rd. Mr. Garrett said Robert McWade, having died before shooting of his final scene in "Of Human Hearts" was propped up before the camera for the take. "When you see the picture you will see the back of a dead man's head," he told his listeners.

Mr. Garret explained to Mr. Pettey that his information came from a tipster on the MGM lot and that he had considered it authentic.

Dinner for Ben Cohen

Ben Cohen will be honored Saturday at a dinner at the Hotel Taft, New Haven, Conn., on the eve of his departure to supervise a new Loew theatre now under construction in Bombay, India. Mr. Cohen, for several years manager of the College theatre in New Haven, will sail on the Conte di Savoia March 2nd for Italy where he will spend eight days before continuing to India. Edward Kiebanoff is chairman of a large committee of men from theatre and other fields arranging the dinner. Erle Wright is preparing an art souvenir for distribution to guests at the dinner.

SCHENCK-SELZNICK RIFT REVIVES ISSUE OF "OUTSIDE PICTURE" CLAUSE

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER

Relationship of the artists' representative, or talent agent, to the high cost of motion picture production was thrown into sharp relief against the broad background of contributory causes now being studied by company executives, mindful of reported recessions in box office grosses, when Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Myron Selznick, head of the agency bearing his name, abruptly terminated long harmonious negotiations and told their stories to the press.

A Statement and a Reply

Explaining his action in barring Selznick representatives from the studio lot, Mr. Schenck declared, "Consistently the Selznick agency has sought to pyramid the salaries of the players they handle to such a point that to meet the demands would be ruinous not only to this studio but to the industry as a whole."

Mr. Selznick promptly replied, "To the outside world it must appear incredible that the highest-paid men in the world should open the question of high salaries. I confess—indeed, I am proud—that I have substantially increased the salaries of my clients. That is precisely what I am paid to do."

These statements, uttered February 4th, failed to stir the rank and file of Hollywood personnel accustomed, as the trade beyond the mountains is not, to loud but seldom significant reverberations from the always active salary-adjustment sector. Responsible members of the industry saw in the rift, however, a possible beginning of a movement which may spread, involving other studios and other agents, developing ultimately into a struggle of "show down" proportions for control of the vital talent-cost factor of production budgets. With the Schenck-Selznick rift, at first expected to endure but a day or two as in most cases in kind, now a fortnight old and seemingly destinued to continue indefinitely in statu quo, important producers and agents alike are watching the situation closely for developments which may forecast a swing of influence from one side to the other.

The "Outside Picture" Clause

Following issuance of the statements quoted in part above, Mr. Schenck and Mr. Selznick adopted a policy of sustained silence with respect to the immediate cause of the rift and to the progress of negotiations, if any, looking toward resumption of relations. It is learned on good authority, however, that the matter in negotiation at the time of the break was the employment status of Loretta Young, a Selznick client and a Twentieth Century-Fox star, one of nine Selznick clients under contract to the studio. Early reports, that the question at issue was an upward revision of salary during life of a contract which still has several months to run, are understood to have had some foundation but little relevance to the major cause of the studio-agency rupture.

Although the Schenck statement charged the agency primarily with the "pyramiding" of salaries, and although the Selznick reply was likewise specific in allusion to this aspect of the producer-agent relationship, no mere matter of direct buyer-seller bargaining is accounted by informed persons as responsible for the break. More vitally concerned in the Schenck-Selznick controversy, as well as in the whole problem represented, is said to be the so-called "outside picture" clause in studio contracts, urged with increasing fervor and in expanded form by agents during recent years.

This clause, as devised by most agents, provides that a star under contract to a given company at a stipulated salary shall have permission to make one or more pictures a year, "outside" the contract, for another producer, not necessarily designated at the time the studio contract is made, at a figure subject to adjustment by the agent in negotiation with the "outside" proudcer. Although agents maintain that a certain amount of shifting about is beneficial to a client's prestige, through bringing him to the attention of audience sectors which would not see him in pictures produced by a company not servicing theatres these attend, producers contend that the "outside picture," unless susceptible to some measure of supervision, is not only frequently detrimental to the star but invariably instrumental in artificially "jacking up" salary demands.

Salary Precedents

It is contended by producers that most agents use the "outside picture" provision primarily as a means of establishing salary precedents in anticipation of future negotiations with contract employers. Thus, it is argued, if a star on contract at $100,000 a picture to a certain studio is paid $150,000 for an "outside picture" during the life of this contract, this figure immediately becomes a basic price, in the opinion of star and agent, and conversations pertaining to contract renewal start from that figure or, in practice, a higher one. If, the argument proceeds, a contract is made upon this augmented scale, and again the "outside picture" clause is included, the same process is repeated with the same result, until finally the basic price of the star in question has reached a point in excess of the actual earning capacity of that star's pictures, resulting in ultimate loss of the star's value to the producer, the exhibitor, and finally in the star's unemployment and loss to the screen.

In various modified versions of the "outside picture" clause the contract employer is given veto power over agent proposals for outside employment if, on inspection of script and production budget, he feels that the appearance of his contract star in the proposed picture would be of a character to detract from the stellar prestige which he has in part built up by costly advertising, publicity and, of course, production. Provisions of this sort in varying shadings of authority and extent exist in a majority of present contracts, and persons qualified to know assert that it was the Selznick desire so to modify the prevailing Twentieth Century-Fox contracts as to deprive the studio of "story supervision" prerogatives that resulted in the stalemate.

Responsible members of the industry in Hollywood feel that, regardless of the outcome of the Schenck-Selznick case, the operations of the artists' representatives since their rise to domination of studio-player relationships with the coming of sound to the screen have been a major factor in the upward trend of production costs and have now to be dealt with, in common with other cost factors, in a manner to safeguard the screen against a situation in which the uphill line denoting expense shall be found to have intersected the downhill line denoting income at a point indicating commercial disaster. While there is no desire to make war upon the established, legitimate agents, and no underestimating of their importance in the present production setup, sober business men of Hollywood feel that a change of tactics in the interests of industry welfare is mandatory.

Everywhere the subject is discussed—and that is everywhere—notable examples of extraordinary salaries extraordinarily arrived at are cited in illustration of the condition which has been brought about. Most typical of these, and evidently most authentic, is the case of Marlene Dietrich, reliably reported to have been paid $250,000 for her last picture, "Angel," and to have been granted by Paramount, following release of the film, permission to accept such other employment as might be offered her pending selection of a story for her remaining but indefinitely postponed Paramount vehicle. Sponsors of the employer point of view in the currently prevalent discussions of the artists' representative's place in the scheme of things trace Miss Dietrich's career back to her performance in the imported "Blue Angel" and rest their case.

A Powerful Force

Although infrequently the subject of news comment and therefore little known to the exhibitor branch of the industry, the artists' representative is a powerful force in Hollywood and a prime factor in the production equation. Licensed by the State Labor Board and operating under bond, some 150 of them represent about 98 per cent of the player personnel, and a somewhat smaller percentage of writers and directors, in their relations with studio employers, receiving 10 per cent of their clients' compensation for their services. These services are of varying extent, ranging from the single matter of salary adjustment to complete control of personal publicity and advertising, radio appearances, public behavior, professional conduct generally and, on occasion, personal conduct specifically. About twelve of these agencies, by reason of efficient service to clients or other causes, have acquired control of a substantial majority of the upper bracket salaried stars relied upon by producers for surefire marquee effectiveness. All are members of the Artists' Managers Guild.

Herein lies, as the Schenck-Selznick rift continues unhealed after two weeks, a situation to

LEGISLATOR HITS STAGE LANGUAGE

Use in the legitimate theatre of language and episodes which would not be tolerated in films under the industry's own code, much less by the state censorship boards, was assailed this week by Representative Fritz Lanham of Texas, at hearings on the Sirovich resolution for a Department of Science, Art and Literature before the House Patents Committee.

Representative William I. Sirovich, of New York, author of the plan, following a conference at the White House Wednesday said that President Roosevelt was "very much interested" in the resolution but insisted that the department be made self-supporting.

"Outside Picture" Clause Is Issue

which the mature commercial minds of the industry are addressing serious attention. Many believe that the agents themselves, many of them seasoned business men expert in their knowledge of the trade and in their analysis of public demand and disposition, will cooperate with forces now taking steps to bring down the cost of production so that diminishing box office returns may be balanced by diminishing outgo. Others assert that a far-reaching revision of the whole mechanics of talent salary determination is an inevitable responsibility of the industry and that the Schenck-Selznick incident, or another like it, will precipitate action to this end.

Meanwhile a letter dated Feb. 8 from the executive board of the Screen Writers Guild to Mr. Schenck protesting against "the arbitrary exclusion of artists' representatives from a motion picture studio without a hearing before an established impartial body" goes unanswered and no other organization whose members are affected has entered the situation.

RCA Plans Building For New York Fair

Radio Corporation of America will erect an exhibit building of unique design to house a panoramic display of the latest developments of the radio art and industry as reflected by RCA products and services at the New York World's Fair, 1939, it was announced this week. The exhibits will embrace all the products of RCA companies including RCA Manufacturing Company, RCA Communications, Radiomarine Corporation of America, the Radio Institutes and the National Broadcasting Company.

Plans are being made for experimental television programs to be shown to the public in viewing rooms in the RCA building at the Fair. The building will be shaped like a huge radio tube 136 feet in length, resting on a broad base 190 feet wide. The entire front of the two-story structure will be of glass, which will be brilliantly lighted at night.

General Electric Hearing March 24

The Federal Communications Commission this week set March 24th as the date for an examiner's hearing on the applications of the General Electric Company for authority to construct four television stations.

The applications cover two stations at Schenectady, to transmit pictures only with power of 40 watts, one to operate in the 156,000-162,000-kilocycle band and the other in the 44,000-50,000-kilocycle band; one at Albany, to transmit pictures and sound on the 44,000-50,000-kilocycle band with 10,000 watts power for video and 3,000 watts for aural, and a station at Bridgeport, to transmit pictures on 66,000 kilocycles with 10,000 watts power and sound on 72,000 kilocycles with 300 watts power.

F. & M. Plans New Theatres

Plans for six new theatres in the middle west were discussed at the annual board meeting of Fanchon & Marco in Hollywood. Officers reelected at the meeting were Jack Partington, president; Fanchon, vice-president; Marco, executive vice-president and secretary, and Harry Arthur, treasurer.

Syndical Chamber Formed by Swiss

by PIERRE AUTRE

The Swiss Federal Council has decreed the immediate creation of the "Swiss Syndical Chamber of the Cinema," which will work under the Federal Department of the Home Office, and which will become the Department in Charge of the Cinema.

A few months ago, the Swiss Government ordered a special committee to examine and study all cinema matters, including, especially, the "encouragement of the national production, and of artistic films; the creation of Swiss studios; trade organization; political and moral control of the films from the national point of view; creations of organs for educational, artistic and propapanda films."

This committee has just given the results of its study, which are to create a Chamber of the Cinema, of the Culture, Arts, Sciences and Travel departments.

The yearly expenses are estimated at 12,000.

U Plans Release Of 40 Pictures

Nate J. Blumberg, president of Universal, and John E. Joseph, director of advertising and publicity, arrived in Hollywood this week for conferences with Charles R. Rodgers, executive vice-president, on production plans for the remainder of the season.

Before the two officials left New York the company announced that it will complete and deliver 40 pictures this season. The company reported that 24 pictures on the current season's schedule have either been released or are in production, and that stories for the remaining 16 films have been selected. Casting on some of the 16 will be started immediately, it was announced.

Universal has four more "A" pictures on its release schedule. They are "Mad About Music," set for March 4th release; and "Goodbye Broadway," set for March 25th, and a Danielle Darrieux film and the Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen picture to follow in the late spring.

Other pictures set for early release include "The Crime of Dr. Hallett," "State Police," "Let's Make a Night of It," "The Lady in the Morgue," "The Winner's Circle," "Nurse from Brooklyn," and "Half Way to Shanghai."

Mr. Blumberg left New York for the coast Monday and his visit to the studio is expected to be an extended one.

$900,000 Anti-Trust Suit Settled Out of Court

A $900,000 anti-trust lawsuit, instituted against American Telephone & Telegraph Company, Western Electric Company, Inc., and Electrical Research Products, Inc., by Telephoto Corporation, has been settled out of court and discontinued.

The action was filed in Federal Court, New York, May 11, 1934. The plaintiff charged restraint of interstate commerce and monopoly of the photo-electric cell business in connection with the sale, leasing and installation of sound recording and reproduction apparatus in motion picture theatres.

Otterson Forms Producing Firm

John E. Otterson, former president of Electrical Research Products, Inc., and of Paramount Pictures, this week completed arrangements for participating in the financing of a production and distribution venture with Major Edouard Corniglion Moliner, French producer and aviator, who arrived in the United States two weeks ago. They will call their company Inter-Allied Films.

Distribution arrangements have not been completed as yet, but initial production plans call for the remaking of several of Mr. Moliner's French productions for the American market. These include "Le Grand Illusion," a World War picture, featuring Erich von Stroheim which won a prize at the Venice Exposition. Production will be at Eastern Service Studios, Astoria, Long Island.

Dealing chiefly with films of French origin, the company will not only remake features in English, but also will dub some French-made talkers in the same language.

Mentioned as associates with Mr. Otterson and Major Moliner are G. A. Noffka, associated with Hr. Moliner in France, and Charles Schwartz, New York attorney.

Mr. Otterson has been in virtual retirement since early in 1936, when he resigned the presidency of Paramount Pictures, a post he assumed in June of 1935, after having served 13 years with the Telephone-Western Electric interests. At the beginning of sound, in 1927, he was named general manager of Western Electric's sound recording and reproducing subsidiary, Electric Research Products, and in the following year, he was elected president of Erpi. In those positions, Mr. Otterson guided the company through the evolution of sound in the motion picture business, and in its subsequent development. During the past year or two he has been frequently mentioned as studying the possibilities of films in the classroom.

6 Circuits Book "Monastery"

Six New England theatre circuits have booked "Monastery," which is released through World Pictures Corporation and which contains a narration by Father Michael Ahearn, S.J., of Boston. The circuits are Publix, E. M. Loew, Interstate, Sharby, Maine and New Hampshire and Tegu's. The company said the film will have its New York premiere at the Consolidated Squire Theatre in the near future. Arthur Mayers, sales manager of World Pictures, also said RKO has bought "Life and Loves of Beethoven" for RKO circuit theatres. The picture, he continued, also has been booked by Skouras, Rugoff and Becker, Fabian and Consolidated circuits.

"Marco Polo" Premiere in Miami

The world premiere of Samuel Goldwyn's "The Adventures of Marco Polo" was held at the Lincoln Theatre, Miami Beach, Thursday night. "The Goldwyn Follies" just completed a run at the theatre.

Al Cohn Back in Films

Al Cohn, Collector of the Port of Los Angeles since 1933, will resign that post on February 28th to resume film activity which dates from 1915, as writer-executive at a major studio.

REJECTION LAW, BUILDING CONTROL IN NEW SOUTH WALES FILMS ACT

Legislation Reducing Quota Includes 15 Per Cent Cancellation Right and Restrictions on New Theatres

by CLIFF HOLT
in Sydney

Described by Premier Stevens as "purely experimental," legislation governing the state quota laws, theatre licenses and rejection privileges for exhibitors was passed by both the Lower and Upper House in the New South Wales Parliament during January.

The Quota Act is amended as shown in the table on this page.

The legislation gives effect to a rejection right on imported foreign films of 12½ per cent, in addition to a 3 per cent rejection privilege in favour of Australian quota films, making a total rejection of 15½ per cent.

Explains Building Restriction

Dealing with the proposed limitation of theatre licences, the premier said existing legislation placed no restriction whatever on the erection of theatres, except that provided under the Theatres and Public Halls Act. It had been alleged by many persons engaged in the industry that the unrestricted right to build theatres had been used unfairly by large corporations or film distributors.

Frequently it was charged that an exhibitor would be approached in relation to film rental under most unfair conditions. If he attempted to resist the imposition of these conditions, it was alleged, he was met with the threat that another theatre would be built to compete with him, and that his supply of films would be curtailed.

Therefore, it was proposed in the bill, that for the year 1938 no additional building would be authorized without the approval of a committee. It will be the duty of this committee to investigate all films released for this year, and to collect evidence and report fully on the various aspects.

This will not be a permanent arrangement. It was proposed that the special committee should investigate the position. Particular questions which the committee will be asked to report on include the standards of accommodation in any theatres or public halls, the general quality of films, admission charges, health and safety, and the convenience of the public; and the further laws which, in the opinion of the committee, should be enacted.

The premier said it was realized, during the study of the Australian Quota Act, that the early years would be more or less a period of trial; and producers, who were fully convinced before the Act was passed of their ability to produce, had since found that it had not been possible to achieve their objective. Accordingly, he said, the percentages had been reduced and these would apply until the end of 1939.

After that the Film Advisory Committee will make enquiries annually into the extent of the production of Australian-quota films, and will, during the period of June 1st to August 31st each year report to the Government the result of their enquiries. Provision is made whereby if a distributor satisfies the Films Advisory Committee before March 31 next that he has made satisfactory arrangements to comply with the provisions of the amended quota, he will be relieved from his liability for failure to comply with the provisions of the Act as they now stand.

NEW DISTRIBUTORS' QUOTA

	Old Quota	New Quota
1st Year	5%	3%
2nd Year	7½%	3%
3rd Year	10%	to be determined
4th Year	12½%

NEW EXHIBITORS' QUOTA

	Old Quota	New Quota
1st Year	4%	2½%
2nd Year	5%	2½%
3rd Year	7½%	to be determined
4th Year	10%
5th Year	12½%

In explanation of the legislation for rejection, the premier said that in England the exhibitor has the right to reject films. In Australia the exhibitor is compelled to buy a number of films. In practice he not infrequently finds that a particular film is totally unsuited to his requirements.

"The provision of a rejection right will not reduce the requirements of the theatres; and, as a result, distributors in total will still be able to sell the same number of films," he said.

"The exhibitors will be relieved from the compulsion to purchase films that are of no value to them, and the public will also be relieved of the necessity at times of suffering the inferior pictures which intermittently are exhibited to them. In the legislation which is now presented the Government has endeavoured to act with the utmost impartiality. In Victoria there is a rejection right of 25 per cent.

"The bill before the House provides for a general rejection right of 12½ per cent, to which must be added the three per cent rejection right in favour of Australian quota films. The total rejection, therefore, stands at 15½ per cent.

"The hope is expressed," concluded the premier, "that this gesture of the Government in endeavoring to ensure equitable treatment to exhibitors will be appreciated by distributors."

Greater Union Profit Seen

Norman Bede Rydge, managing director of Greater Union Theatres, and chairman of the holding companies in Union, has announced that a net profit of £48,823 is anticipated by the board for the year commencing January 1st.

"If this were realized," he said, "it would be the directors' first duty to bring forward a scheme of reconstruction of the four holding companies."

In his address to the annual meeting of Spencers Pictures (one of these companies) he said the estimate of £48,823 net profits was conservative.

If £48,000 net profit is made it will be applied in redemption of Greater Union's overdraft. More important, however, it will open up immediately a way for re-financing of Greater Union.

While shareholders may not receive a dividend, it will bring them something better, a plan for the reinstatement of the capital value of their assets, Mr. Rydge pointed out.

After Greater Union restarted business it was without adequate working capital and has been scratching ever since, the director continued. It was an error of judgment to continue with British Empire Films, Cinesound and National Theatre Supplies, he admitted, observing that conditions would have been infinitely better if the exhibiting side, alone, had been continued.

Mr. Rydge said, however, that he believed the subsidiaries could be made profitable and that it would be a mistake to close them now. Losses of £8,934 annually on National Theatre Supplies have been reduced to £1,500 for six months, he said, adding that it was hoped to lower it further.

Addressing a meeting of the shareholders of Greater J. D. Williams Co. (another holding company of Greater Union), the chairman said he had received a verbal offer of £135,000 for the Melba Theatre, Melbourne. This is operated by Greater Union on a second-run weekly-change policy.

Summarizing the position of Greater Williams, Mr. Rydge said that the company had £470,000 invested in Greater Union Theatres, Cinesound Productions Ltd., British Empire Films Pty. Ltd., National Theatre Supply Co. of Australia Pty. Ltd.

For the year ended June 30, Greater Union earned a net profit of £21,060. British Empire Films last £15,706, Cinesound £5,245, and National Theatre Supply £8,934.

There was therefore, he said, a loss of £8,834 for the four companies. Since then British Empire Films and Cinesound have been run at a profit. The loss on National Theatre Supply included stock written down.

A reduction in overhead expenses of Greater Union organizations at the rate of £20,000 a year has been made without effecting efficiency, said Mr. Rydge. The overdraft stood at £348,873—£20,000 below the limit, he concluded.

Horner Joins 2GB

Broadcasting Control

Changes in the control of the national broadcasting service are expected as the outcome of an early review of the present system by the federal ministry.

Particular attention is expected to be given by the ministry to the future of the Australian Broadcasting Commission, which now comprises a chairman and four other members. The term of office of the present members of the commission will expire in June.

One of the proposals which will be considered by the Cabinet is that the size of the commission should be reduced, probably to three members. The remuneration of the three members then would be increased so that they would be expected to devote more time to broadcasting affairs.

The ministry is likely to insist that the commission appoint honorary advisory committees in each state so that it can be kept in touch with public opinion.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Nine Films Start

New production continues at a low ebb. Nine pictures, one of which is a serial, were started in the week. Five were finished. However, signs are beginning to appear on the horizon that indicate that several large studios shortly will launch intensive production programs. Labor and technical crews again are being recruited up to full strength. Employees who a month or so ago were working on a one day a week basis are now on half or full-time schedules. The tax assessors have practically completed their annual inspection and the stages on lots that were bare a few weeks ago are being made ready.

The Twentieth Century-Fox lot was the busiest in Hollywood. Three films started there. Darryl F. Zanuck announced that he was getting the company's program in shape so that he could take a vacation during May and June. The most important picture, undoubtedly, is "Little Miss Broadway." Shirley Temple will be starred with Jimmy Durante, Phyllis Brooks, El Brendel and George Murphy in support. "The Battle of Broadway" will feature Victor McLaglen, Louise Hovick, Brian Donlevy and Raymond Walburn. The third picture, "A Trip to Paris," a number in the Jones Family series, will feature Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Florence Roberts, the juvenile members of the family, and Harold Huber and Nedda Harrington.

Remarque Story Starts

Two productions were started at MGM. The stars of "Three Comrades," an Erich Remarque story, are Robert Taylor, Robert Young, Franchot Tone and Maureen O'Sullivan. "Judge Hardy's Children" will feature Louis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecelia Parker and Fay Holden.

Columbia also started two pictures. "The Secret of Treasure Island," a serial, will present Don Terry with Gwen Gage and Hobart Bosworth in the leading roles. Buck Jones is the star of "Trail Blazers," which will also feature Marjorie Reynolds and Carlyle Moore.

RKO-Radio's new activity is "See No Evil," in which will be Chester Morris, Anne Shirley, Walter Abel and Eduardo Cianelli.

Republic started "The Gentleman from London." The cast includes Alan Marshall, Tala Birell and C. Henry Gordon.

From Five Studios

Five studios each contributed one of the completed pictures. The cast of "Stolen Heaven," Paramount, lists Gene Raymond, Olympe Bradna, Glenda Farrell, Lewis Stone, Porter Hall, Joseph Sawyer, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Douglas Dumbrille, Bert Roach, Esther Dale, Rolfe Sedan, Ferdinand Schumann-Heink and Hooper Atchley.

In Warners' "Torchy Blane in Panama" will be seen Lola Lane, Paul Kellly, Tom Kennedy, Anthony Averill, Larry Williams, Betty Compson, Frank Shannon, Joe Cunningham, George Guhl, John Ridgeley, Hugh O'Connell, Jimmy Conlon, George Lloyd, George Regas, John Harron, James Nolan and Jack Mower.

"Joy of Loving," RKO-Radio, will feature Irene Dunne, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Alice Brady and Guy Kibbee, with Lucille Ball, Jean Dixon, Frank Milan, Phyllis Kennedy, the Steiner Twins, Judith Ford and James Burge. Tay Garnett directed.

"Flight Into Nowhere," a Larry Darmour production for Columbia release, will present Jack Holt, Jacqueline Wells, Dick Purcell, James Burke, Fritz Leiber and Ward Bond.

A Colonial Picture, "Maximilian and Carlotta," winds up the lists of productions that were finished. The cast will include Conrad Nagel, Nedia Novarra, Lionel Atwill and Evelyn Brent.

SEEK GRETA GARBO FOR DELAWARE FILM

The state of Delaware is seeking the services of Greta Garbo to make a film based on the life of Armegot Printz, daughter of Johan Printz, an early governor of Delaware. The picture would be released in connection with the Swedish tercentenary celebration to be held in Wilmington in June.

Sigfried Edstrom, chairman of the new Sweden Tercentenary Commission in Stockholm, has sent word to Wilmington that he has talked with Miss Garbo on the subject. She will be more than willing to undertake the film if it can be arranged with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Mr. Edstrom reported.

"Sign the Tab"

Downtown reporters, active in informing Los Angeles of what goes on in the courts, government offices and morgues, seldom enjoy the open handed hospitality of Hollywood's studios which makes the lot of their more fortunate Hollywood brethren seem much more pleasant. Yet, Harry Brand, alert publicity chief of Twentieth Century-Fox, always a pal of the outcast and downtrodden, decided something should be done about it. So, in the nature of a Valentine Party, he invited about thirty of the boys to visit the Studio Saturday.

There was a grand luncheon and plenty of what it takes to make any kind of lunch grand, introductions to the stars and a tour around the lot to view production in work. That experience behind them, the crowd returned to the publicity office for a little more conviviality, with the inevitable result that the supply of "what it takes" ran out before appetites had been satiated.

Genial Mr. Brand, who, it happens, has a brother who is a superior court judge, looked upon the situation as pretty much a calamity, but was equal to the emergency. Recalling the cafe on the corner, he invited the boys to hie themselves hence and "just sign the tab." He forgot, however, to send an eagle-eyed studio attache along.

The afternoon carried on into night and so did the reporters, recruited by old and new found friends. At latest reports the scores of tabs totaled $110.

Character Players

Any producer or director will tell you that were it not for the character players there would be no such thing as the star system. They will go down the line and point out that it is players like Edward Everett Horton, Frank Morgan, E. E. Clive, Guy Kibbee, Victor Moore, Edna Mae Oliver, Beulah Bondi, Arthur Treacher, Slim Summerville, Charley Grapewin and Lewis Stone who fortify any cast.

The "character play," in which all or a great percentage of those present have featured roles, is not new. It's as old as the history of the stage or screen. "The Lost Patrol" is a case in point. Although Victor McLaglen was billed as the star, practically every player appearing was as important in the action as he. Coming along a little further, it may be recalled that "Ah, Wilderness" was almost exclusively a "character play," with Wallace Beery in a character role sharing the spotlight with others.

"Make Way for Tomorrow," which every critic praised highly but which, it is a matter of record, only a comparatively few persons went to see, was essentially a character play with every player presenting a different character.

Very often Edward Everett Horton, Frank Morgan and more recently, E. E. Clive, have been given character roles that made them more important in the unfolding of the story than the stars. Alice Brady's name in the credits of "In Old Chicago" comes after Tyrone Power, Don Ameche and Alice Faye, but the manner in which she made the character of "Mrs. O'Leary" seem to live won her just as many plaudits as the stars.

Clarence Brown had the rights to "Benefits Forgot" in his possession for more than 20 years before he could convince any executive that it was worthy of production. Principal argument supporting their contention was that what is now "Of Human Hearts" lacked plot formula. Critics noted that in some cases on seeing the preview, but they also noted that each player was a distinctive character.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

The Adventures of Tom Sawyer

(United Artists-Selznick)

A Childhood Idyll

David O. Selznick's "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" is a picture that any exhibitor may be proud to offer his patrons. Warm in human interest, rich in its intriguing conceptions of "puppy love," humorous, blending impish mischief-making with high adventure, contrasting pathos with rare comedy, making suspense a factor in spectacle, it stands as a splendid tribute to the highest ideals to which the screen aspires.

Wholesome and inspiring, it is the kind of picture that any patrons, no matter what his mental caliber, or in which direction his preferences fall, should be eager to see. It is the kind of picture that any exhibitor should be eager to present in the confidence that it will meet with full approval. The means to assure capacity houses at every performance are at hand. Not only have the producing and distributing companies done much already, but there is no end of things, of particular local significance, that may be done to arouse maximum public interest. Practically every trick in the showman's handbook may be used.

In MOTION PICTURE HERALD, Oct. 9, 1937, commenting on the picture while it was in production, the writer remarked, "The title reads 'The Adventures of Tom Sawyer.' Visually that's what the letters spell. But as memories wander . . . the letters will spell out—'Be young again. Live the hours of childhood once more, the happy days of youth when life was romance.'"

Artistically presented, expertly played by its junior and adult actors, finely applied color and a deft musical score amplifying its varying moods and transitions, the picture preserves all the traditions of Mark Twain and his ageless characters — "Tom Sawyer," "Huckleberry Finn," "Becky Thatcher," "Joe Harper," "Aunt Polly," "Injun Joe," "Muff Potter," "Amy Lawrence," darky "Jim," little brother "Sid," and sister "Mary." Automatically the picture makes a star of Tommy Kelly and uncovers a child to be treasured in Ann Gillis. It presents the other juveniles as artists of ability, and their seniors, especially May Robson, Victor Jory and Walter Brennan, probably will look upon their own work in this picture as ranking among the high spots of their careers. As he has welded all his materials, cast and production quality and John V. A. Weaver's finely drawn screen play, Norman Taurog who, once before won the Academy Award, has, in this picture, set the standard which any other director must surpass if he wishes to gain the honor in 1939.

"Tom," whose lot is not made easier by tattling "Sid," is "Aunt Polly's" problem boy who makes the other kids whitewash the fence. "Tom" is "Amy's" beau until he becomes "engaged to Becky"—the sequence leading up to the kiss of child love is delightful. "Tom" trades treasures for the Sunday School prize. "Tom" and "Huck" in the graveyard witness the murder of which "Muff" is suspected. Both swear the dire blood oath. "Tom," "Huck" and "Joe Harper" run away to float down the river and be pirates on the island. "Tom" sneaks back to revel in the anguish of "Aunt Polly" and "Mrs. Harper," but the leader of the trio returns to their own funeral service. Then it's "Tom" and "Huck" befriending the captured "Muff" and it's "Tom" in the tense courtroom scene, breaking the oath to accuse "Injun Joe." Soon it's "Tom" and "Becky" lost in the caves, "Tom" finding the hidden treasure, escaping "Injun Joe's vengeance, and leading "Becky" to safety and to be acclaimed a hero by the townsfolk.

Previewed in Grauman's Chinese theatre. Every line of dialogue, bit of action or characterization hit the audience with forceful impact. The great of Hollywood were there, in the reserved sections, of course. Charles Boyer sat behind us. He laughed and cried. He said "great" so many times we lost count. May Robson was in front of us. Although she was in the picture, one could not help but feel that her reactions will be those of every other woman. The departing executives, et al, were hard put to find adjectives sufficiently complimentary. The paying customers were no less enthusiastic. Their beaming faces, denoting at once pleasure and satisfaction, also proclaimed that they believed they had been privileged to be present at the first public showing of a picture that the world will acclaim—GUS MCCARTHY.

The Adventures of Marco Polo

(UA-Goldwyn)

Historical Comedy

What with "Stella Dallas," "Dead End," "Hurricane" and "Goldwyn Follies" still fresh in public consciousness as proof of Samuel Goldwyn's distinguished devotion to his art, showmen setting out to summon the multitude to an inspection of "The Adventures of Marco Polo" may find themselves in something of a quandary as to whether the producer or the ranking star, Gary Cooper, rates top billing. Most will decide, no doubt, to break out full sail for both. That would amount to putting the populace on notice with a bang.

There are, however, additional names of exploitation consequence to be made use of. It may be made known, advantageously as pertains to box office returns, that Basil Rathbone is present in a typical personification of evil, that Ernest Truex has a comedy assignment in his favorite pattern and that this is the introductory presentation of Sigrid Gurie, a newcomer about whom the newspapers have had much to say provocative of interest. Alan Hale, George Barbier, H. B. Warner, Henry Kolker and Ferdinand Gottschalk are other names to be displayed on the more spacious marquees.

All this information, diligently purveyed, would seem to guarantee a substantial turnout for the picture in practically any city or town. (In the minority sectors where audience I. Q. of a high order is believed to prevail, it may be efficacious to emphasize the name of Robert E. Sherwood as author of the screen play and indicate, lightly, that it is in the same general entertainment classification as his "Road to Rome" and other stage plays, although less broadly drawn.) It may be added, of course, although the name of Goldwyn says as much, that it is an expensive, elaborate and technically superb production.

The multitude attracted by exploitation of this or any kind happens to be in for something of a surprise, pleasant or not as the case may turn out to be. They are to discover that the adventures of Marco Polo are not presented seriously, nor realistically, but grandly, beautifully, offhandly and with explicitly humorous intent. They are to be told, laughingly, that the hardy Venetian solicitor of trade agreements with China was less a salesman than a lover and more adventured against than adventuring. This may be a little disappointing to anyone approaching the picture with a view to finding out something about history and the customs of the period, although it may prove compensatingly diverting, a question only time and the public whim can answer.

As the story goes, "Marco Polo" is sent off to remote Peking with instructions to consumate trade agreements with the fabulously wealthy "Kublai Khan" for his Venetian merchant sponsors. "Khan," doting parent of the fair "Princess Kukachin" whom "Marco" promptly instructs in the Western art of osculation, turns the young man over to "Ahmed," his chief of state, who also likes the girl, and "Marco" is sent off to spy upon "Kaidu," monarch of a vassal province. "Kaidu," normally fond of executing spies, spares "Marco" on condition that he indulge the amorous spouse whose wifely attentions make it a little difficult for "Kaidu" to distribute his own romantic impulses among his subjects. "Khan" marches against Japan, disastrously, and returns to find that "Ahmed" has taken over his royal perogatives and is about to marry his daughter, forcibly. Then "Marco" gives "Kaidu" a successful sales talk and leads his army to the rescue of "Khan," the princess and the trade agreements, in a tremendous battle introducing the use of explosives.

Although the subject matter is of a sort to suggest that maybe it would be nice to invite the kiddies to learn about history, the treatment of it is primarily and emphatically for the adult population, rather especially for the sophisticated sector thereof. This segment has liked some of Mr. Sherwood's pseudo-historical creations pretty well, others less so. Conjecture as to the fate of this one is, of course, conjecture.

Previewed at Warner's Hollywood theatre to a large, distinguished, surprised, profusely speculative and by no means unanimous audience.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

The Baroness and the Butler

(20th Century-Fox)

Continental Comedy

The obvious thing for a showman playing "The Baroness and the Butler" to do with it is to bill it far and wide as the first 1938 appearance of the William Powell who rose to fifth place in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD list of Money Making Stars in 1937, and to let the people know, if the title doesn't tell them, that he's again to be seen in the butler role in which he has won a sort of championship.

The second step for most showmen will be the billing of Annabella as here to be seen in her first American film, the press of the nation having been extremely diligent in the gratis hailing of this appearance as something of an international event.

A reasonable third step is the listing of Helen Westley, Henry Stephenson, Joseph Schildkraut and Nigel Bruce as among those present in a balanced cast.

Probably only a minority of managers, those whose patronage consists largely of what is known as the carriage trade, will feel obligated to mention that "The Baroness and the Butler" is a sophisticated comedy of manners laid in Budapest and concerned somewhat over-seriously with social change, the caste system and a bit of political compulsion predicated on domestic indiscretion. Probably no one will feel impelled to make a special drive for juvenile patronage while the picture is in engagement.

The story concerns an impeccable butler in the service of the prime minister. The butler continues in that relationship after being elected to the parliament as leader of the radical minority opposed to his employer. When he deposes his employer, politically, he is dismissed as servitor for neglecting his work. He then discloses his love for his employer's married daughter, is caught by her husband in the act of kissing her, and propositioned forthwith to use his influence in the husband's political behalf on promise no scandal shall develop. The butler agrees, but the lady interrupts a session of parliament to tell the members all about it, after which there's an off-screen divorce and the perfect butler becomes a theoretically perfect son-in-law.

Sam Hellman, Lamar Trotti and Kathryn Scola devised the screen play from the stage play by Ladislaus Bus-Pekete, and Fritz Lang directed for associate producer Raymond Griffith, whose flair for light comedy subjects has flared more brightly on previous occasions. Mr. Powell's performance is, of course, in the well polished groove of his past works in kind.

The Beloved Brat

(Warner-F.N.)

Human Interest

Inasmuch as this picture embraces qualities that both deeply impress and are appreciated by a great many persons, the matter of its getting the money at the box office to which it is justly entitled is a proposition that rests solely in the hands of exhibitors. "The Beloved Brat" is not entertainment as the word is used to denote amusement. Rather it is a human interest document that should prove interesting and educational to adults, particularly parents, and to children.

In the nature of a sociological study, it is a revealing analysis of what makes and what remakes a problem child. The approach to and treatment of the subject matter is serious. Yet it is not without humor in dialogue and situations. It is finely acted, especially by Bonita Granville, whose role is reminiscent of the one she played in "These Three." While love interest may be considered lacking, there are so many other factors that can be used to direct popular attention to "The Beloved Brat" that the problem of convincing folk they should see it does not seem difficult. Whether or not the showman may care to put his personal endorsement on the picture, he certainly can recommend it as a "must" for many patrons.

"Roberta," the 13-year-old daughter of "Mr." and "Mrs. Morgan," is completely spoiled. Wealthy, they devote their time to other interests, and her care is given over to servants whose lives she makes miserable. Hating her parents, she hates butler "Jenkins" most. Setting fire to her room when she is locked in, she causes a fatal auto accident and gives false testimony that sends "Jenkins" to jail. Repenting under the kindly influence of secretary "Williams," "Roberta," over the objections of her parents, is sent to a corrective school by the juvenile court. Here, despite hazing by other children, she continues as an incorrigible until the superintendent, "Helen Cosgrove," takes her under her kindly care. Given the opportunity to teach classes, read bedtime stories to younger children, read hair-raisers herself in company with "Miss Cosgrove," she begins to work a regeneration within herself. Finally adjudged a normal girl, she goes into a tantrum when informed that she is to be returned home. In a remarkable sequence, overheard by her parents, she refuses until, with "Mrs. Morgan" at the point of death, her father comes to her and admits that they never understood her and never knew how to give her the right father and mother love, but that all will be different in the future. She goes home to be loved by all who come in contact with her.

In today's scheme of picture things, "The Beloved Brat" is an unusual picture that demands unusual marketing. By exploitation that convinces individuals that it is their duty to see the show, by calling upon social and civic organizations for cooperation, and by so arranging things that "The Beloved Brat" will become a subject of word of mouth advertising, it is possible that the show may become one of the most discussed features of the season.

Previewed in the Warner Theatre, Hollywood. A surprise presentation, run in competition with four other previews, the showing was not attended by a great crowd. But those who were present, and who had not had time to recover from the laughable wrestling sequence in "Swing Your Lady," were quickly swept into "That Brat's" mood. Applauding several times during the running, but generally silent and attentive, the outburst at the conclusion would have been heartening to studio officials had many been present.—G. M.

Bringing Up Baby

(RKO-Radio)

Slapstick-Burlesque-Farce

An ideal showmanship combination is, according to some experts, the welding of solid material for exploitation with a production which justifies telling the world about it through every medium available. Of such cloth is "Bringing Up Baby."

Lest the title be misinformative, let it be said first that it is not a domestic comedy. Further, it was apparently made as a slapstick to break all slapsticks, a burlesque to shame all burlesques, and a farce to sour all farces.

Consider, then, the many facets of "Bringing Up Baby":

Katharine Hepburn, in the role of a madcap heiress, playing her first slapstick part and doing a takeoff of Carole Lombard in Miss Lombard's giddiest screen vehicles, this after a gain in public favor via "Stage Door";

Cary Grant, in the role of a serious anthropologist wearing glasses, in a manner suggestive of burlesquing Harold Lloyd, this after his excellent reception in "Topper" and "The Awful Truth";

Support by such comedians as Charlie Ruggles, Walter Catlett, Barry Fitzgerald, May Robson and Fritz Feld;

A merry madcap story by Hagar Wilde, adapted by him and Dudley Nichols, which appeared in Collier's Magazine.

The "Baby" in the title is a tame leopard.

Then, too, there is Asta, the dog that almost stole the show in "The Thin Man."

There is no air of sophistication about "Bringing Up Baby." It is directed at the cinema wise of Hollywood, the blase of the big towns, and the movie hungry of the hinterlands. Directed by Howard Hawks and produced by Cliff Reid, it aims its hilarity at no particular mental nor social level.

"David," a young scientist, is anxious to get an endowment of $1,000,000 for his museum, and to marry his assistant, who aids him in his research. However, he meets "Susan," a rich young girl, who, anxious to help him, mires him further in difficulties with the attorney representing the possible donor. She forces him, through the stratagem of a tame leopard, into accompanying her to her aunt's farm in Con-

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Merrily We Live

(MGM-Hal Roach)

Comedy

After years of experimentation with feature production, Hal Roach hit upon a unique entertainment idea in "Topper." The amusement and commercial values which that picture represented are now generally well known. They have been applied in the same fashion to "Merrily We Live."

The picture will present Constance Bennett, who effected a regeneration within herself in "Topper," and Brian Aherne, who from "Song of Songs" to "The Great Garrick" has come to be one of Hollywood's top freelance players. The stars will be seen in company with Alan Mowbray, last in "Hollywood Hotel," a comedian of high rank; Billie Burke, outstanding in "Navy Blue and Gold" and "Everybody Sing"; Patsy Kelly, Ann Dvorak, Tom Brown who was seen "In Old Chicago," Bonita Granville, Marjorie Rambeau, Clarence Kolb, effective in "Portia on Trial," and Phillip Reed.

A study of the behind-the-scenes personnel reveals that many who had a part in the making of "Topper" are associated with it. Thus Norman McLeod is the director. In writing the screen play Eddie Moran and Jack Jevne included the same brand of wit and humor. Milton Bren is producing it on the same scale.

A writer stumbles into a household the members of which, individually and collectively, are all quite balmy. All think he's a tramp. Some try to keep him in the menage; others attempt to give him the bum's rush. Hilarious romance is woven in. The resulting entertainment becomes what is known as farce.

Rose of the Rio Grande

(Monogram)

Adventure and Romance

The subject matter of this production is not new to audiences or exhibitors, yet it follows a popular train of adventure, intrigue, romance and music. Its time is approximately 100 years ago and the locale is the Mexican country bordering the Rio Grande. The son of a family whose lands and lives have been ravaged by the outlaws returns from Spain and swears revenge. Setting himself up as a Robin Hood, he slays the leader of a rebel army. Disguising himself as his victim, he becomes the leader of the band, to rescue a girl and save valuable jewels which she is seeking to carry to a safe place.

A Dorothy Reid production, the production is based on a story by Johnston McCulley which was adapted by Miss Reid and Ralph Bettison. It is being directed by William Nigh, who recently made "A Bride for Henry," "Atlantic Flight" and "Hoosier Schoolboy."

The cast will feature Movita, seen in "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "The Hurricane," John Carroll, a singing actor in several RKO-Radio features, Antonio Moreno, a star of the silent days, and Lina Basquette, who will be remembered for "The Godless Girl." Other known names are Duncan Renaldo and Don Alvarado.

Release date: March 23, 1938 (tentatively).

State Police

(Universal)

Melodrama

The story does not promise to be different from many that have been the subject of screen treatment, but it will follow an action-excitement formula through which has been woven thread of romance that has proved popular material.

Modernly timed, its locale in Pennsylvania, it concerns a young man who, following his expulsion from college, joins the state police under an assumed name. Becoming involved in a romantic situation with his sponsor's girl friend, he also becomes involved in coal miner labor squabbles in which racketeers play a prominent part. Made hostage by an escaped murderer, he is rescued by loyal miners and made to appear a he-man in his father's eyes and a hero to the girl.

Based on an original screen play by George Waggner, who specializes in the preparation of thrillers, the production is being directed by John Rawlins.

The cast includes a few names favorably known. John King is the boy and Constance Moore the girl. Members of the featured and support cast are David Oliver, William Lundigan, Larry Blake, J. Farrell MacDonald, Sam Flint, Ted Osborne, Eddy Waller, Charles Wilson, Billy Wayne, Joseph Crehan, Pierre Watkin, Roy Mason, Glenn Strange, James Lucas, Robert Fisher and Harry Semels.

A direct cue to the entertainment and exploitation contents may be seen in the fact that Miss Moore is the only feminine player listed.

Release date: March 17, 1938 (tentative).

Rawhide

(20th Century-Fox-Lesser)

Action Adventure

Smith Ballew and Evalyn Knapp, co-featured in "Hawaiian Buckaroo," will be together again in "Rawhide." Lafe McKee and Arthur Loft will be in it too, as will be sundry hard riding, rough and tough cowboys, some good, others bad. Yet the presence in the cast of Lou Gehrig, New York Yankee baseball player and possessor of the record for number of consecutive games played, and a mass of other records, will be the special subject of most public, exhibitor, picture and sport commentators. In his extraneous vocation as an actor, Mr. Gehrig has been the center of much ballyhoo for several months. In syndicated articles, illustrated news strips, and so on, he's probably been the most discussed person to have hit Hollywood in a long time. As for his histrionic ability, we will quote Paul Snell, press agent for "Rawhide": "Unlike Glenn Morris, Gehrig is a natural actor." Mr. Morris was the gentleman in "Tarzan's Revenge."

As for the story, it's Gehrig, Ballew and Miss Knapp versus Arthur Loft's combined rustlers and racketeers. Its keynote is action and excitement, with a little music and romance added for good measure. Lou wallops a baseball every now and then, but most of the while, except for a bit of riding, he is walloping Mr. Loft.

Cowboy from Brooklyn

(Warner Bros.)

Musical Comedy Romance

When producers adapted the practice of putting music into "westerns" several years ago, it was inevitable that the experiment eventually would develop a brand new idea in screen entertainment. At this writing "Cowboy from Brooklyn," from the Broadway stage show, "Dude Rancher," appears to be the first fruit of that experiment.

The title gives a very definite idea of the theme. A Brooklyn crooner, enroute to Hollywood, is delayed in the Wyoming cow country. Though he is mortally afraid of horses and steers, the proprietors of the dude ranch, who are featuring a cowboy troubador who can't sing a note, install the adventurer as a singer to entertain the guests. A radio producer discovers him and returns him to New York where, in wild west costume, he is a sensation as a cowboy crooner. A jealous girl causes him to be revealed as a fake, but when a hypnotist gets hold of him he becomes the bucking buckaroo star of a rodeo who breaks the world's record for bulldogging, while under a hypnotic spell.

The cast will present Dick Powell, Priscilla Lane, Pat O'Brien, Dick Foran, Johnnie Davis, Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Spring Byington, Hobart Cavanaugh, Emma Dunn, Granville Bates, Harry Barris, Dennie Moore, May Boley and many others. Earl Baldwin did the screen play and Lloyd Bacon, maker of "Submarine D-1" and "A Slight Case of Murder," is the director. Music and lyrics are credited to Richard Whiting and Dick Mercer.

Release date: To be determined.

Wooden Wedding

(MGM)

Domestic Comedy

Although the title has but little connection with marital anniversaries, alert showmen should be quick to capitalize upon its value as an exploitation feature. They also should be quick to take advantage of the name values.

"Wooden Wedding" will present Robert Montgomery, lately in "Live, Love and Learn," in the same kind of characterization which gave him his screen reputation during his first years in pictures. He will be teamed in the starring role with Virginia Bruce, last in "Badman of Brimstone" and "Arsene Lupin Returns." Warren William, also in "Arsene Lupin Returns" and recently seen in "Madame X," occupies the feature support role. The supporting cast lists E. E. Clive, whose droll comedy has been an important part of such films as "Beg, Borrow and Steal," Priscilla Lawson, Jean Fenwick, Eleanor Lynn, Bodil Rosing and Torben Meyer.

The story is based on an original by Norman Krasna, who also is producing. It is being directed by Richard Thorpe, who handled Montgomery in "Night Must Fall," a picture which has been nominated for Academy honors.

In theme, the picture has to do with a family situation wherein the wife earns more money than the husband.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Jack Smalley is rattling the skeletons in Liberty in a manner concerning the struggling days of Spencer Tracy, Patrick O'Brien, Eloise Taylor, now Mrs. O'Brien, and others, bringing in the following letter which Pat sent to Eloise while he was on the road with a stock company:

Darling Eloise: How would you like to have that winter coat you said you couldn't afford to buy? How would you like to dine at the Waldorf, on roast duckling with all the trimmings?

Before you think I'm tetched in the head, listen to this: Yesterday I'm sitting in my palatial walk-up apartment, with its magnificent view of the elevated line. In my pocket was the grand total of ten dollars—one lonely 'sawbuck.' And I know I've got to break that bill to eat. Worse, the pongee shirt was out for a walk on Spence Tracy's back. That always depresses me. The pongee shirt belongs to me. I wear it two days and chuck it in the laundry bag. Spence fishes it out and wears it four days more. If I object, Spence says: "Pat, you once said you'd give me the shirt off your back. Well—?

So there I am sitting. The landlady knocks and calls me to her phone. It's Eddie, an old friend. He has found a swell set-up for himself in a horse race bookie's office where they have a direct line to the track. So, . . . $$$

Before his death, Thomas Alva Edison, to whom the motion picture owes so much for its beginnings, gave a 10-word message to one Joseph Dunninger, spiritualistic student, with the instructions that if anyone got that message supernaturally after his death, he or she was to get also $10,000, through Mr. Dunninger.

Mrs. Anna Breault, a Chicago widow, hurried the other day from her home to Mr. Dunninger's quarters in the New York Ambassador Hotel, with word that she had heard Mr. Edison during her sleep. Mrs. Breault stood before Mr. Dunninger, fished out a piece of white paper from her handbag and gave it to him. It read: "My niece, Betty, Where are you? Boop. Boop. Boop!"

"One hundred percent incorrect!" said Mr. Dunninger.

Mrs. Breault also said she had a message from William James, the philosopher, but she did not know where to deliver it. He left no such "reward" for any of his supernatural pickups.

Profound Thought Department:

"I don't think there is any question but that any of our leading actors and actresses of today would be more fondly remembered and have a bigger place in screen history for flopping into a mud puddle than for any romantic scene he or she attempts."—Ernst Lubitsch, director of romantic scenes.

Maybe Mr. Lubitsch really means that he feels like throwing some leading actors and actresses into a mud puddle for the romantic scenes they attempt.

ASCAPian Gus Kahn was reminiscing about the old days in Chicago, of the time when Phil Spitalny had arrived in that town with a new melody, and it fell to Gus to write the lyric to it. When Spitalny heard the lyric it had him a bit stymied.

"What," he asked in his best early-day accent, "is this word 'dawn'?"

Gus thought at first he was being kidded. "Why, it's a very popular word," he replied. "Used extensively."

"Never heard of it," insisted Phil.

By this time Gus was pretty peeved. "Did you ever hear 'The Star Spangled Banner'—that has the word 'dawn' in it, too," he exploded at Spitalny.

"Yeah," challenged Phil, "and that isn't selling either!"

Yet, he said business during January in Cincinnati ran 100 per cent above the same month two years ago. "Yes," he added, "business is much better."

Cincinnati's theatres in January of 1936 didn't even pipe the squeak of a Mickey Mouse. They were shut tighter than Charlie Pettijohn's Film Boards of Trade. Floods had cut off the light and power.

Bob Burns concludes that the Los Angeles and Hollywood sectors have more soap-box orators per square foot than all of the Union Squares and Columbus Circles in New York—and both have plenty of 'em. Every evening, reports Bob, the California variety gathers in a square downtown in Los Angeles and each of them proceeds to rattle off at least six solutions for each of the world's weighty problems.

The other day Bob heard one of them talkin' over an hour and the only other one that listened to him was an old man. Finally the orator looked down and said, "Brother, are you with me to stamp out this evil?" The old man said, "No, I ain't interested."

The orator said, "Hell, then, why have you stood there all this time?" And the other man replied, "Well, Brother, I'm a stranger in town and I jest got a little lonesome."

Nebraskan Robert Krejci (pronounced Crachee) has been permitted by court to change his name to Robert Taylor. Krejci means "tailor" in Bohemian. He's a bank clerk. Nebraskan Arlington Brough got no such permission, changed his name to Robert Taylor, by order of his movie producers in Hollywood.

That picture we ran the other week on this page showing Mr. J. M. (Bud) Nass, manager of the Fort theatre, at Poplar, Montana, holding a giant-sized grasshopper—running some three-and-a-half feet—has a history.

Remembering the loud boastings of certain motion picture gentlemen in the middle west, particularly around Kansas, on the dimensions and appetites of last summer's grasshoppers, during the hoppers' plague, in their region, we challenged said Kansans to match the size of the Montana hopper shown in the picture with Mr. Nass. Nass even held a rifle in the other hand to show that he was the hero of a quick trigger and good aim.

"Many thanks to you for placing my picture in your column," Nass wrote: "Now that it has gone this far I will tell you all about it." Seems that a photographer friend of Bud's up in Glasgow, Montana, snapped a closeup of the grasshopper, pasted it on a board with a picture of Bud and then photographed the two together. It turned out so good that he placed them on the market in the form of souvenir postcards. To date he has sold some 40,000 of them, and they're still going strong."

To the Victor

(GB)

Scottish Dog Story

Lest classification of the picture as a dog story might be taken to indicate a sluggish production, we hasten to add that "To the Victor" is a warming and human story of a Scottish sheepherder, a cantankerous, sly and whisky befuddled old fellow and his pride and joy, the magnificent sheep dog "Black Wull." It is, in the unpretentious exposition of a simple tale about simple folk, one of the finest pictures to come out of England.

The performance of Will Fyffe is outstanding as the dour sheepherder, who chooses to isolate himself from his fellowmen. Margaret Lockwood as the old fellow's daughter and John Loder as the young personable stranger, who as the new tenant in the district brings about the downfall of all the old fellow's hopes, contribute a romantic theme. Then there are numerous vivid characterizations of Scottish shepherd folk that give the picture substance and authenticity.

But for the exceptionally fine performance of Will Fyffe the premier honors would have fallen to "Black Wull" and the other sheep dogs, notably "Owd Bob," all intelligent and fine looking animals. It is in the sheep herding contest that the dogs display their skill and intelligence in rounding up five sheep, herding them through narrow openings in fences and walls, over a narrow plank across a small stream and other obstacles and then finally maneuvering them into an inclosure, all against time.

To non-Scots the dialect is difficult to interpret verbatim if some times at all, and yet it is melodious to the ear and not necessarily a deterrent to enjoyment of the picture.

"McAdam" (Will Fyffe) and "Black Wull" are two of a kind. "McAdam" is feared by the other shepherders and "Black Wull" causes the other dogs to cringe at his mere presence. In the big event of the year, the contest to determine the best sheep dog "Black Wull," who has won the contest two years running, is defeated by the stranger's dog "Owd Bob." Having gambled away his money on "Black Wull's" chances and alienated his daughter's affection for him, "McAdam" becomes more of a recluse with only "Black Wull" to keep him company.

When a number of sheep killings turns the suspicion of the shepherds against "Black Wull," "McAdam" staunchly defends the dog, but when conclusive evidence convinces "McAdam" that "Black Wull" is the killer he shoots him. Broken in spirit, "McAdam" goes to live with his daughter and son-in-law, the stranger whose dog had beaten "Black Wull." The picture ends on a triumphant note for "McAdam." The son-in-law offers the old man his choice of a bitch dog's pups. Only "McAdams" knows that the father is "Black Wull."

Kathleen

(Hoffberg-Argyle)

Irish Drama

Based on the Irish classic novel, "Kathleen Mavourneen," by Clara Mulholland, the picture has much to recommend it to practically all transplanted Irishmen and Irishwomen and those once or twice removed who cherish memories of the old country. It has entertainment as well for the non-Irish in that it has likable singing by Tom Burke, and after a slow start it moves along in a sustained speedy tempo to a very satisfying climax.

The plot probably is antiquated, but it is also likely that the producers have cared less for the story than the many opportunities to allow Burke to sing. All of which adds to the picture. Sally O'Neil plays "Kathleen" and performs creditably. Others in the cast are Jack Daly, Sara Allgood, Jeanne Stuart and Ethel Griffies. At times the brogue is so thick it could be cut with a knife, but without beclouding the production.

"Kathleen," an orphan since the death of her father, supports her younger brother and sister by working as a waitress in Liverpool. "Michael Rooney" (Tom Burke), a stevedore in love with "Kathleen," raises money to send her and the children to an aunt in Ireland. "Kathleen" falls in love with "Dennis O'Dwyer" (Jack Daly). "Michael" gives up his job in Liverpool and visits "Kathleen."

"Hannah O'Dwyer" (Ethel Griffies), rich aunt of "Dennis," disapproves the proposed marriage of her nephew to "Kathleen" and schemes to block it by sending her brother across the border with "Dennis'" horses to a sale, which would mean a prison sentence for him as owner.

Love, Honor and Behave

(Warner Bros.)

Comedy Melodrama

Built into this otherwise unmusical production with manifest exploitation intent is the thriving song hit, "Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen," probably the outstanding item of campaign material. It is sung by Priscilla Lane in an integrated but detachable sequence, to the evident satisfaction of a representative preview audience. Most showmen doubtlessly will start their selling with this circumstance.

Miss Lane and Wayne Morris have the romantic leads in a somewhat rambling but ultimately collected tale of divorce, parental influence and practical matrimony. Other names of marquee consequence are John Litel, Dick Foran, Thomas Mitchell of "The Hurricane" and Mona Barrie. Mentionable too is Stephen Vincent Benet, author of the Saturday Evening Post story from which four Warner writers extracted the screen play.

Wayne Morris plays "Ted," dutiful son of peaceloving "Sally Painter" and forthright "Dan Painter," who divorce on grounds of inconstancy early in the plot, as do "Lisa Blake" and "Jim Blake," parents of "Barbara," played by Miss Lane. Years later "Ted" and "Barbara" marry against the wishes of all parents, natural and acquired, and drift close to the shoals that wrecked their parents. "Ted" saves the situation by thrashing his rival and spanking his wife.

The scene is New York, the time from 1922 to the present, the manner direct and the appeal, because marital infidelity is dealt with somewhat lightly as a plot motivant, primarily to the mature.

Outside of Paradise

(Republic)

Musical

Here is a filmusical which does not utilize a backstage motif, and has as more or less valuable exploitable qualities the singing of Phil Regan, the appearance of Penny Singleton (Dorothy McNulty), who is being given a build-up by Warners on her home lot; the comedy of Bert Gordon, known to millions of radio fans, particularly the Eddie Cantor following, as "The Mad Russian," and presentable songs by Jack Lawrence and Peter Tinturin. Harry Sauber produced "Outside of Paradise" from his original screenplay and John H. Auer directed

"Danny," an Irish singer in a New York Russian cafe managed by "Ivan," is informed that he has been left an estate in Ireland. The band, led by "The Mad Russian," provides the money to send him there. "Danny" finds that he has inherited half of an ancestral castle. The other owner is "Colleen," a pretty Irish lass. They argue from the first, and "Danny" introduces hamburgers to Ireland from a stand in the castle, in order to raise funds to return to America. However, "Ivan" finances the band on a trip to Ireland, and the players join "Danny." They talk "Dorothy Stonewall," wealthy girl interested in "Danny," into financing a night club, keeping the source of the money a secret from "Danny." However, "Colleen" discovers that "Dorothy" is backing the venture and is jealously angry. A reconciliation with "Danny" is effected only after a brick fight started by "Colleen's" relatives who think that she has been wronged.

Romance in the Dark

Operetta

Showmen are quite justified in telling their public that here at last Gladys Swarthout is to be seen and heard in musical material appropriate to her voice, personality and prestige, in an only moderately cinematized operetta containing a deal of legitimate music and not too much merely tuneful stuff written down to popular taste. Exploitation that will register this circumstance without labeling the production highbrow is distinctly in order and certain to prove profitable.

There is box office power likewise in the news that John Boles sings and acts opposite Miss Swarthout, both in somewhat better than his best previous form, and that John Barrymore here commits another of his artistically matchless portrayals of a conscienceless rogue. Claire Dodd, Fritz Feld and Curt Bons add well wrought performances.

Announcement that the original play is "The Yellow Nightingale" by Hermann Bahr may constitute adequate notification of its Continental flavor. Sophisticated is the American word for it, and maybe the same information may be more gracefully conveyed by indicating that its plot has about the same ethical status as most of the standard operas and is intended to be taken about as seriously.

Miss Swarthout plays "Ilona," voice student, sponsored as a singing Persian princess by "Kovach," amorous opera star, for the purpose of diverting the interest of "Jason," amorous impresario, from "Countess Monica," their common flame of the moment. The plan succeeds but "Kovach" discovers he loves "Ilona." A Budapest Winchell exposes the deception and irate patrons pelt the counterfeit star with overripe fruit before, aided by "Kovach," she sings her way to genuine success and a happy ending.

Although there is no glossing over of this Continental type story, emphasis is primarily upon the musical side throughout. Producer Harlan Thompson and Director H. C. Potter built their picture a good deal more snugly to Miss Swarthout's measure than were her earlier productions, and the vocal supervision of Frank Chapman is notably effective in all instances. Richard Hageman's handling of the orchestra is likewise distinguished.

Previewed at the Village Theatre in Westwood, Cal., to an upper middle class audience that applauded the solo numbers spontaneously and gave every indication of thorough satisfaction with the picture.—W. R. W.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Producer, Harlan Thompson. Director, H. C. Potter. Screen play by Frank Partos and Anne Morrison Chapin. Based on the play "The Yellow Nightingale" by Hermann Bahr. Art direction by Hans Dreier and Earl Hedrick. Sound recording by Harry Mills. Editing by Jimmy Smith. Photographer, William Mellor. P. C. A. Certificate No. 3814. Running time, 77 minutes when seen in Hollywood. Release date, March 4, 1938. General audience classification.

Jean Rogers and Frank Shannon are co-sharers of "Flash's" adventures while Charles Middleton and Beatrice Roberts join efforts to thwart the good folk at every turn of the wheel with death-dealing rays and what-not. Ford Beebe and Robert Hill have collaborated on the fast paced and imaginative direction. Release date, March 22, 1938. 15 chapters, running time, approximately 20 minutes each episode.

Cupid Goes Crazy

Whereas there is a widespread opinion that the married state bears a strong causal connection to the rate of mental breakdowns among the male populace, this subject takes as its comedy material the novel theme that in the case of Danny Kaye, given to eccentric talk and mannerisms, matrimonial connections will save him from the loss of his reason. It seems that there is an old Russian family custom among the Kaye menfolk to lose their mental balance unless they attain the conjugal state on their twenty-first birthday. The business of how Danny races with time from one spousal candidate to the other, finding one to be an animated jigsaw puzzle with removable limbs, teeth and eyes, and another an embryonic female wrestler, and at last bagging a suitable miss in the marriage net only to learn that the clock is slow and he needs must go mad, works up a considerable bit of frothy fun and frivolity.—Running time, 14 minutes.

Bouncing Ball Number

A rather uninspired number from the Screen Song category is redeemed from the blight of mediocrity by the inclusion of some silly but amusing gags and some equally funny cartooning. Prefacing the playing of the subject's title by Jerry Blaine and his Streamline Rhythm Orchestra, with Phyllis Kenny pacing the bouncing ball vocalization, are drawings fashioned after the candid camera manner of the truth behind the beautiful matinee idol, the daredeviltry of a lion tamer, and the new-found good fortune of a Sweepstakes winner. The cartoon business may draw greater audience response than the singing sequences.—Running time, seven minutes.

Whimsical Terry-Toon

Not only will mice play when the cat is away, but in the case of this Terry-Toon situation the playful young rodents must caper about even with the voracious feline parked on the doorstep of the hole-in-the-wall home. Eluding the clutches of the villainous enemy, the mouse upsets a bottle of ether and under the somnolent odors of the fluid is wafted off to dreamland, where he pictures himself beseeching the astrological seer, Jupiter, that he be transformed into a catlike person. His wish is granted and results in sorrow for the wisher and merry minutes of pleasantry for the spectator. A clever and amusing takeoff on the tough kid element from "Dead End' lends novelty.—Running time, seven minutes.

Alibi Time

(Vitaphone)

Radio Ramblers

The Radio Ramblers, a male trio who specialize in imitating radio performers, run a lunch counter. Among the customers are three gangsters who plan to steal a string of pearls. The gangsters force the trio to imitate various programs on the air to establish an alibi for the gangsters. The plot sets the stage for the ramblers, who imitate Bing Crosby, Clyde McCoy and Amos and Andy among others. The alibi fails to save the gangsters, however. Running time, 11 minutes.

Fiddling Around

(Columbia)

Slapstick

Made to order for those who enjoy slapstick comedy, the two reels depict the adventures of Monty Collins and Tom Kennedy as muddling detectives. Hired to guard a Stradivarius violin, Kennedy and Collins mistake the violinist for a thief, handcuff him, learn their error, and find they haven't a key to release him. Meanwhile the violin is stolen. The pair set out to recover it. The violin case they bring back contains not a violin but a bomb, which promptly explodes when the case is opened. The subject is a continuous diet of slapstick ranging from head bumping to exploding bombs. Also in the cast are Gino Corrado, William Irving, Vernon Dent, Harry Semels, Jack Kenny, Cy Schindell, and Bud Jamison. Running time, 18 minutes.

DUTCH POLL FAVORS AMERICAN FEATURES

Six of Ten Best Liked Pictures from U. S.; Melodramas, Comedies Preferred

by PH. DE SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

American films predominated in a list of preferred titles voted by 35,000 patrons of the Rex theatre in The Hague who were asked to indicate the type of picture best liked and to select their choices for the best films from a list submitted to them by the exhibitor.

Melodramas were preferred; second place was won by comedies, and the thriller was third in popularity. A liking for historical films was also indicated.

Ten pictures leading in popularity, according to the vote, proved to be: "Mayerling" (French), "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" (American), "Oke" (Foreign), "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" (American), "Mazurka" (German), "Desire" (American), "Les Yeux Noirs" (French), "Life of Louis Pasteur" (American), "F. P. I. Antwortet Nicht" (German), "The Invisible Man" (American).

Protest Admission Taxes

The Dutch motion picture trade is steadily declining, because too many taxes and the depression prevent the Dutch exhibitor from making profits. The biggest burden is the 20 per cent admission tax to the Government.

The Dutch exhibitors are paying yearly about fl. 4.000.000 for admission taxes, about fl. 11.000 per exhibitor per year.

In Amsterdam and Rotterdam theatre receipts have fallen 18 per cent, despite 19 to 20 per cent increase in attendance, while seating capacity in Amsterdam, for example, has gone up 40 per cent since 1930. The average admission fees in Amsterdam and Rotterdam decreased 31 to 37 per cent in that period. In The Hague the drop is 33⅓ per cent.

The Dutch motion picture trade is one of the best organized in the world, but an admission tax of 20 per cent kills every hope of profit. In spite of limitation of new construction, the fixing of minimum admission fees and forbiding of the issue of coupon blocks, in spite of all the measures taken by the very active managing board of the Federation, rental prices are falling every day, and improvement can be found only in reduction of the admission tax.

The number of attendances in Rotterdam in the second quarter of 1937 was 1,115,434 as against 1,146,052 in the same period last year. Gross receipts after taxes were fl. 413.885 compared with fl. 404.366. Gross receipts in Amsterdam (taxes paid) from April 1 to June 30 were fl. 781.789, contrasted with fl. 853.992 in that period last year.

Figures for attendance and gross receipts for the first half of this year and last are as follows:

Amsterdam: Attendance, 4,594,467, as against 4,532,722; gross receipts (admission tax paid), fl. 1.695.774 (1.812.733 in the half of 1936).

Rotterdam: Attendance, 2,543,154 (2,616,801); gross receipts, fl. 907,239 (929,988).

Attendance remained about the same, but the receipts decreased again.

Mr. C. S. Roem, manager of Profilti Film Corporation, distributing the Dutch East-Indian ANIF newsreel in Holland, and vice-president of the Dutch Motion Picture Federation, has returned from the Indies, where he had several conferences on improvement of this newsreel.

The theatres in Holland refused to release the newsreel, considering it of inferior quality, but in cooperation with the management of ANIF Mr. Roem has worked out plans to continue production.

Very probably the Dutch and Dutch East Indian governments will give subsidies. New cameramen and other technicians have been engaged. ANIF will cease production of East Indian features.

The ANIF—abbreviation of Algemeen Nederlandsch Indisch Filmsyndicaat—was founded last year by a number of important trading companies in the Indies, such as the Nederlandsche Handel Maatschappij, Aneta, Aniem, N. I. Escompto-Maatschappij, K. P. M., Maatschappij "Nederland," Radio Holland a. o.

New Company to Produce

The first Dutch production company of real importance has been founded under the name Neerlandia-Film Company, to make domestic pictures. This company has been founded by Filmex, the company that made the only big Dutch production of importance, "Pygmalion," in cooperation with Mr. B. H. Ochse, manager of the newsreel company Polygoon, and the management of City Circuit, managing several important theatres in Amsterdam and The Hague.

General producer and director will be Dr. Ludwig Berger, director of "Pygmalion," and Mr. Rudolph Meyer will have general production management.

Light comedy will be the leading kind of production as this proved to be appreciated by the Dutch public.

Film rights of "Candida," another play of George Bernard Shaw, have been purchased.

The first film to be directed by Mr. Berger will be "The Gentleman's Principles" ("De Principes van Meneer"), based on an original screen story. A school to educate young and new film talent will be founded, also under the management of Dr. Berger.

BELGIAN EXHIBITORS FORM NEW GROUP

Having reached an agreement on the urgent necessity of forming a unified group with the aim of defending exhibition interests, members of the executive committees of the principal Belgian exhibitors organizations met recently in Brussels to study the possibility of such an organization.

Represented at the meeting were the Cinema Association of Belgium, the Syndical Chember of Antwerp, the Brussels Cinema Directors' Association and numerous other exhibitors and managers groups. An outline of terms of a constitution was approved and a temporary committee was formed to complete the work.

The group voted to protest to the Belgian Ministry of Finance against present entertainment taxes which were termed "excessive."

Kleckner Predicts Adoption of Plan For Small Loans

Joseph B. Kleckner, president of Motiograph, Inc., manufacturers of motion picture theatre projectors, predicted this week that his proposal that the federal government supply facilities for loans to small business will be adopted.

His plan was submitted at the recent "little businessmen's" conference in Washington. Mr. Kleckner was one of the group of "little businessmen" who attended.

In his announcement, Mr. Kleckner quoted Daniel C. Roper, secretary of Commerce, as declaring:

"Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and others in the administration are making a survey of the situation and will formulate the recommendations.

"The loan question appeared to be foremost in the small businessmen's minds. The little businessmen reported that, while in most cases they were able to get 90-day loans, what they needed was long-term funds. When money is used to expand a business a considerable period must sometimes elapse before it can be repaid from profits, they said.

"It was brought out that the well-established company requiring a large stock issue can secure financial aid easier than the smaller company whose capital requirements are not attractive to large underwriters, even though the company might be as successful as the large unit.

"It is evident that the financial market is not implemented to adequately serve such smaller enterprises. A bill for RFC insurance of bank loans to small business has been introducted to the senate by Senator Pepper, an Administration supporter.

"The loans, limited to $100,000 each, would have to be amortized in five years by installment payments."

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, is to confer with Government officials in Washington on assistance to small exhibitors in the near future.

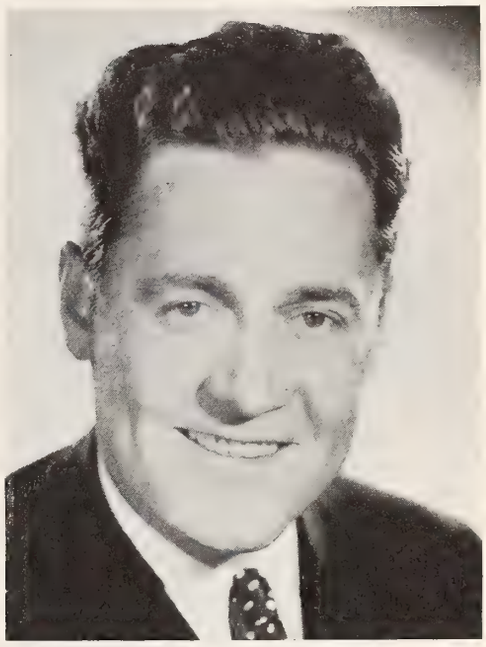
Sears Drive for Warner Brothers Passes Previous Campaign Records



At the half way mark in the Warner Brothers winter sales campaign, surnamed the Sears Drive for Gradwell Sears, general sales manager, billings and collections recorded since December 26th total 23 per cent more than a similar period in any previous drive, according to company announcement. The campaign will close April 16th.

Several of the company's most important features on the current release scheule were selected for distribution during the period and the national advertising and publicity department cooperated with special campaigns on all features released. Among pictures still to come are: "Gold Is Where You Fnd It," a Cosmopolitan production in color with George Brent and Olivia de Havilland; "A Slight Case of Murder," starring Edward G. Robinson; "Love, Honor and Behave," with Wayne Morris and Priscilla Lane; "Jezebel," starring Bette Davis with Henry Fonda and George Brent, and "The Adventures of Robin Hood," color special starring Errol Flynn.

Selected by Mr. Sears as one of the most important productions to be released during the drive period, "Beloved Brat," starring Bonita Granville and Dolores Costello, will be accorded exceptional attention in a national advertising campaign. It is planned to use about 12 exploitation men to work in advance of the feature's playdates in key cities, a method employed with great success for "They Won't Forget." In addition full page four-color advertisements are planned for appearance in the nationally circulated American Weekly.

Extra attention from the publicity and advertising department for "Gold Is Where You Find It," which had its premiere last week in Weaverville, Cal., where many location scenes were shot, has resulted in an unusual number of simultaneous playdates for the film. With the addition of 100 dates in the last two weeks, 200 theatres have booked the picture for engagements during its first week of national release.

The Weaverville premiere, reported last week in Motion Picture Herald, was heard over a national radio hookup on the NBC network. In spite of a heavy storm the entire town turned out to greet the visiting stars and celebrities and to attend the showing of the picture, held in the town auditorium, where also members of the cast, including George Brent, Olivia de Havilland and Margaret Lindsay made personal appearances.

GRADWELL SEARS

The film has had the advantage of a large pre-release build-up through national advertisements directed to 11,000,000 readers of newspapers in 23 key cities. This campaign was accompanied by a day-to-day 23-chapter serial story in 14 of the papers, promoted by front page banner lines and advance display advertisements.

MGM to Produce Six Color Films

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is planning to produce six features in color this year. While other large companies had been increasing their use of color in features, MGM had had no all color pictures since "The Viking" in 1929, but the company has been using sepia tints for some time.

With few exceptions, MGM said, it does not intend to extend the use of color in its short subjects. This year the company is releasing as color subjects 12 FitzPatrick Travel Talks, one Audioscopik subject and "Penny's Party."

"Miss Humanity Home," a model small budget apartment was opened last week in New York with a cocktail party given by United Artists. The apartment is a duplicate of the home Andrea Leeds is shown as owning in "The Goldwyn Follies."

ASCAP Suit Is Filed in Florida

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers this week filed suit in United States court for the Northern Florida district in Gainsville, Fla., attacking Florida's music bill legislation passed in 1937. The law attacked would prohibit organizations of music composers and publishers from fixing license fees to be paid by radio stations or other groups who present compositions to the public. Cary D. Landis, attorney general, and the state's 15 state attorneys were named co-defendants.

In addition to ASCAP, the plaintiffs attacking the constitutionality of the Florida law were listed as Carl Fischer, Inc.; G. Shirmer, Inc.; Irving Berlin, Inc.; Deems Taylor, Oley Speaks, William J. Hill, Anne Paul Nevin, Ella Bartlett and Jane Sousa.

Threat of legislation in Georgia faded Tuesday when the session adjourned.

Suppression of Censorship

"Motion picture production," said Deputy Buyán, "as any other creative or inventive faculty must be free from impositions and limitations of official censors. The selection of films for the consideration of the jury will be based on the intrinsic values of the picture and the prizes established in my bill will be awarded by an unbiased jury.

"If in any of these productions errors are incurred in depicting everyday life, whether social or political, apparent even to the common spectator, forbidding the exhibition of the picture or pictures where such errors occur does not remedy the situation. It would be better, therefore, to omit those parts of the plot which create such erroneous situations.

"The jury created by this law has no censorial function. Its power is limited only to award the prizes established to the best Argentine pictures fulfilling the requirements."

U. S. LISTS 89,097 THEATRES IN WORLD

The United States Government reports the existence of 89,097 film theatres, both sound and silent, throughout the world, a decrease of 6,282 under 1936, and 14,432 under 1935, the wide fluctuations being attributed to a wholesale fall-off of traveling projection units in Russia.

Compiled by Nathan D. Golden, chief of the films section of the Bureau of Foreign Commerce, the report cites 59,187 theatres in Europe, 17,000 in the United States; Far East, 5,834; Central and Latin America, 5,174; Canada, 1,089, and Africa and the Near East, 813. The figures for the United States were said to be based on "trade estimates," but the total appears to be 2,000 greater than the general trade estimates of some 15,000 regular theatres actually operating.

The 89,097 sound-and-silent theatres in the 90 countries surveyed, at the end of 1937, compare with the five previous years as follows:

SAYS 62,895 HOUSES ARE WIRED

Europe, because of previous backwardness in wiring, again led all countries in 1937 in advancing the position of sound films, increasing wired houses from 29,207 in 1936 to 34,819 in 1937. There were 62,895 sound houses at the end of 1937 in the entire world, against 55,563 at the end of 1936. These figures, based, as are those on the opposite page, on tabulations made by Nathan Golden of the U. S. Foreign Commerce Bureau, show, then, that while the world's sound-and-silent theatre total decreased 6,282 in 1937, the number of sound houses increased 7,332, indicating that the actual fall-off in theatres showing silent pictures approximated some 13,614 for the year.

The 62,895 sound theatres throughout the world, geographically and by countries, at the end of 1937, compare with the five previous years as follows:

METALLURGY PROMISES PRINT ON ALUMINUM

Sponsors Claim It's One-Third Lighter and Costs Less Than Cellulose Raw Stock

Motion picture prints on metal ribbons avoiding the fire hazards and deteriorations of the cellulose films now used, with reductions, too, in basic costs, are now promised by Dr. Robert Carter, metallurgist working in the laboratories of the Taylor-Sloane Corporation of New York.

The aluminum based film is considered to offer various economies, including the possibility that since it is opaque both sides of the footage could be utilized for images, potentially doubling the capacity of a reel, assuming the solution of handling in projection.

Projection from an opaque film necessarily entails the use of reflected, instead of transmitted, light, involving, in all prior endeavours of the sort, large losses of light.

The subject of application of color printing to the aluminum base and attendant problems, so far as known, has not been explored. The new aluminum ribbon film is yet substantially unknown in the motion picture industry and has not been discussed with raw stock makers, here or abroad.

In the opinion of S. K. Wolf, president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, and formerly with the Western Electric Company and Electrical Research Products, who has been one of the first to see the new product, it is "a major development in motion picture engineering."

He explained that it involves a process of treating a non-ferrous, pliable metal strip with an emulsion surface, on which either positives or negatives can be printed. Further prints or projections can be made through "a simple method of optical refraction, the benefit of which is a permanent film negative or print, instead of the present perishable cellulose product."

Earlier Tests of Opaque Film

Others have pioneered in opaque film. Dayton Paper Products, for one, demonstrated such a strip as far back as 15 years ago, using opaque paper and projecting by reflected light. But, the light loss was too heavy for practicability.

Dr. Carter and Taylor-Sloane, inventors of the metal film, admit that a new optical system, costing about $100, and including prisms, reflectors and such, would be required by the metallic stock in present projection machines.

The sponsors admit, too, that an attempt to adapt the new film to exhibition might meet the objections of organized projectionists, who have been using the flammability of present cellulose film as an argument for the enforcement of city and state laws in many places requiring exhibitors to employ more than one operator in a projection booth.

Whether changes would be necessary in photographic equipment to permit use of the metallic film for prints have not yet been demonstrated. It appears probable, however, that the present cellulose-type of negative still could be used.

Began Tests Years Ago

Dr. Carter began his experiments many years ago in developing a process of printing still pictures and copying manuscripts on metal. In his new process, he explained, he coats a bright aluminum alloy with a chemically inert surface that is said to be permanent and compatible with existing photographic emulsions and developers. Nonferrous metal must be used to avoid corrosion.

The metal film is perforated and wound on reels in the same manner as the present nitro cellulose film.

"Commercial practicability" of the metal film is advanced by Taylor-Sloane, who compare the $1.50 per pound cost of cellulose base with the 42-cent per pound cost of metal alloy, adding that the cost of treating both types with an emulsion surface is identical.

Although the thickness of the new metal film is said to be the same as the cellulose—measuring .00575 of an inch—Dr. Carter and his associates claim that 1,000 feet of metal film weighs only four and one-half pounds, against the approximate six to seven pounds per 1,000 feet of cellulose.

The inventors believe that because their metal stock is opaque it might have pictures printed on each side, pointing out that any success in that connection would permit of half as much positive, half as much film transportation cost, half as many film-reels and film-cans, half as much storage space, etc.

No Action Taken On Federal Probe

Acting on instructions from the Attorney General's office in Washington, Harold St. L. O'Dougherty, acting United States attorney, in New York, this week disclosed that he is holding in abeyance any further action in the film buying situation in Brooklyn and Long Island.

The status of the investigation, started last summer by the late Leo J. Hickey, United States attorney for the eastern district of New York, has not been changed since Mr. Hickey submitted a preliminary report on his findings.

The investigation was made on complaint of the Century Circuit and chiefly involved Century's asserted inability to obtain first-run product. Representatives of Warner Brothers, Paramount and Skouras were interrogated by Mr. Hickey and the Loew's and RKO circuits also were involved.

At that time, Louis Nizer, at the request of Leo Spitz, RKO president, completed a 100-page report on the conditions complained of and traced the Century Circuit's policies over a number of years. Details of the report were never disclosed.

GB Holds First Of 3 Conferences

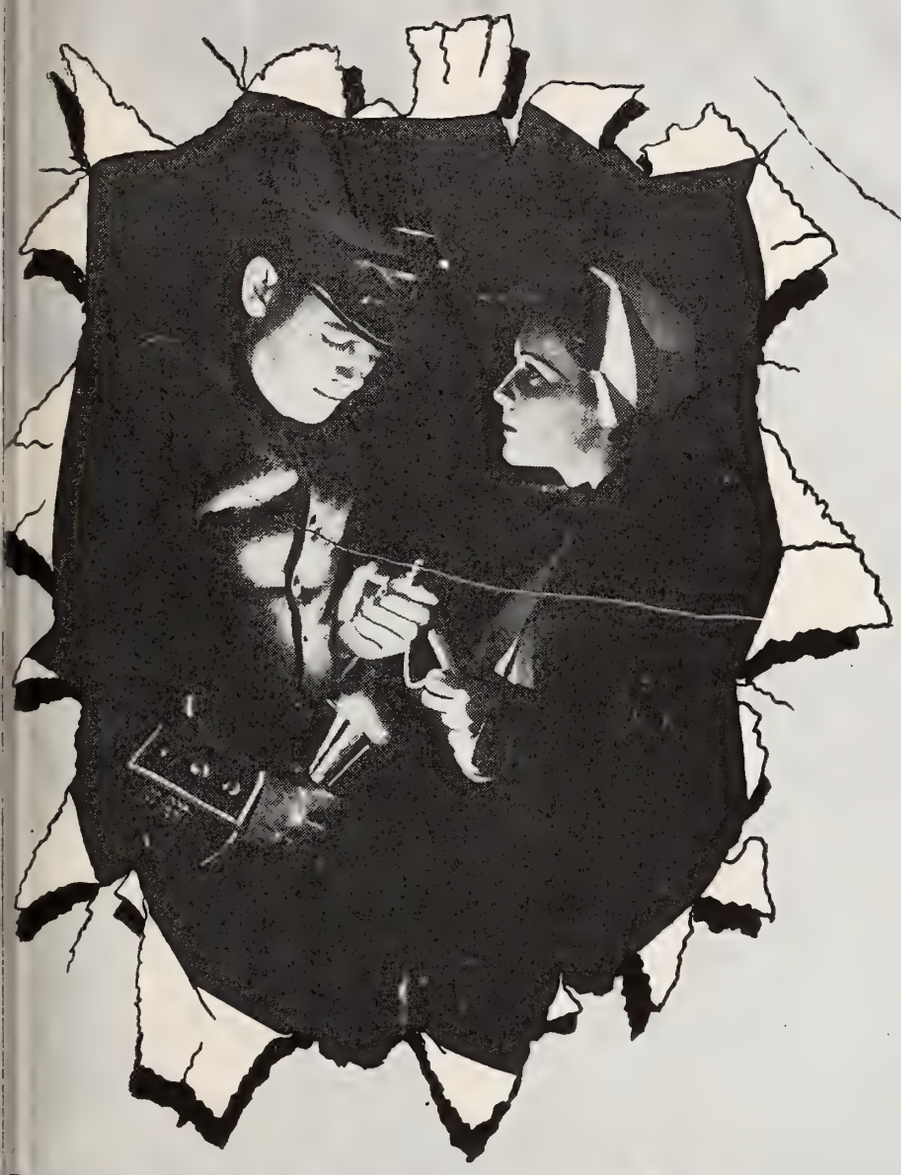
The first of three regional conferences with Gaumont British officials and exchange heads was held in New York this week after which Arthur A. Lee. GB vice-president and general manager, left to attend a similar midwest conference in Kansas City.

After the Kansas City meeting Mr. Lee plans to proceed to the coast to confer with exchange heads in the far west territory. Those attending the New York conference included Mr. Lee; Clinton M. White, assistant general manager; Arthur Greenblatt, eastern division manager; Claude Macgowan, comptroller; Albert Margolies, director of advertising and publicity; Charles E. Swengeler, head of the print department; Bernard Kearney, Purchasing agent, and Reg Wilson, Irving Gumberg, Irving Landes and Rudolph Bach, of the New York exchange; Joe Loeffler, Cleveland; Mark Goldman, Pittsburgh; Charles Leach, New Haven; Marcel Mekelberg and William Lee, Boston; Herb Given and Jack Schaeffer, Philadelphia; and Joe Kaliski, Washington.

Attending the conference at Kansas City will be Bob Selig, Denver; Douglas Desch, Kansas City; Andy Dietz, St. Louis; Al Shepherd, Des Moines; and Glenn Gregory, Omaha.

Several changes in the GB personnel and field selling staff were made during the week. Al Kent, former manager of the St. Louis branch, succeeded George H. Rosenbaum as Buffalo manager and Andrew Dietz, former salesman, took over the managership of the St. Louis office. F. E. Dyer, who had been working in the Atlanta and New Orleans territory was transferred to the Charlotte exchange.

ITOA Issues New Plea for Session



An attempt by the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York to revive interest in its proposed trade practice conference continued this week despite the fact that Allied's president, Nathan Yamins, when invited to participate in the meeting, reiterated the stand taken by his organization at a recent board of directors meeting in Washington.

"The resolution adopted by the board of directors of Allied is self-explanatory," Mr. Yamins advised Harry Brandt, ITOA president. "'I concur with the resolution and fail to see what good purpose could be served by conferences while we are in the midst of a legislative campaign. It is a favorite practice of the Big Eight to suggest conferences when threatened with legislative action."

The ITOA's decision to continue to press for a conference was announced in the organization's official publication, The Independent. "Our association," the article read, "will not stop its endeavors to correct the evils in this industry from within."

The ITOA also took exception to Mr. Yamins linking the organization with major distributors and pointed out that "we are all independent exhibitors, struggling to stay in business."

Republic to Aim Toward Expansion, Says H. J. Yates

Republic is prepared to bid for a larger share of the exhibition market, through an increased budget for production, the strengthening of the distribution department, and the election of James R. Grainger as president of the sales company, it was said this week by Herbert J. Yates, on his arrival in New York from the coast.

Charles E. Ford, formerly manager of Universal Newsreel, who has signed with Republic as a producer, was honored on Monday with a farewell luncheon at the Lotos Club in New York. He is to leave for Hollywood this weekend.

Grainger Starts June 1st

Mr. Grainger will spend a vacation in Honolulu and will not start with the company until June 1st. He will, however, attend the company's sales convention, to be held May 3 to 5, at the Roosevelt hotel in Hollywood, Mr. Yates said.

Foreign distribution representatives are scheduled to attend the meeting, and Morris Goodman, vice-president in charge of overseas sales, will arrive from South America to attend. Following the convention he is scheduled to leave on a European trip. Salesmen who turn in good records during the current drive will be rewarded with a trip to the convention, Mr. Yates said.

Mr. Yates said that because of the success of serials, Republic will continue to devote considerable attention to the chapter plays, which, he said, are receiving playing time in theatres which never ran serials before. In addition to "The Lone Ranger" and "Dick Tracy," the company will make "The Fighting Devil Dogs," which is in preparation, and "The Hawk of the Wilderness," with an Arctic background.

Salesmen and Bookers to Attend

Between 700 and 800 will attend the annual convention. In addition to franchise holders and home office representatives, it has been decided to have salesmen and bookers at the meeting, he said. Foreign distributors also have been invited.

Production costs will be held to a rigid budget on Republic's 1938-'39 program of 34 features, which is an increase of 10 over this year, plus 24 westerns and four serials, said Mr. Yates, and producers will be expected to hold expenditures to the limits set, except that some pictures may necessitate exceeding budgets by $1,000 or $2,000, he indicated.

Mr. Yates denied that Roy Rogers would succeed Gene Autry in western roles. Republic has been grooming Rogers to feature in a group of westerns for next season, but in no way will take Autry's place, he stressed. "Washington Cowboy," which was reported to be Rogers' first picture, will be made by Autry, as scheduled, whenever the latter returns to the studio, he said. When that will be depends on Autry, Mr. Yates indicated.

Siegel Confers in New York

Moe J. Siegel, in charge of production for Republic, arrived in New York Monday from the coast to confer with Mr. Yates. He is to leave for Hollywood on Friday.

Harry Sauber, who produced two pictures for the company last year, and Harold Shumate, who has produced one picture for the studio since leaving Columbia, resigned this week. The resignations were attributed to differences of opinion over productions, Mr. Yates said they will not be replaced.

Morris Epstein, who last week resigned as New York branch manager for Grand National, has been appointed New York exchange manager for Republic. Mr. Epstein succeeds Jack Belman who was recently promoted to share with Harry LaVine the post of eastern district sales supervisor of Republic.

Exhibition of United Artists pictures has been resumed in Omaha, Neb., following the closing of deals between United Artists with Tri-States Theatre Corporation and Central States Theatre Corporation. The deal ordinarily would have been consummated last August but negotiations dragged for six months. The United Artist Omaha exchange has secured 120 dates in February alone from 20 Tri-States and 37 Central States theatres.

J. C. Jenkins Marks Four Score Years

Colonel John Curtis Jenkins, "Jaysee" to thousands of friends in the west who know him through his long contact with small town exhibition and, for the last 12 years, through his "Colyum" in EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD and its successor, MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on February 28th will celebrate his 80th birthday.

For many years the operator of a theatre in his home town, Neligh, Nebraska, Mr. Jenkins made a host of friends in the industry in his territory. In 1925 he became field representative for the HERALD and his reports, touching on life in general and exhibition in particular, later developed into the "Colyum," through which he made acquaintances throughout the English speaking world.

Expression of the regard in which the Colonel is held by exhibitors was given in July, 1929, when he was guest of honor at a convention of What the Picture Did For Me contributors at Detroit Lakes, Minn.

Chair Companies, RCA Show Profits; Eastman Dividend

Substantial profits are shown in the financial statements of American Seating Company and Heywood-Wakefield Company, manufacturers of seats for theatres and auditoriums, and by Radio Corporation of America, 50 per cent owner of Radio-Keith-Orpheum and full owner of RCA Photophone sound equipment, National Broadcasting, RCA Victor recordings and RCA Communications.

The directors of Eastman Kodak Company have declared a quarterly dividend of $1.50 on common stock, payable April 1st. In 1937 the company paid $1.50 on April 2nd, $2 quarterly in July and October and 50 cents extra on December 10th. On January 3, 1938, a quarterly dividend of $2 was paid.

For 1936 the company reported a net profit of $548,177. Sales were reported as being 23 per cent higher in 1937 than in the preceding year.

Current assets as of December 31, last, amounted to $3,901,199 and current liabilities were $943,104. This compares with current assets of $3,550,474 and current liabilities of $592,500 at end of 1936.

RCA Profit Estimated

The preliminary report of Radio Corporation and subsidiaries for the year ended Dec. 31, 1937, shows an estimated net profit of $9,000,000 after interest, depreciation, amortization of patents and goodwill, federal income taxes and surtax on undistributed profits, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to 41 cents a share on 13,853,415 no par shares of common stock. POLITICAL RIFT SPLITS PALESTINE'S RECOVERY

Proposed Tri-Partition, Immigration Restrictions and Increased Customs Fees Blamed

by ISAAC R. MOLHO
in Jerusalem

The disturbances in our territory with the economic depression and the political controversies concerning the tri-partition scheme, proposed to the League of Nations by Great Britain instead of the mandate considered as inoperative, and the provisional restrictions adopted by the Government against Jewish immigration, created difficulties also for the cinema business, which has appeared to be growing more and more prosperous.

In Jerusalem, Tel-Aviv and Haifa, incomes at the box offices have declined 25 to 35 per cent from those of previous years. In the strictly Arab area the decrease is greater.

Notwithstanding these reverses a theatre of more than 1000 seats, the Alhambra Cinema, was opened in Jaffa, and two large theatre buildings are being completed in Jerusalem, to be inaugurated the middle of this year.

Efforts are being made to improve the local newsreel Carmel. A committee to support and supervise this project was appointed in January by the culture department of the Jewish National Council.

The new version, in Hebrew, of the very popular Jewish play, "Hadi Buk," made in Polen, now being shown by Migdalor, at Tel-Aviv, has created the interest of our public and the Hebrew local press. There is a movement to further the dubbing of films in Hebrew and the promotion of original versions in Biblical language and foreign versions with adequate casts, from plays of great interest.

Muni Production Sought

Paul Muni, traveling in Europe, is reported to have manifested cordial sympathy toward the Hebrew "Habima," with a cast of world note. Mr. Muni will pay us a visit soon.

It is understood that negotiations will be opened with him for his appearance in a great Hebrew production. Perhaps Muni will personify Theodore Herzl, the late leader of the political Zionism movement and modern prophet of a Jewish State.

Last year, there were reports of similar discussions with another great Jewish star, Elisabeth Bergner, when she was visiting Jerusalem incognito.

The Palestine Orchestra, founded under the auspices of the world famous violinist Huberman, who obtained last year, under the supervision of Maestro Toscanini and others, a notable success by his concerts, will take a leading part in such schemes of production, it is expected.

The Palestine Government increased the customs duty on films at the beginning of this year from L.P.O.600 mils to L.P.I.250 mils, per kilogram, after awarding the license fees of the censorship board from L.P.I. to L.P. 4. per feature.

It is predicted that these fiscal increases will induce distributors to select pictures of higher standard.

On the other side, the Palestine Government has adopted the international agreement of free circulation of educational films. A drawback will be the custom duty required of films submitted for a certificate of the director of education, and the film censorship board, certifying that such films are suitable for educational purposes.

Hollywood Product Leads

The 1937-38 season began in our territory with absolute domination by Hollywood product, German films a poor second.

"Maytime," MGM running at the best house in Tel-Aviv, the Opera Mograby, broke all records, with full capacity shows for four weeks. More recently, Paul Muni surpassed the "Maytime" record when his "The Life of Emile Zola," Warner, played five weeks at the oldest cinema in Tel-Aviv, the Eden.

These great successes for Hollywood are opening a new era in the cinema business in Palestine, and have paved the way for adoption of a new policy by the large distributing companies in our market.

Instead of ruining cinema incomes by obliging the exhibitors to play pictures of insipid taste for our public, it seems easier now to obtain results with a selected and controlled release list, booked more than one week.

Theatre receipts from "San Francisco," "Good Earth" and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" are proving the value of this new understanding.

RKO Radio decided recently to open a branch in Palestine, to distribute its product directly. The same policy was agreed upon by Columbia, and shortly will be followed by United Artists and Grand National.

New Financing Halts Order On Grand National

Out of a series of legal moves in Los Angeles Federal Court in which three minor creditors attempted to force reorganization under Section 77b of the Federal Bankruptcy Act of Grand National Films, Inc., of New York, and Grand National Studios, Inc., of California came the disclosure this week that the companies have received new financing.

Explaining his order setting aside appointment of Lloyd Wright as temporary trustee and his order allowing the filing of the petition seeking reorganization, Federal Judge William P. James said that Phil N. Krasne, Grand National vice-president, declared in a chamber session last Friday that Edward Alperson, president, had wired from New York that new financing had been obtained by the companies and that the trustee appointment was premature.

Judge James, therefore, set February 21 for a hearing, giving Grand National time to make formal presentation of protests against the move of B. F. Zeidman Productions, Inc., Pacific Art and Title Studios, Inc., and Howard Anderson to instigate a reorganization of the firms.

The petition was filed on February 9th, and Judge James named Mr. Wright, Hollywood attorney active in film matters, as trustee. However, last Friday, after conferences with the attorneys for the petitioners, Mr. Krasne and Harry Dunn—last of the law firm of O'Melveny, Tuller and Myers, representing Grand National—Judge James rescinded both orders, and instructed Mr. Wright not to act as trustee.

Mr. Krasne charged that Grand National had not been given an opportunity to be heard before the court gave permission for the filing of the petition, and inasmuch as written consent of the companies' officers must be obtained for procedure under Section 77b, Judge James revoked the orders.

Invited to Inspect Books

Grand National executives, at a meeting in Hollywood Tuesday, invited a special creditors' committee to inspect all books of the companies and work out a reorganization plan without legal action. Phil Goldstone, who presided, told the group that the company has enough assets to pay off the outstanding $350,000 debts.

On February 21, three courses of action are open to the court, according to law.

First, the court may dismiss the action entirely.

Second, the court may appoint a trustee over the protests of the companies.

Third, the court may order liquidation of the assets of the firms.

In bringing the federal court action, the Zeidman firm declared Grand National owed it $360; Pacific Title, $755, and Mr. Anderson, who does optical printing, $268. Attached to the petition was a consolidated loss and profit sheet of the two corporations for the 34-week period ending Nov. 27, 1937, which declared the net loss to be $546,604.

Gross film rentals for Grand National-owned films, pictures distributed for outside producers and pictures of outside distributors were said to total $1,560,752. But of that amount, $650,341 was said to have been applied to recoup costs of Grand National-owned pictures, $407,474 went to outside producers, and $24,667 went to outside distributors, leaving a net film rental of $478,269.

Added to that amount, for obtaining the gross income of $820,329, were: sales of advertising accessories, $63,734; sales of foreign prints, $29,695; studio income and rentals, $201,196; and other items which totaled $342,059.

Cost and expense items included the following: Branch sales salaries and expenses, $403,782; branch office salaries and expenses, $206,887; home office salaries and expenses, $234,792; advertising and exploitation, $75,550; studio operating expenses, $178,447, and foreign department expenses, $44,693.

From London came word that a number of members of the staff of Associated British Film Distributors, which handles Grand National product in England, received notice of termination of contract.

Dull Days

With film finance holding back until the Quota Act is ratified and made law, producers unwilling to take any risks until the future is crystal clear, and renters bluntly indifferent, at the moment, to their legal requirements, British production continues in the doldrums.

Out of the industry's seventy-four stages only eleven are occupied at the time of writing, with as many production companies in meagre activity. Nor do these films represent any considerable amount of money, for production budgets are, with the exception of Korda's "Over the Moon," modest. In the majority of instances they are under the £10,000 mark.

At Denham but one of the seven stages is occupied, with the dilatory "Over the Moon" started by William K. Howard at the beginning of November last, continued by Korda on his return, and now being polished off by Thornton Freeland.

On Pinewood's five stages one is occupied, with the Gaumont British production "Crackerjack," though "Pygmalion" is scheduled to start under Gabriel Pascal's production lead in the not far distant future.

The giant studios of Associated British at Elstree have two occupants, Paul Stein, who is directing "Lovers' Knot" for Associated British release, and Erich Pommer, whose director, Tim Whelan, is at work on the Laughton opus "St. Martin's Lane."

The Ealing studios of Associated Talking Pictures are completely dark. Warner First National's lot at Teddington stands idle until the Quota Act is ratified and law. Twickenham, Welwyn, Hammersmith, Amalgamated and the Rock stages at Elstree are without occupants.

At Sound City only one stage is in use where John Baxter is making the United Kingdom production "Rhythm Off My Heart." Stoll's stages at Cricklewood are both at work with Laurence Huntington making "Bad Boy" and Viking Productions busy with "Take Off My Hat."

At the Fox British Studios, Wembly, a modest quota offering, Alex Bryce's "Last Barricade" is in process of production. Beaconsfield's British Lion Studios have for tenant Herbert Wilcox, producing the Gordon Harker comedy "No Parking" for British Lion release. At the Islington Studios of Gainsborough work goes on with the Will Hay comedy "Convict 99." Argyle-Butcher have "Little Dolly Daydream" at Walton.

And that is the sum total of British production at the time of writing—a meagre display when consideration is taken of the 150 odd production companies which claim statutory existence and the seventy-four sound stages which might be active.

It is claimed by the labor unions that 80 per cent of their membership is on the unemployment registers reaching a net total of over 8,000. Spurred to protest against a state of affairs which they regard as inexcusable and which has made them the sorriest victims, they held a mass demonstration on the day upon which the Quota Act committee reassembled at the House of Commons to plead their case for higher quota percentages and better wages. Meanwhile the prospects of an immediate improvement in the situation are remote.

The launching of the Montgolfier Balloon, a scene from London Films' "Conquest of the Air," depicting the progress of flight from the legend of Icarus to modern aviation and a forecast of the future. The film is directed by Alexander Shaw.

"Germinal" Set

Joseph Von Sternberg, whose sole directorial essay in England, "I Claudius," was rendered abortive by the accident sustained by Merle Oberon, plans to make a picture in England this year.

He will produce and probably direct a film version of Zola's "Germinal," using the Rock Studios at Elstree for the production.

At Cricklewood

"Bedtime Story" is the title of a film which goes into production at the Stoll Studios, Cricklewood, in the near future, under the banner of Admiral Films. The story has been adapted from the stage comedy by Walter Ellis which has had a very successful London run.

Donovan Pedelty will direct, with Ernest Palmer, who photographed "Edge of the World" at the cameras.

In the cast will be Lesley Wareing and Ian Collins, with Elliot Makeham and Michel Bazalgette in support.

Scouts to Star

British Sea Scouts are the stars of a new British film made by British Fine Arts Pictures at the Stoll Studios, Cricklewood, London. The film is titled "Chips" and has been produced and directed by Edward Godal.

Playing lead in the production is Tony Wickham, boy who made a West End hit in the stage production of "The Housemaster," and the cast includes vaudeville and radio stars Dave Burnaby, Billy Merson and Peter Dawson.

No release has been arranged for.

"Mr. Penny" Signed

"Mr. Penny," noted figure of English radio, and as popular with the masses here as Amos and Andy on the other side of the Atlantic, will come to the screen in a film to be made by British National Pictures.

Penny, meek middle class clerk, who, accompanied by his inevitable umbrella, is constantly stumbling into drama, will be played by Richard Goolden, creator of the radio character. Vic Oliver, Hermione Gingold and Patrick Barr will be in the cast.

The film is being made at the Welwyn Studios, Hertfordshire, with David Macdonald in charge.

FILMS ACT ON FLOOR OF COMMONS; PRODUCERS SEEK QUOTA INCREASE

Third Reading Preceding Vote Expected Next Week; CEA and KRS Discuss Classification at Round Table Meeting

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The new Films Act, having gone before the membership of the House of Commons after months of consideration in committee, is expected to reach its third reading next week after which a vote will be taken and the measure sent to the House of Lords. Should that body disapprove the bill in any particular it will be returned to the Commons for further consideration. The present distributors' quota will expire March 31st and the exhibitors' quota in September.

Although committee consideration of the bill has ended opponents of its present provisions have not been stilled. Representatives of the producers' group are canvassing members of the House of Lords, demanding an increase in all the quota percentages and greater powers for the Films Council which is to be set up under the terms of the new legislation.

During the wait between readings in the Commons the Government was petitioned by 128 members of Parliament, headed by Sir Adrian Baillie, to strengthen the Act so as to insure "protection against foreign domination."

Amendments to be proposed at the third reading by labor will aim at an increase in the minimum British labor costs to 85 per cent and at a requirement that no film can be registered until all costs and salaries are paid.

During the final committee session last week Oliver Stanley, Broad of Trade president, was bombarded with proposals for amendments, some seeking an increase in the quota percentages. He refused to consider an increase in the distributors' percentage but agreed to an increase in the exhibitor quota from 10 to 12½ per cent. At the same time he accepted a suggestion that after the first year of operation the new Films Council might consider a revision of the exhibitors' quota percentages. The limit would be an increase from 25 to 30 per cent at the close of the 10-year period.

Mr. Stanley told the committee that when the measure was brought to the floor of the House he would introduce two changes, one concerned with reciprocity and the other related to the amount of quota rights to be obtained on especially expensive films.

Round Table Parley

What may prove to have been either a council of permanent peace or an eleventh hour failure to avert war, was held last week between selected members of the Kinematograph Renters Society and the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, when a joint conference or round table was held to thrash out the major problems now separating, like a no man's land, the man who shows the films and the man who distributes them.

The conference came as a result of the recent sharpening of the exhibitor renter conflict over rentals and the grading of films into "A" and "B" categories, and followed preliminary talks by the presidents of the respective associations. The grading of films into two categories by the Kinematograph Renters Society, and their determination to book films in the former class only on a percentage basis has had immediate effect of embittering the exhibitor attitude, and above all of cementing together in one rebel front both circuits and independents, forces previously split apart by the renters' booking policies.

At last week's conference the respective presidents of the two opposing bodies stated the case for and the case against grading. For the renters, David Griffiths, chief of First National this side, explained that it was their intention to put an end to the rot of overlong programs, and to prevent the increasing practice of exhibitors, not only circuits but independents too, booking two high grade or "A" films in one program. Countering this, came Charles Metcalfe, president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, an independent showman who claimed that the grading of films had not done what it was intended should be done, that renters were themselves still booking two "A" films if percentages were paid, and that it had not limited in the slightest degree present program lengths. On the other hand the new policy merely increased film rentals and swelled the coffers of renters at the expense of the exhibitor.

The meeting, following piously expressed exhibitor hopes that much good could, and probably would be done by frank round table discussions of present difficulties, wore an air of superficial tolerance and bonhomie. That it masked a coldly skeptical attitude is none the less a fact.

Despite the hopes of peace and the intention of both sides to achieve a peaceful settlement, the underlying currents are those of war.

For the present, however, axes are buried and battle array set aside. A subcommittee consisting of five renters and five exhibitors was appointed to go into the question of grading and will meet for discussions on February 10th. On the exhibitor side are Mr. Metcalfe, N. A. Nyman, realist intellectual of the group and next president; John Maxwell, chief of Europe's most powerful circuit, and A. W. Jarratt of Gaumont. For the renters, Mr. Griffiths, honest and confidence-inspiring president; Sam Eckman, statesman of the group, and Murray Silverstone of United Artists are included.

On the exhibitor side the most significant aspect is the alliance of exhibitor and independent forces. This, in itself, is an augury of the determination of the showmen to shelve temporarily, domestic differences, in order to present a united front to the common enemy. No previous action on the part of the renters, they claim, has had such a solidly cementing effect on the exhibitor ranks, an effect which could not have been achieved by years of internal campaigning.

Back of this circuit-independent solidity lies the massed figure of organized labor. The labor unions, most conservative of all proletarian and radical bodies, bent on disarming the foreign enemy, and driven to alliance with their capitalistic foes of yesterday, by the increasing menace of trade unemployment, have offered their services in the battle, and are part of a carefully prepared and already matured plan which exhibitors intend to spring on their renter opposition should the talks fail in their aim of achieving a pacific solution.

What this plan of action is, has been carefully guarded from the outside eye, but inner exhibitor circles are emphatic that not only is it drastic, but that it is comprehensive, and that it can be put into effect at a moment's notice.

That exhibitors, however, may not have it all their own way is clear when one considers the present halt to British production, with next to nothing on the stocks when the present reserve of British films runs out. Deprived of this bargaining power both circuits and independents must face "that merciless figure the American renter" with a considerably depleted armoury.

Previously, claim the independents, they were forced into a second and third run position by the circuits. Now with the latter saddled with equally difficult problems of supply and of rentals, their plight is not much less happy. Hence the new alliance.

The exhibitors have written to the Chancellor of the Exchequer asking a cut in the tax on seats between 6d, now tax free, and 9d.

$25,650,000 in Taxes

During the year ending March 31st, 1937, British cinemas paid over to the exchequer £5,130,000 ($25,650,000) in entertainment tax.

Import duties on films during that period netted £172,600 ($863,000).

COUNCILS TO STUDY 'SNOW WHITE' RATING

The British censors' rating of "Snow White and Seven Dwarfs" which at present prohibits children under 16 from seeing the picture, may be changed as a result of the decision of the County Councils of London, Middlesex, Surrey and Essex to preview the film with a view toward a possible change in the rating.

The classification may be changed to "universal" by the council decision, thus permitting children to see it without restriction, or it may be placed in the "horrific" category, a distinct possibility in view of the censor declaration that there are certain scenes unsuitable for children.

Paramount Contest For House Managers

Managers of theatres playing Paramount pictures will become active participants in the forthcoming "Paramount on Parade Around the World" drive under the terms of a plan evolved by Neil F. Agnew and John Hicks, Jr., vice-presidents in charge of distribution in the United States and foreign fields, respectively. A series of prizes will be awarded for the most effective advertising and publicity campaigns conducted during the course of the 13 weeks from February 27th to May 28th.

Both domestic and foreign fields will be included. In the United States there will be five divisions of competition, four based on the size of the particular city involved and the fifth for neighborhood theatres and subsequent runs.

Court Orders Hearing on Time Injunction Action

Time, Inc., was directed this week by Justice Bernard L. Shientag to show cause in the New York supreme court why a temporary injunction pending trial should not be issued to restrain exhibition of the March of Time reel which deals with the National Maritime Union. The order was obtained by Frederick N. Myers and Jerome King, chairman and secretary of the union, and Clegg Lowder, James Lampkin and Robert Stewart, seamen, who are the plaintiffs.

The union seeks $200,000 damages and the members ask $50,000 each,

The union contends that the film holds their organization up to contempt and ridicule and impedes its activities. The seamen, who are under indictment in the Brooklyn Federal court for attempted mutiny on the S. S. Algic, also allege that wide exhibition of the picture will prevent them from securing a fair trial.

The plaintiffs allege that the film misrepresents them as demanding watermelon, beer and tomatoes, and gives a false impression of their activities. It is also charged that a telegram to Joseph P. Kennedy, former chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, was misquoted. Papers in the suit have not yet been filed.

Attorney Sues B & K

A $50,000 libel action against Balaban and Katz has been filed in Circuit court, Chicago, by Otis M. Gallant, attorney. He charges his name and picture, appearing in ambulance-chasing stories in the Chicago Times, were used in "blowups" which were displayed in various B & K theatre lobbies in an advertising campaign for a film called "Torture Money."

Reduction Sought

Freddie Bartholomew petitioned Superior Court, Los Angeles, for a reduction in the 20 per cent of his $100,000 annual salary which he pays his father. The boy actor contended he pays his father $20,000, Federal and State income taxes take $67,000 and his agent gets $10,000.

Writ Sought Against Theatre

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against the Trio Manhattan Corporation, operators of a theatre in New York. The petition which alleged that the corporation was insolvent was filed by Columbia, Twentieth Century-Fox and Loew's, Inc., as creditors.

Telephoto Suit Dropped

A $900,000 triple damage suit brought by the Telephoto Corporation claiming violation of the anti-trust laws by limitation of licenses to exhibit films was marked settled and discontinued as to one defendant, Erpi, and discontinued as to Western Electric and American Telephone and Telegraph Company, also defendants, in the United States District court in New York. The suit was started in May, 1934.

World Pictures has acquired the American distribution rights to the French film, "Grand Illusion."

Mae West Threatened in Court Contempt Action

Mae West this week was ordered by Superior Judge Emmett Wilson in Los Angeles to show cause why she should not be adjudged in contempt of court for refusing to answer questions put to her during the deposition hearing in the $1,000,000 suit brought against her and Paramount by Mark Linder, writer, over "She Done Him Wrong."

Miss West on the advice of attorney refused to disclose her financial arrangements with Paramount.

Mr. Linder is suing over the alleged failure of Miss West to abide by the terms of an asserted contract under which she agreed to split with him the profits from the picture. He claims that he is the author of the play from which the film was adapted.

Milestone Suit Filed

Lewis Milestone this week in Los Angeles filed suit against Hal Roach studio seeking $81,666 back pay, penalties and damages in an action which invokes the state law requiring employer to pay employe, penalty not to exceed thirty days pay, if worker is discharged without being paid the salary due. Mr. Milestone said that Mr. Roach owes him $5,000 a week back pay and $21,666 penalties and seeks $55,000 damages.

BOOK REVIEW

HOW TO USE TALKING PICTURES IN BUSINESS, by Lyne S. Metcalfe and H. G. Christensen. With a foreword by Roy S. Durstine. New York: Harper & Brothers. 5½x8½. 241 pp., and index. Price $3.50.

This new publication is at once a highly respectable addition to the library of the motion picture and an exhibit in evidence of the dominant place the motion picture is assuming, perhaps inevitably, among media of expression. Developed for amusement, by the money of the amusement business, the motion picture goes on to conquer other fields, apparently, by sheer force of its greater convenience and persuasiveness. Education holds out a tentative hand to it. Business has welcomed it gratefully. And Messrs. Metcalfe and Christensen have accordingly endeavored to guide Business in the use of it.

They have endeavored conscientiously. Their subject is one about which ignorance can impressively phrase itself; and the glorified nomenclature and esoteric charts of modern Business might have suggested that such phrasing was sufficient. The authors, however, have brought to their task sound knowledge of both motion picture technology and practical business processes.

They have done so really comprehensively, too. Naturally the effectiveness of a commercial film must depend on other factors than those which can be dealt with in a book; but in this book is well ordered guidance for those who want to acquaint themselves with the business uses to which motion pictures can be put, with the processes involved, and with the pitfalls, sometimes costly indeed, which those processes may lay before the innocent.—G. S.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 102

Question No. 102 was: (A) Is current leakage necessarily set up by grounding one wire of a circuit? (B) Do earth grounds offer variable resistance? (C) May both positive and negative of a circuit be thoroughly grounded, yet little or no leakage occur? (D) If a test lamp, bell or magneto be connected across a ground, will the lamp light, or the bell ring?

The following made acceptable answers: C. Rau and S. Evans; C. Oldham; L. Cimikoski; J. R. Prater; L. F. Hayes; W. Limmroth; J. A. Zachritz; W. E. Edmonds; M. and J. Devoy; E. H. Toedte; H. Edwards; W. Schoeneman; J. J. Petersen; C. A. Whitlock; T. and W. Turk; E. F. and M. Wentworth; A. C. Greene; K. L. Brant; D. Coates; B. B. Hornstein and R. R. Jacobs; H. Bunker; R. and K. Wells; K. Erwin; D. and W. Porter; T. D. Williams; F. H. S. and P. Dalbey; H. A. Ames and F. E. Dorp; L. G. Simmons; R. M. Schnider; P. and L. Felt; M. D. McGuire; R. H. Carter; L. G. Dillon and W. B. F. and G. Brown; H. T. Rainer; S. L. Maxwell; S. U. Lamont and P. F. Maxwell; L. B. Daniels; J. M. Kelner and A. W. Baxter; L. R. Whitmore; O. L. Goldstein and M. Samuels; A. D. Lonby; W. V. Henderson and H. M. Jackson; B. L. Bunt and W. R. Davis; L. Johnson; W. R. Matthews and J. R. Davidson; B. and M. Walker; H. T. Plum and D. A. Shea; T. W. Redhouse; L. J. Rubin; H. T. Watkins and N. S. Reid; A. Leonard and G. T. Jones; L. D. Tomlinson.

To Section A, H. T. Rainer replies, "Current leakage will not necessarily occur when one wire of a circuit is grounded. There will be no current flow unless some wire of opposite polarity attached to the same power source, though not necessarily of the same circuit, be grounded, and the resistance of 'ground' (not necessarily through the earth itself, as the term is commonly employed) be low enough to enable the impressed voltage to force current through."

Almost all replies overlooked the fact that not only the opposite wire of the circuit involved must be considered, but also opposite polarities of all other circuits connected to the same generator.

(B) William Limmroth says, "Grounds offer variable resistance to current flow. If connection between points of grounding be through earth, such variations may be due to distance or other conditions. More or less moisture or current-carrying content of the earth will alter resistance."

H. Edwards replies, "Grounds through earth offer highly variable resistance. The points at which the opposite polarities are grounded may be close together or far apart. There may or may not be a metal pipe extending almost all of or any portion of the distance. The earth may be moist or dry. The earth may be highly impregnated with particles that will conduct current, or it may be largely of non-conducting material. Under each condition (and others) resistance to current flow would change. It might possibly be very slight or might be sufficient to prevent any flow of current at all."

T. and G. Turk put it thus: "Naturally, the resistance of a ground through earth may vary widely. For example, if the ground be in dry earth throughout and the earth be free from materials offering conductivity, the resistance will be very much higher than were the same length of ground damp or wet, or the earth heavily impregnated with materials offering conductivity.

"Or take a second case: Suppose we have a point of grounding in damp earth, or earth with conducting content as above suggested, and close to this point is a buried water main which passes within one foot or one yard of the second ground point. Further remarks seem unnecessary. As a matter of fact, conditions in grounds through earth may be almost anything. Resistance through them may be high enough to stop all current flow, or low enough to amount to almost a short circuit."

(C) L. Cimikoski says, "Both positive and negative polarities may be thoroughly grounded without current leakage. It is only necessary that resistance be high enough between the two points of grounding for impressed voltage to be unable to force current through."

J. A. Zachritz answers, "Yes, because for any one or a combination of reasons, resistance may be too high to permit the voltage to force current through."

(D) J. R. Prater answers, "If a test lamp, a bell or a magneto be connected across a ground, the lamp will light, or the bell will ring, provided resistance between points where opposite polarities are grounded be low enough to permit impressed voltage to force sufficient current through to operate the lamp or the battery or magneto bell."

H. Edwards answers, "If a test lamp be connected across a ground, its filament will not be affected if there be enough resistance between the points of grounding to either stop all current flow or cut it down until not enough flows to heat the filament to redness. If the resistance be low enough to permit more current to flow, the filament may become more red, white-hot or incandescent, according to the amount of such flow. If a battery-powered bell be used, the voltage will presumably be quite low, but exactly the same condition obtains as with the lamp. If sufficient current flows, the bell will ring, otherwise it will not. However, due to the extremely low voltage, a bell and battery is a very poor test for grounds.

"On the other hand, the magneto generates very high voltage; therefore it is most excellent for such tests. If the magneto bell does not ring (assuming the instrument and its connections to be in good order), it is safe to assume there is no ground insofar as concerns ordinary commercial voltage."

Lorentz Sees Exhibitor Profit In Field of 'Factual' Films

Producer of 'The River' Strongly Attacks Term 'Documentary'

A wide and almost untilled field within the present structure of the motion picture industry for the development of expository, non-fiction films of short feature length is envisioned by Pare Lorentz, film critic and producer, for the United States Department of Agriculture and the Farm Security Administration, of "The Plow That Broke the Plains" and, more recently, "The River."

Interviewed in a tiny office on Madison Avenue, New York, imposingly labeled "Farm Security Administration, Motion Picture Division," Mr. Lorentz's enthusiasm for his subject carried him even beyond the memory of a too recent encounter with a dentist.

He expressed a violent aversion for the term "documentary" as applied to the type of film under discussion, declaring emphatically, "It is far too dull a term for the medium we are using. There is a universal appeal," he continued, "for factual pictures and there is a great future for them within the present structure of the industry, particularly for exhibitors who would profit greatly from such subjects, produced and distributed at comparatively low cost."

Mr. Lorentz pointed out that at the moment he was not referring to pictures sponsored by the Federal Government, but rather to pictures of the same general type no matter under whose auspices they were made. The production and distribution of such pictures, he said, would not constitute competition with any present factor in the industry and shown in theatres they would clear overhead and make a profit.

Turning momentarily to his activities in behalf of the Administration he said wryly: "The industry will not agree, but we are not in competition with motion picture theatres nor with the producers and distributors." Both his pictures, he said, are distributed free to exhibitors and although they are loaned to churches, clubs and civic organizations of all kinds for exhibition an attempt is made to restrict such use to territories where they are not shown in theatres.

Because the Government bureau under which Mr. Lorentz produced his pictures is operated on a year to year basis with no provision for a permanent establishment he said he had no further plans for Government sponsored production.

Communists and the DAR

In support of his contention that non-fiction pictures, of the type that would be called documentary if there was a satisfactory definition for that term, have a universal appeal to a wide cross section of the public Mr. Lorentz cited two urgent requests for prints of "The Plow That Broke the Plains" which were received on the same day, one from a chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution and the other from a committee of the Communist party. In a similar vein was the instance of the film being shown in a burlesque house in New York on the same day it was being exhibited to students of Vassar College.

More than 4,000 theatrical showings of "The Plow" to date, he said, further attest the appeal inherent in the type of film. The larger circuits, he continued, at first were entirely unconvinced of the picture's drawing power, but after a few scattered showings they received enough requests and comment to justify booking the film for all their theatres. "The Plow" was distributed by Government offices in New York, Chicago and Washington, but "The River" is being handled, free of charge, by Paramount.

In reference to English "documentary" films (he preferred to use the term in quotations) Mr. Lorentz explained that commercial companies, particularly public utilities, barred from radio advertising by the Government monopoly of that medium, sponsored the production of short feature pictures, not necessarily about their own products, depending on the prestige of having their name associated with them for institutional promotion.

In this connection Mr. Lorentz thought a similar system in this country would be dangerous to the industry because it would represent the invasion of the theatrical screen by commercial advertising, a condition which he said was approached dangerously in the sale of radio programs to commercial sponsors by Hollywood producing companies.

In his opinion the production and distribution of the films could be undertaken with profit by small units which could operate with little overhead other than the cost of raw stock and salaries for camera crews. For subjects he suggested such matters as complete pictorial records of various cities, places or industries and of social phenomena which are not practical for inclusion in the ordinary range of Hollywood's efforts.

That the small unit is ideal for such projects, Mr. Lorentz pointed out, was proven in the production of "The River." With scenario and continuity arranged a crew set out to film the Mississippi. The vicissitudes of the weather and other delays put the crew six weeks behind schedule, a lapse which was never made up. Such a delay, he reasoned, would not be possible for a large and unwieldly production company with high overhead and a definite schedule to be met.

With details of the distribution of "The River" through Paramount completed Mr. Lorentz is now on a fishing trip off the west coast of Mexico. He will return to New York in the spring to lecture in a course being conducted by the New School for Social Research on the documentary film "as history and journalism."

ACADEMY OPPOSES DOCUMENTARY AWARD

The Awards Committee of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences this week rejected a recommendation of short subject producers that a special classification for documentary and educational films be established in the short subjects division for the Tenth Annual Awards.

The committee action was taken because not enough such films have been made to justify inclusion of the new classification. The Government-sponsored documentary film, "The River," would have been included in this classification. It was entered in the short subjects competition but was rejected by producers from existing classification.

20th-Fox Branches Report '38-9 Sales

Twenty-three branches of Twentieth Century-Fox, including two in Canada, have reported sales of 1938-'39 product contracts, according to a tabulation made by the company. Many managers reported that they were hopeful of going to the annual sales meeting in Kansas City, April 1 and 2, with new records for pre-convention sales of subsequent season product.

The Kansas City meeting has not been designated a convention since not more than 85 representatives of the United States and Canada sales staff are expected to attend, including home office members, division and district managers, branch heads, and studio representatives. The meeting will be confined to those mentioned because selling for the new season is already well under way and policies are being explained to salesmen in the field.

All branches are conducting a drive to maintain playdates and collections on a quota level set by the home office for this year's contracts.

The company will limit its distribution next year to its own product, according to present plans being shaped by company executives in connection with the announcement to be made at the convention.

The company expects to make the same number as this year, 52 on the regular program. In addition, 12 more were scheduled this year, including four in the "Outdoor" series and two in the "Tarzan" series, both produced by Sol Lesser; four Will Rogers reissues and two Eddie Cantor specials. The Lesser affiliation will be discontinued at the end of the current season, it was said.

The company will also make its own short subjects, planning 52 one-reelers, to be released on the basis of one a week. They will be produced by Truman Talley in New York. Plans have been completed for the construction of a studio adjacent to the Movietone News Building at 54th Street and 10th Avenue, New York. Educational, which has released through Twentieth Century-Fox, is negotiating for another outlet.

The company will hold a European sales convention at the Hotel George V in Paris, May 1 and 2, which will be attended by Sidney R. Kent, president; Walter J. Hutchinson, foreign manager; a studio representative, and probably Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board. Whether the annual sales convention of the British organization will precede or follow that of the continental organization has not been decided.

This year's meeting in Kansas City will be held nearly two months prior to the company's customary convention date, thus giving Twentieth Century-Fox an early start in officially launching its new selling season.

If the Gracie Fields-Victor McLaglen-Brian Donlevy production tentatively titled "He Was Her Man" is released this season, the regular program will be increased to 53. Although two Eddie Cantor pictures were scheduled, there will be no second Cantor starring vehicle available, but a second special of equal magnitude may be produced and released to those who purchased the specials contracts.

"Zola" Award Given

In a ceremony at the Warner Brothers studio in Hollywood this week the Minneapolis Journal, through its film editor, Merle Potter, presented its annual awards for the "best" picture, "The Life of Emile Zola," and the "best performance, by Paul Muni in the title role of that picture, to Henry Blanke, who represented the company, and Donald Crisp, who received the award for Muni, now on vacation in Europe.

NEW DANISH BILL LIMITS IMPORTS AND PROFITS, BARS BLOCK BOOKING

by KRIS WINTHER
in Copenhagen

The Minister of Justice in Denmark, Mr. K. K. Steincke, has presented a bill to the Folketing ("House of Commons") calling for entire revision of the laws controlling the motion picture industry in Denmark and for a revolution of the working conditions of exhibition. As Mr. Steincke is known as a man of will, the bill in all probability will be passed in its entirety.

In the introduction to his bill Mr. Steincke refers to the commitee appointed in 1933 for discussion of the institution of a Central Office for Import of Films and Preparations for the Encouragement of Danish Production and Exhibition of Pictures with Cultural Value. This committee was appointed in December, 1933, and reported on its findings in October, 1937. The Minister of Justice bases his bill upon these findings and upon the suggestions offered by the committee in connection therewith, but every point has been sharpened to a considerable degree.

The present system of licensing exhibitors will be maintained almost unchanged. This means that the license is to be granted by the Minister of Justice in cooperation with the county. The license may be granted either to the township itself or to an individual. Under certain circumstances the license may be granted to a Danish producer in order to further home production, this, however, on condition that the pictures produced are in keeping with a set standard both culturally and artistically. Finally, in very rare cases the license may be given to national organizations with social or educational purposes.

Only under very special conditions will an exhibition license be granted to a person or group owning, representing, employed by or financially interested in a company producing or distributing pictures. This, however, does not apply to Danish producers.

The personal requirements in order to obtain a license also have been changed. Hitherto the demand has been "sufficient understanding of the motion picture industry," but the Minister of Justice claims that several of the best licensees have been found outside the trade. Hence the requirements now are that the licensee "must be domiciled in this country and be in possession of sufficient artistic and business abilities to operate a motion picture house."

One more change that will make the exhibitor's outlook still more unstable is the one concerning the period for which a license is issued. Under the present system a licensee holds the license until death or that time when he himself desires to withdraw from the business, but if the bill is passed as written a license will be valid for only five years at a time. The license of course may be renewed at the end of each five year period but the exhibitor never can be definitely sure of this, particularly because the licenses, judging by former practice, seem to be used sometimes as political favours and at times as a kind of remuneration from the government for outstanding achievement in some field of art. This eliminates the possibility of inheriting a license, but the bill makes an attempt at ameliorating this by stating that the widow of a licensee may apply for the license "on an even footing with all other applicants," which of course doesn't say much when you think it over.

Distributors Must Be Danish

Sections 15 to 18 are perhaps those which are of greatest interest for the motion picture industry outside of Denmark itself, since they are concerned with the rules and regulations binding distributors of motion pictures in Denmark. In order to be a distributor a person must fulfill the same requirements as the exhibitor (nothing is however said about "artistic and business abilities"). In all corporations or limited liability company each responsible member must live up to these standards.

In stock companies and other companies of limited liability operating in this country the managers and the majority of the board of directors must be able to answer to these demands: they must be Danish citizens, domiciled within the country, not under 21 years of age, not under guardianship, nor have compromised their rights as a citizen. Foreign stock companies or limited liability companies may operate as distributors in Denmark only in case a branch office is registered at the stock company registry, and in this case the manager of the branch office must comply with the demands above outlined.

Imports Limited

Individuals or companies locally engaged in producing motion pictures shall henceforth be permitted to import foreign pictures only to the extent of the minimum required to further the sale of Danish pictures in other countries. All Danish productions, in cases where the producer himself is not engaged in distribution, must be distributed through the state distributing company, an entirely new institution which springs into being through this bill.

No distributor may sell or rent a picture to an exhibitor for its first showing in this country before the exhibitor has seen the picture. Nor may a distributor resort to selling pictures in blocks or in any other way make use of any one picture as a lever to force other pictures into the house taking the production. In other words each picture must be booked individually and entirely upon its own merits.

State Distributing Company

The state is to organize a "Film Central" to obtain and distribute pictures for schools and other motion pictures that have educational value. Further, the Central is to assist in the development in a proper direction of the showing of pictures in this country through importation and distribution of such films as shall be considered culturally or artistically valuable. Finally, this Central will have a monopoly on the distribution of all Danish films other than those produced by such companies as have their own department for distribution. This probably will be most remunerative for the State Distributing Company, since Danish productions, no matter how worthless they may be in any other aspect, always are sure-fire box office successes.

Financing of State Distributing Company

Nothing definite has been stated regarding the appointment of the manager of this new Central, as this is to be determined by the Minister of Justice in collaboration with a special "Film Board," another new creation under the bill.

The budget for the State Distributing Company is to be placed on the State budget every year. In case the Central should show a profit, the surplus is to be turned over to the "Film Fund" (another offspring of this rather prolific bill), which in turn is to assist the Central in covering running expenses and a possible deficit. As additional support, all proceeds from the censorship department (through fees paid by the distributors) are to be given to the new Central after the expenses incurrred by the censorship department itself have been covered.

Beyond the change in the use of the net surplus, no notworthy revision is to be made in the department of censorship. Sections 24 and 25 deal with the creation of a "Film Board," consisting of seven members appointed by the Minister of Justice after nomination by seven different groups, namely: one each by the Minister of Education, the Teachers Association of Denmark, the Union of Folk-Schools, the Labourers' Educational Union of Denmark, the Joint Association of Denmark's Motion Picture Exhibitors, and by the Danish Actors Union and Danish Playwrights Association jointly. No mention seems to be made of the procedure of nomination of the seventh member. The Minister of Justice selects from the seven members a chairman and a vice-chairman. All appointments are to be valid for four years. All members to be paid through fees.

DENMARK ACTS TO AID OWN FILMS

Duties of Film Board

The Film Board is to make a close study of the development within the industry in foreign countries, paying especial attention to the cultural or artistic value of pictures being produced. It is thus to heighten the standards of the industry in this country by giving advice to the newly instituted Film Central and to all other distributors operating in Denmark.

The Film Board shall further control the new Film Central in its operations both in matters of art and finance. The Board is to determine whether a picture shall be exempted from taxation and shall also be the supreme court of appeal from decisions of the censorship department to the Ministry of Justice.

Limiting the Exhibitor's Profit

No changes are to be made in the existing license fees but as Mr. Steincke had intended doing as long as half a year ago, a heavy impost will be laid upon all exhibitors showing a net profit of over Kr.10,000 a year (approximately $2,200). In determining the net gain for the year a reasonable amount may first be deducted for depreciation or reserves, up to 6 per cent of the capital invested by the exhibitor. The net gain then is fixed by taking the average of the profit in the last three years, however taking the last year's profit especially into consideration when this is lower than the profit in the preceding two years. The exhibitor must then on his profit for the year pay fees according to the schedule shown in the box on this page.

This scale will bring about quite a reduction in the incomes of the exhibitor running the bigger houses. The bill itself cites a few examples of how this new taxation will work. An exhibitor netting Kr.20,000 a year will have to turn over Kr.4,250 to the Film-Fund and may retain about 70 per cent of his year's earnings. The exhibitor showing a profit of Kr.30,000 is assessed Kr.11,500 or about 35 per cent of his surplus for the year. The exhibitor whose initiative has brought his earnings up to Kr.75,000 is taxed approximately 60 per cent and may retain exactly Kr.29,750 for his efforts. One exhibitor not mentioned in the bill reputedly netted Kr.125,000 during the past year. If the bill had been passed a year ago, this executive would have been permitted to keep Kr.42,250 of his earnings, in other words not quite 30 per cent. A thorough study of the proposed system of assessment leads one to believe that the prime motive of the Minister of Justice is to quash private initiative.

Exemption from Assessment

Any individual or company having been granted a license to exhibit motion pictures on the basis that the proceeds are to be utilized as a support to said person's or persons' production of the motion pictures within the country and within the set cultural and artistic standards, will be exempted from this new form for taxation. This decision will protect the production company "Palladium," whose latest pictures would only with difficulty be proved to have a connection with "culture or art." Mr. Bauder, the Czar of the Danish motion picture industry, controls "Nordisk Film A/S" that has been turning out pictures far above the average Danish standard.

Aim of "Film Fund"

All moneys raised through this new assessment are to be gathered into a fund to promote production of domestic pictures having educational, cultural and artistic values.

The fund is first to build up a reserve amounting to one million kroner, after which the fund really starts to work. It has been computed that the assessments planned will bring in about Kr.800,000 (approximately $175,0000), most of which is to be used in the service of the oft-mentioned artistic and cultural pictures according to the following rules:

Support will be given to production or importation of purely educational pictures and to any arrangements furthering the use of motion pictures in the field of education, and to product publicizing Denmark or Danish enterprizes. The fund also is to cover all expenses incurred by the newly appointed Film Board and to cover any possible loss incurred by the new Film Central. The remainder is to be turned over to the Minister of Education, who will be authorized to use these moneys as support to artists and scientists and also for support to (Yes, you guessed it!) artistic, cultural and scientific enterprises.

Comes Into Force April 1

The final sections deal with exhibitors operating under licenses granted under the former system but not eligible for licenses under the new law. These shall be permitted to keep their licenses and renew them according to the old rules and regulations. The same will hold true in the cases of widows of exhibitors, however with the amendment that the license will be withdrawn if and when she remarries.

The bill, if and when passed, is to be enforceable from April 1st this year. The suggested assessment would be paid the first time on the basis of the earnings of 1938 but in the first year only one half of the assessment is to be paid.

No one within the motion picture trade is at all in doubt regarding passage of the bill. It is regarded as already a law. Mr. Steincke on former occasions has forced his bills unamended through both houses, even in the face of opposition. In this case there will hardly be any opposition to speak of, as the exhibitors are too few in number to raise any sentiment against the bill here in Denmark. Furthermore, the attitude of the Danish public in general towards the motion picture trade is that anything connected with films provides an easy way of attaining an income far above the reasonable.

License System Proves Boomerang

The oddest feature of the entire bill is probably the oft repeated expression "artistic and cultural value." No definition is offered, and apparently only Mr. Steincke himself is infallible in the matter of determining what pictures may claim these qualities, for although the new Film Board is to act in advisory capacity, the reader knows the court of highest appeal is to be the Minister of Justice.

The entire license system originated in an effort to give private initiative an opportunity by keeping large (especially foreign) trusts out of the business and quashing all attempts to establish large circuits. Now the license system opens the door for this new bill to obliterate the last remnant of reason for showing private initiative. The question now being discussed in trade circles is whether this is the first step towards making the entire motion picture industry a state monopoly that finally will take over the theatres in the country and appoint managers to run them for the State. If this is the case, then the new bill most most certainly has led the Minister of Justice a long stride forward in his plans.

CENSORS REMOVE "ROAD BACK" BAN

The Universal production "The Road Back," banned by the French censorship committee a few months ago, has been accorded a visa after a few deletions and is at present being shown at the Max Linder cinema in Paris.

The French branch of Warner Brothers has denied that "The Life of Emile Zola" has been banned by the censors. The film has not been presented to the censors, it was said, and hence no decision has been made. When the film was first discussed in Paris it was feared that its treatment of the vehemently discussed Dreyfus case, which once divided all France into two camps, might reawaken passions not yet entirely dead.

The censors refused a visa for the dubbing of "Dead End" which had been showing in the original version at the Biaritz theatre on the Champs Elysées.

St. Cloud Circuit Gets Fourth House

The St. Cloud Amusement Corporation, which is headed by Frank C. Walker, president of the Comerford Circuit, this week acquired the Sussex theatre, Sussex, N. J., increasing the company's holdings to four. The others are the St. Cloud and Washington, Washington, and the Belvedere, Belvedere, all in New Jersey.

The Comerford Circuit is a Paramount partner in a number of theatres, but the St. Cloud organization is not connected with Comerford, it is said. C. E. Smith is secretary of the company.

Leon Shusterman of the Roxy theatre, Perth Amboy, N. J., has taken over the Cameo, Yonkers, to be operated by the Terry Lee Theatre Corporation. The Cameo formerly was operated by Weinberg Amusement Corporation.

The Lindy theatre, Brooklyn, formerly operated by Graham Amusement Corporation, has been acquired by Lindy Amusement Corporation, of which Rose Albert is president and Meyer Friedman vice-president.

The River Theatre Corporation has taken over the Granada, Pearl River, N. Y., formerly operated by Irving Sherman. Herbert Markfield is president of the corporation.

The Strand, East Orange, N. J., has been acquired by Prygos Theatre Corporation. Peter Mann is president.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

First National

BACK IN CIRCULATION: Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien—This picture pleased my crowd. A lot of fun. Played January 6-8.—Rubel Hutchings, Allen Theatre, Allen, Neb. Small town patronage.

DANCE, CHARLIE, DANCE: Stuart Erwin, Jean Muir—This was doubled with "Michael O'Halloran" and was by far the weaker of the two pictures. Somehow the entire picture does not ring true and as entertainment it is just fair.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HOTEL: Dick Powell, Frances Langford— This was a swell show and did a nice business for me. It had a nice trailer that sold it and I did the best weekend business I have done for months with it. No complaints and good business and what more can you ask?—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

MR. DODD TAKES THE AIR: Kenny Baker—Excellent musical. They like Kenny Baker as an actor as well as a singer. Let's have more of him for our musical fans. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PERFECT SPECIMEN, THE: Joan Blondell, Errol Flynn—This one pleased the cash customers. Joan Blondell is very popular here and May Robson is very, very good—as usual. She almost steals the show. Amusing story and well produced. Running time, 97 minutes. Played January 29-30.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SHE LOVED A FIREMAN: Dick Foran, Ann Sheridan—Double featured it and got by. Good for dual bills and that's all. Why not put Foran back in westerns. He has a good chance to do something there. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Grand National

FRONTIER TOWN: Tex Ritter—We trust that this company will get back on their feet again and continue with these good westerns. No one has any better. Well recorded, a good plot and beautiful scenery. All anyone could ask for. The female lead in this picture should be grabbed off by someone and put in better pictures, as she is a good actress and easy to look at. Better than the average put in westerns. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Sigonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FRONTIER TOWN: Tex Ritter—Best Tex Ritter to date. This one has about everything to please the action fans. Strange as it may seem, Tex Ritter has outgrossed all other Western stars here and this includes Gene Autry, Buck Jones, the Three Mesquiteers and Ken Maynard. Played February 5-6.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

MR. BOGGS STEPS OUT: Stuart Erwin, Helen Chandler—Nice short comedy feature but strictly for dual bills only. This picture brought several good laughs and Stuart Erwin never was better. Sound and photography O. K. Played February 5-6.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

SMALL TOWN BOY: Stuart Erwin, Joyce Compton—Did not get by even on bargain night.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldyn-Mayer

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce—An excellent picture which brought extra business. Many favorable comments on the new color. Running time, 110 minutes. Played January 30-31-February 1.—J. O. Guthrie, Karolyn Theatre, New London, Ohio. Small town patronage.

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery—Play this by all means. A box office natural for small town operation. Broke all records for box office. Running time, 89 minutes. Played January 21-22.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

BEG, BORROW OR STEAL: Frank Morgan, Florence Rice—Nice and holds attention. Running time, 72 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

BIG CITY: Luise Rainer, Spencer Tracy—A good picture well liked. Tracy great and Rainer excellent. Did good business but nothing startling. Comments favorable but not flattering. More was expected than was actually seen. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 17-18.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

BRIDE WORE RED, THE: Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone—This one seemed to please. Joan's best for some time. Rather fantastic story but excellent cast, one of the best being Mary Phillips as the maid. Lynne Carver gives a very pleasing performance. Reginald Owen is very good. Beautiful scenery and excellent photography. Running time, 103 minutes. Played February 4-5-6.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Robert Taylor Eleanor Powell, Judy Garland—Did good business, although not as good as it was played up to be. After this picture Judy Garland should be on her way to stardom. Not enough dancing by Eleanor Powell. Brandon people liked the picture very much, however. People here like musicals and comedies much better than dramas anyway. Running time, 110 minutes. Played October 13-14.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

CONQUEST: Greta Garbo, Charles Boyer—Garbo. A grand picture, magnificently done. Plenty of action, beautiful settings, audience appeal big enough for extended runs any spot. Running time, 112 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy—A big disappointment at the box office. Most people complained of its being too utterly silly for anything.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

GOOD EARTH, THE: Paul Muni, Luise Rainer—I have put off playing this because I was sure it would be a waste of good playing time. It proved to be very good at the box office and I received scores of good comments. As this is one of those pictures that appeal to the people who come to the movies once in a while, I used my mailing list to good advantage with this. Running time, 133 minutes. Played January 16-17.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

HELL DIVERS: Clark Gable, Wallace Beery—Fine. One of the best of its kind of all times. Beery is truly a wonderful actor. Running time, six reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

HELL DIVERS: Clark Gable, Wallace Beery—Reissued again and I'll take more of them just like it. Metro evidently knew what they were doing. While they don't do extra business, they do more than some of the "clucks" that have come out this season. They have what a lot of pictures lack and that is action, good direction, story and a cast that knows its business. Moreover when the patrons leave they have seen a picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

LIVE, LOVE AND LEARN: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell, Robert Benchley—Well, this had many opinions. Some are getting tired of the present wave for nonsensical, almost slapstick, feature comedy dramas. Others still like them and most of our patrons liked this one. Running time, 78 minutes. Played January 30-31.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MAN-PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone—This one was fair but I can't see any Sunday date on it. Good for midweek to help boost business, but won't do any more on weekends. Loy is not a draw without William Powell. Don't let anyone tell you different. Tone tried to take his place in humor and did well but not half as good as old highball Powell did with her in other pictures. Running time, 75 minutes. Played January 30-31.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatre, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

MY DEAR MISS ALDRICH: Edna May Oliver, Walter Pidgeon—A swell comedy. Good story, good cast and lots of laughs. Running time, 73 minutes. Played February 2-3.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

NAVY, BLUE AND GOLD: Lionel Barrymore, Robert Young—Grand picture. Classy, action, appeal. Strong enough for extended runs and will please in any spot. Running time, 94 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ROSALIE: Nelson Eddy, Eleanor Powell.—This one was a good picture but too long. When Metro makes these long ones they break all records in length. We played this one New Year's prevue, and boy we kept them out late if that is what they wanted to do. They couldn't have gone out any place else because it was almost morning. The drunks all went to sleep and were sobered up when it was out. Running time, 125 minutes. Played January 2-3.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

SARATOGA: Jean Harlow, Clark Gable—Played late, but still a good draw. Print very good. Running time, 85 minutes. Played January 27-28.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

THEY GAVE HIM A GUN: Spencer Tracy, Franchot Tone, Gladys George—A very good picture with sustained interest from start to finish. However, any production with even the slightest suggestion of war is doomed to failure in my very small situation. The good people tell me there is enough war and trouble in everyday life without having it presented to them as entertainment. Oh, well, I had the satisfaction of seeing something above average, and the few who dropped in to rest were agreeably surprised at the picture's general good quality.—Nino Sunseri, Naselle Theatre, Naselle, Wash. Backwoods patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Sophie Tucker, Ronald Sinclair—This one went over fine and did fair midweek business. Everyone enjoyed it. One of the best program pictures put out this year. Running time, 80 minutes. Played January 12-13.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatre, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Mickey Rooney, Ronald Sinclair, Judy Garland, Sophie Tucker—Good program picture. Mickey Rooney is certainly coming along. He does swell work in this one. As for the Sinclair boy, another importation from the British. He has the clipped, precise diction that these kids seem to have. It got a couple of laughs in the wrong place. Judy Garland is a honey, good singing voice, and the picture, while it might seem out of place, could have used her in one more song. Grand Sophie Tucker, how she can put over her role. It is good to see them come along, these oldtimes getting breaks. I'm for them. Cold blustery weather hurt business.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—Grand picture. Good comedy. Plenty audience appeal. Lots of action. Strong enough for extended runs. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

TOPPER: Constance Bennett, Cary Grant, Roland Young—Entire story fantastic and foolish. So ridiculous it was actually crazy. Carried out too far. People thought it a little bit too wild. Trick photography was very clever and the cast was good, but the plot spoiled it for this town. Business only fair, boosted second day by a cash night. Running time, 97 minutes. Played November 8-9.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

TOPPER: Constance Bennett, Cary Grant, Roland Young—Far be it from me to understand why this picture should attract so large a patronage, and more particularly a number of persons who seldom indulge in motion picture entertainment. The picture is unusual, different, and entertaining, but not at all outstanding. However, the laughter was spontaneous, hearty, and at times prolonged, and it was a real pleasure to be at hand to bid the large crowd goodnight, and to receive the many compliments regarding this completely satisfactory film fare.—Nino Sunseri, Naselle Theatre, Naselle, Wash. Backwoods patronage.

TOPPER: Cary Grant, Constance Bennett—It looked all nonsense to me, but my patronage sure did enjoy it. The story of two people dead, but invisible bodies of them, sure keep them laughing. So that's that, and I was pleased. Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 24-25.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

Monogram

THIRTEENTH MAN: Weldon Heyburn—This is a very nice program picture. Play it, if you are playing Monogram.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomation, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

ANGEL: Marlene Dietrich—Terrible and so was business. It was so dead that I had to look several times during the day to see if the sound was off. Women thought it hot stuff, but you couldn't pay a man's way in if you wanted to. Running time, 91 minutes. Played January 26-27.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

ARTISTS AND MODELS: Jack Benny—Very poor business due partly to bad weather. This picture is not worth percentage. Played January 27-29.—Rubel Hutchings, Allen Theatre, Allen, Neb. Small town patronage.

BLONDE TROUBLE: Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs, Lynne Overman—Nice little program picture which pleased those who came, and that wasn't many! Wish Congress would stop their filibustering and pass a law against double, triple and quadruple billings, then maybe we would get rid of these pictures built for them and for them only. Running time, 66 minutes. Played January 26-27.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatres, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

EBB TIDE: Oscar Homolka, Frances Farmer—I caught this while in Minneapolis and can't say much for it. Another of these unpleasant things that you want to forget as soon as you can. Had some beautiful sea shots, but I feel that people want story, and know that, though money had been spent on it, it just doesn't please the cash customers. There were four of us and it was unanimous.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

EBB TIDE: Oscar Homolka, Frances Farmer—Goldwyn must be right. Here is a picture so poorly edited that Zukor must have been in New York when this was cut. It is very badly connected. However, the color put it over. Homolka is a very wonderful actor and far overshadows the ability of the others. The comments on this picture are varied and we feel it will appeal to the men more than the women. Again we comment only on the worth of the picture, as the attendance was very good the first night. How it will be later we do not know. Running time, 90 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME: Irene Dunne, Randolph Scott—Not as bad as some reports had led us to believe. Had a good story and was well played, especially interesting to small towns in western territory. But why, oh why, did they have to turn it into a slapstick comedy at the close? Some said it reminded them of impossible westerns, others of ridiculous serials. A big picture, like this was supposed to be, should not have such an ending. Running time, 104 minutes. Played February 6-7.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HOLD 'EM, NAVY: Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle, John Howard—Just a nice program picture with practically no drawing power. Did way below average Friday-Saturday business. Running time, 64 minutes. Played February 4-5.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PARTNERS OF THE PLAINS: William Boyd, George Hayes, Gwen Gaze—There's three things wrong with this one. "Windy" isn't in it. A gal named Owen Gaze is, and it has one punk story, but it pleased. Please, Paramount, put or get "Windy" back with Hoppy. My patrons think he's the better half of a Hopalong Cassidy western. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SOULS AT SEA: Gary Cooper, George Raft—I caught "Souls at Sea" the other day and can't report much for it. I know that the family didn't like it, though it was well produced, and showed the waste of a lot of money. "Mutiny on the Bounty" had something that the imitators have not been able to give us. I was interested in noticing that the chain booker had put this rumpus creating superfeature in on the Wednesday-Thursday cut price night. Shows that he agreed with my reaction to the picture. I am glad I lost my fight to get this set in on my last year's contract.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

NEW REPORTERS ON PRODUCT

Michigan and Texas exhibition supplies this week's newly volunteering reporters to "What the Picture Did for Me."

B. J. Aylesworth of the Lyric and Connellee theatres at Eastland, Texas, makes his first contributions.

R. V. Rule, Gym theatre, Beaverton, Mich., returns to the fold. He last reported in the issue of May 29, 1937.

TRUE CONFESSION: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray, John Barrymore—Did not do very well on this picture. After all the wide publicity we have had on it all over the United States I expected much more on the box office report. I think that small town people are getting tired of these silly kind of pictures and want more serious type. Running time, 84 minutes. Played January 9-10.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

TRUE CONFESSION: Fred MacMurray, Carole Lombard—Advertised this to the limit and in three days took in enough to pay for advertisement and part of film rental. It seemed to please those who saw it, but nobody came. Play it midweek. It's no Sunday feature. Running time, 84 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

TRUE CONFESSION: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—A very good little comedy that was well received and we can recommend it as good a picture as we have put on the screen this season. Do not be afraid of this. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TRUE CONFESSION: Carole Lambord, John Barrymore, Edgar Kennedy, Fred MacMurray—If I ever get another picture that the audience is unanimous in saying that it is good I'll think that the day of miracles is not yet past. Barrymore saves the picture to some extent, and those of low mental capacity thought it great, but as for others they said "Phooey." There are some laughs in it, but the picture is loosely thrown together, and combines reaching for laughs, and then goes dramatic. Off and on. The picture puzzles in that you can't spot just where it missed with the audience, but it did for some reason, for we had a number of walkouts on it. They have been so consistently poor this season we hate to see another come in.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TRUE CONFESSION: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—Entertaining. Pleased every one. Not strong enough for extended runs. Running time, 75 minutes. —W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee—Well, well, Paramount has really made a picture at long last. If they can do such a swell job of this one, why can't they do more of them? I have panned them a lot and they have it coming to them, but this one ranks with the greatest of the outdoor pictures.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Republic

CAVALRY: Bob Steele—Very good western. All the children like Steele because they think he's the best fighter in the western group. I believe that's the reason my children business is always better when I play Steele and Foran. Don't blame some people for not liking pictures of official championship fights. They've been spoiled by seeing some real fights in western pictures, and fight pictures seem too slow for them.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MANHATTAN MERRY-GO-ROUND: Phil Regan, Ann Dvorak—We did not like this one and neither did the customers. The first walkouts for some time. Played January 22-23.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

MICHAEL O'HALLORAN: Wynne Gibson, Warren Hull—This picture is a credit to independent producers. It has good production values, good sound, a nice cast of players. While it has not romance, the fortunes of the children provide plenty of suspense and heart interest with a good sprinkling of fun. Business on this a fair average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

OLD BARN DANCE, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—One of the best of the Autrys. 'Nuf sed.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PUBLIC COWBOY, NO. 1: Gene Autry—Good western picture, but I have played better ones from same star. Also recording was pretty good. Running time, 58 minutes. Played January 29.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

ROOTIN' TOOTIN' RHYTHM: Gene Autry, Armida—Good, but not one of his best. Armida helped a lot of her dancing.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

WILD HORSE RODEO: Three Mesquiteers (Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune)—Very good. These Three Mesquiteers are quite popular here, because we have never had a bad one yet. Played January 15-16.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

RKO Radio

BIG SHOT, THE: Guy Kibbee, Cora Witherspoon—About half the picture "Swing Your Lady" is, and yet did about twice the business, which shows that you never can tell how far a frog will jump by the looks of him. People liked it and that is what we ask for.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

DAMSEL IN DISTRESS, A: Fred Astaire, George Burns and Gracie Allen—The Burns and Allen fans were delighted, but the Astaire fans want Ginger along with Fred. This played to disappointing business. Played January 30-31.—A. N. Niles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

EVERYBODY'S DOING IT: Sally Eilers, Preston Foster—This is a good little comedy, but nothing pretentious about it and people come to see it merely when they have nothing else to do.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

FIGHT FOR YOUR LADY: John Boles, Jack Oakie —Seemed to please, but had no draw. Oakie isn't the draw he was before he got that third chin. Running time, 65 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

HIGH FLYERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—This was good of its kind and typically Wheeler and Woolsey kind. I had a swell matinee crowd and then they forgot about me in the evening and went to see Garbo at the opposition. At that there is more money in running the RKO comedy at their price than the greater star and lesser entertainment and paying for prestige. —Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

HITTING A NEW HIGH: Lily Pons, John Howard —This was really an entertaining picture, but introduced by one of the dumbest trailers I ever have seen. I learned my lesson. Next time they get out a trailer like that I am going to have the courage of my convictions and pull it. No one wants to pay money to hear a woman screech even if she can do it louder and longer and higher than anyone else in the world. It is interesting vocal gymnastics, but not entertainment. The picture wasn't so bad, but don't let Lily sing so much and so classical.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

TOAST OF NEW YORK: Edward Arnold, Frances Farmer, Cary Grant, Jack Oakie—This picture was a horrible failure. Print I received was terrible and looked as though picture had been taken from another picture, running on screen. Business very poor and people very dissatisfied. Comments unfavorable. Ran a cash night second night of picture in effort to increase the take. Running time, 109 minutes.—Played November 15-16.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

WISE GIRL: Miriam Hopkins, Ray Milland—This was a better picture than I expected. Miriam Hopkins has no box office appeal in my locality. I thought that the picture would stand up without cast names, however, and am sure the people enjoyed it.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BORNEO: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson—Johnson's last and best picture. Some remarkable and authentic scenes that were really amazing. Did about average business. This picture drew the higher class people as well as the farmers, who like this type of picture, anyway. Some thought it was dull in places. Running time, 75½ minutes. Played October 29-30.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

DAVID HARUM (reissue): Will Rogers, Evelyn Venable—Did amazing business. Receipts beat "Broadway Melody of 1938," run previous week. Played to big crowds both days and people praised the picture sky high. This is a Will Rogers town anyway and the people sure do turn out en masse for him. Used the old back popular request gag to draw them in. Was used in ads on programs and trailer. Command showing, you asked for it, etc. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 20-21.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

CAPE METROPOLE: Tyronne Power, Loretta

Young, Adolphe Menjou—Pretty fair picture, but I consider it no special. Business very bad. Didn't take in enough to pay expenses.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

DINNER AT THE RITZ: Annabella, Paul Lukas—Was very well pleased and surprised at this. Did not like the start at all. Talk was bad and action slow. But it livened up and was a dandy program picture. Sure glad we played it, for it sets Annabella up as a real personality and assures us a nice business on "Baroness and the Butler" which is coming up. Running time, 7 minutes. Played February 2-3.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HANDY ANDY (reissue): Will Rogers—Dear old Bill; I wish I had about 25 reissues of his to run. People still love him and come to see his pictures.—A. N. Niles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

HANDY ANDY: Will Rogers, Robert Taylor—One of Will Rogers' best pictures. Good story and good cast. These reissues do not go over so well as they did, but at that they are better than some of the new pictures. Running time, 81 minutes. Played January 26-27.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple, Jean Hersholt—One of her best. After "Wee Willie Winkie" flopped, I was almost afraid of this one, but it pulled well and old and young were enthusiastic about it. Played February 2-3.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

LANCER SPY: George Sanders, Dolores Del Rio—Although the picture is real entertainment, it failed to bring them in. George Sanders' acting worthy of recognition. War pictures seem to be on the way out. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ONE MILE FROM HEAVEN: Claire Trevor, Sally Blane—A dandy B picture. Can see the hand of Allan Dwan all through it. Give us more lower allocation pictures like this.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ROLL ALONG, COWBOY: Smith Bellew—Terrible! Insipid! Absolutely no action and such willy-nilly conflicts between hero and villain we have not seen in a long time. Running time, 55 minutes. Played January 28-29.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TARZAN'S REVENGE: Glenn Morris, Eleanor Holm—A synthetic jungle picture that is no good, and all I can say is that Eleanor Holm should keep right on swimming. Of all the "hammish" performances Morris and Holm stand alone. Where they get the idea the strong muscle boys can make actors is more than I know, but this I do know, this pair put up about the worst exhibition of how not to do it that it has been my misfortune to run.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

THIN ICE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power—Did swell business. Whole town was talking about picture. Many interested primarily in skiing scenes to get pointers for local skiers. Majority well pleased as a whole. Am looking forward to "Happy Landing." Running time, 78 minutes. Played October 25-26.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

THIN ICE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power—Sonja Henie has just completed a personal appearance in Detroit and scored a great hit with her Ice Follies, and as a result, or because she is becoming popular anyway, this picture drew tops and as a picture it deserves to draw because it is all entertainment from start to end. I have booked for a return date her first picture, "One in a Million." Sonja Henie was not so well known when her first picture came out and I have an idea that it may do better if shown as a follow-up to "Thin Ice."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit. Neighborhood patronage.

WIFE, DOCTOR AND NURSE: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Virginia Bruce—A good picture. Business surprisingly slow. Local people liked the picture and it was played two days. Advertised extensively on this picture and was disappointed in gross. Winter setting in; summer people gone and business falling off. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 3-4. —Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

WILD AND WOOLY: Jane Withers—This picture stood up well under extra advertising and drew extra business. A natural for our folks. Running time, 64 minutes. Played January 17-18.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

WILD AND WOOLY: Jane Withers, Walter Brennan—Very good Jane Withers picture. Did excellent business at the box office. Played with a double feature and, of course, on Saturday we do a rush business anyway. Jane Withers is always a hit here in Brandon, especially among the kiddies, and while she is no Shirley Temple, she draws a good crowd. Running time, 64 minutes. Played October 15-16.— Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

WINGS OF THE MORNING: Annabella, Henry Fonda, John McCormack, Stewart Rome—Two things are outstanding in this feature; one is the superb color photography, the other the introduction of Annabella to the American screen. At times the characters are hard to understand, but the picture itself has almost everything to make it a box office hit. The scene where Fonda and Annabella (disguised as a boy) are compelled stay overnight in a barn is a comedy highlight. John McCormack's singing will bring a tear to many an eye and the running of the English Derby will bring thrills to many. All in all it is one of the first foreign productions that holds its own with the Hollywood releases. Annabella is a comer and a good bet for future stardom. Running time, 85 minutes. Played February 5.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers—Good musical. Fair business. Stars fair. Ritz Bros. weak. Patrons reacted in a fairly favorable manner. Will not stand a holdover. Do not expect too much and you will not be disappointed. Running time, 99 minutes. Played October 27-28.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

United Artists

BREWSTER'S MILLIONS: Jack Buchanan, Lili Damita—Traded "Dreaming Lips" for this and got the best of the deal, although this didn't go so extra good here. Received good print.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

DEAD END: Joel McCrea, Sylvia Sidney—A superb production both in story and cast worthy of preferred playing time in the more intelligent situations where it should do business of landslide proportions. Unfortunately, in my backwoods location "Dead End" ends dead at the ticket dispensary, and probably will do likewise at most other very small box offices.—Nino Sunseri, Naselle Theatre, Naselle, Wash. Backwoods patronage.

52ND STREET: Ian Hunter, Pat Paterson—This was a swell show. I ran it right alongside of "Hollywood Hotel" and it did about half the business, but had many tell me it was even a better show and they both pleased 100 per cent. It hasn't the box office cast names, but it has story and direction and capable cast. It is good entertainment.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall—This one fooled me. Knew that it was a good picture, but never thought that I would do the business that I did. Best Sunday business that I have had in six months. Even my western fans turned out for this one. Second day held up fine. Running time, 102 minutes. Played January 23-24.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Carole Lombard, Fredric March—This was top entertainment, and I recommend it to any theatre, anywhere. The color is good and the story is crazy enough to please Mr. General Public. Light comedy and good fun. I can't say that Carole was at her best, but the rest of the cast was exceptional.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

SCARFACE: Paul Muni, George Raft, Ann Dvorak —This is still the king of the underworld dramas. I had shown this several years ago and it drew then. I seldom show reissues, but I have been hearing about its drawing power as a reissue in this territory so I finally gave it a date, January 18 and 19, and boy, it sure brought home the bacon. It drew better than expected; both days were well above average. We got a real good print with good sound.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles —This picture is tops. It's got what it takes to bring them in. Played this to above average house, proving that the audience still likes a good cry.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anna Shirley—A flop in this town. Was disappointed and surprised with box office take. Most U. A. pictures now are flukes in this town. People here liked picture fairly well and personally I liked the picture very much. Played this picture during anniversary week with free gifts and played up Mrs. Roosevelt's remarks about picture all to no avail. Running time, 111 minutes. Played November 10-11.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

WOMAN CHASES MAN: Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea—Very good show, but UA pictures refuse to draw in my town. The lineup of UA looks good for this year, but I believe in paying a little attention to past performances when buying new product.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Universal

100 MEN AND A GIRL: Deanna Durbin, Adolphe Menjou—Here is a masterpiece of entertainment. Deanna Durbin dominates the picture all the way, and how she endears herself in the hearts of those who see her. She is not just an actress in this, but she is part of it. She lives the part as if her life depended on giving these unemployed musicians jobs. Whether your patrons like music or not, they will like this. So get behind it with all that you know about exploiting a picture. The picture will make good. It drew above average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

YOU'RE A SWEETHEART: Alice Faye—A hit from Universal. Alice Faye's singing superb. Business only fair. Running time, 96 minutes. Played February 6-8.—J. O. Guthrie, Karolyn Theatre, New London, Ohio. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

DEVIL'S SADDLE LEGION, THE: Dick Foran, Anne Nagel—Dick Foran was fast becoming popular as a western star. His personality, his singing and the general high class westerns that he appeared in would soon have landed him near the top of western stars. I for one regret very much that he has stopped making westerns. "Devil's Saddle Legion" is a real ace western.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

KING AND THE CHORUS GIRL, THE: Fernand Gravet, Joan Blondell—Very good. Played too old to do any business. Stars fine.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SINGING MARINE, THE: Dick Powell, Doris Weston, Hugh Herbert—Fine musical show; in my opinion, far better than "Varsity Show." Pretty song hits, good story, but not so hot at at the box office. Hugh Herbert is plenty good; in fact, the credit goes all to him in making people laugh, but he is very goofy. Played January 30-31.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Humphrey Bogart, Dorothy McNulty—I thought this was great and was very disappointed at the crowd who stayed away. It is good fun and what I would call a hill billy type of comedy. Lots of music and gags and little plot or romance. It is "just goood clean fun." I believe it would fit best into the Friday-Saturday date.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

TOVARICH: Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer—This is a swell show. They put a lot of money into story, cast and production and it shows class all the way through. People don't seem to want class, however, and the rank and file of motion picture goers can't take this title. I would advise advertising it under the title "Tonight's Our Night" if I were asked how to improve its box office appeal. It is so fine that no one can dislike it. They just fear to come to a show with such a name.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

TOVARICH: Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer—This one fooled me. Was running Gene Autry in my "B" house and thought that it would kill business in my "A" house. Did fine business even though it was not a small town picture. Friday was better than Saturday, always a good day with me. Running time, 97 minutes. Played January 14-15.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric, and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

CITY OF THE GOLDEN GATE: World in Color—A good colored travel reel and will fill in most anywhere.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

COMMUNITY SING, NO. 4: Good songs. Please take out these song birds who spoil the whole reel to sing one song, Columbia. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, NO. 2: Not so hot. Mostly of those stars our audience never heard of.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SIT DOWNERS, THE: Three Stooges—O. K. and drew plenty of laughs. Running time, 16 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Educational

JAIL BAIT: Buster Keaton—A slapstick comedy that is guaranteed to bring down the house. Buster Keaton is on the way back and his dead pan will bring memories to the old timers. A tonic for any program. Running time, 17 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SEE UNCLE SOL: Song and Comedy Hits—A good vaudeville reel with the acts introduced in a novel way. Worth booking. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J.

MGM

CANDID CAMERAMANIACS: Pete Smith Specialties—Much ado about nothing. A laugh or two and that's all. Will get by.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FRAMING YOUTH: Our Gang—Fairly good. Could have been much better. Running time, nine minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

GLIMPSES OF PERU: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—People in Brandon don't care for travelogues too well. However, may go over swell in other towns. A real flop here. Running time, eight minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

JIMMY FIDLER'S PERSONALITY PARADE: Special—This was very good, showing many oldtime stars. Would like to see more like it. Running time, two reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

JIMMY FIDLER'S PERSONALITY PARADE: Special—This is about the worst film that any company has had the nerve to put out, and when the salesman who sold me this as a special comes around, if he has nerve enough to do so, he should hang his head in shame. Why the ace film commentator should lend his name to this is beyond normal thinking. The only thing it gives him is a slap in the face. This reel is nothing but cutbacks from old pictures and has no power nor reason to be shown. Fidler's remarks did not enhance its value whastoever. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JIMMY FIDLER'S PERSONALITY PARADE: Special—If this is sold as a feature it should stand them in the aisles. A swell tribute to the gone but not forgotten, as well as the No. 1 stars of today. Did swell business in Brandon and had the whole town talking about this picture. Advertised this attraction over the radio for the first time in Brandon. A real hit. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

KING WITHOUT A CROWN, THE: Historical Mysteries—They didn't like this one in Brandon either. However, they don't care for this type anyway here. They like light comedies, musicals and cartoons. Might go over big in town with different class of people who appreciate historical pictures. Running time, nine minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

NIGHT AT THE MOVIES, A: Robert Benchley—Very funny and actually a good short. Quite enjoyable and it sure does bring out the laughs. Try this and you will want more like it. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN GRANDEUR: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Don't play this one unless you have money to throw away. Audience effect was as expected—opposed to shorts like this. Better to have none than this kind. Running time, eight minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

SUNDAY NIGHT AT THE TROCADERO: Musical Comedies—These shorts with dozens of Hollywood feature players and stars seem to fit the fancy of theatre patrons. This was a nice subject and pleased generally. Running time, two reels.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SWING WEDDING: Harman-Isling—Book this one by all means. Enjoyable and really good. In color. Should give that feeling of something to top off the feature as a person's favorite dessert after dinner. People commented favorably on this and asked for more like it. Running time, eight minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

THREE SMART BOYS: Our Gang—Only fair. This short is rapidly falling off. The real drawing cards in kid actors are rapidly vanishing from the set and others who can't replace them are trying to fill in.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

TWO HEARTS IN WAX TIME: Musical Revue—Just fair. Good musical numbers and beautiful color. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BALL TOSSERS: Grantland Rice Sportslights—Play it if you haven't already done so. It's about basketball and how the good ones play it. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

EDUCATED FISH: Color Classics—Nice color and I think it pleased. Nothing special though. Running time, eight minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

FROM THE MINUET TO THE BIG APPLE: Headliners—Very interesting. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

GOOD LOOKING WINNERS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Some nice forms but not much else. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

NEW DEAL SHOW, THE: Betty Boop Cartoons—This is the best Boop we have had in the house. Just a good cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL: No. 2.—This company has come to the front with their short subjects and this is as good as any they have made. Very high class and can be run any day in the week and it is diversified in subject matter. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ZULA HULA: Betty Boop Cartoons—Good Betty Boop. Will please young and old. Runnnig time, seven minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

RKO Radio

CALIFORNIA MISSIONS: World on Parade—Skip it. It's no good. There are too many shorts that can beat this by miles. No drawing power at all.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

CLOCK CLEANERS, THE: Mickey Mouse—Excellent. One of the best series of shorts on the market. If you advertise your shorts heavy and take pride in showing them, by all means book in this series. Really draw in extra patronage. In color and great for the kiddies. Running time, eight minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Branton, Vt. Small town patronage.

CLOCK CLEANERS, THE: Mickey Mouse—As good as any cartoon we have ever run. Enjoyed by all. These are business getters if anything is. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FLORIDA COWBOY: World on Parade—They didn't care for it in Brandon and it didn't do any extra business. Was simply a fill in. Don't book it if you can get anything else. Running time, nine minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon Vt. Small town patronage.

FOREST GANGSTERS: Struggle to Live—Don't advise booking of this short if you want something to really help sell your show and top off an otherwise perfect program. Running time, nine minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

FROZEN AFFAIR, A: Evelyn Chandler—And all too short. RKO had better take this star and put her in a feature, as she is very good. Well received. Play it any day in the week. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOLF TIMING: Sports with Bill Corum—Don't show this one unless you have an unusually large number in your audience who enjoy golf, etc. Very tiresome to the average person. Running time, 11 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

MANY UNHAPPY RETURNS: Radio Flash Comedies—RKO relegates itself to the lower class again with this comedy. It had been coming along fine until we hit this, and why they ever made it we do not know. Just poor, is all we can say. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligoner, Ind. Small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 1—I said one time I'd never buy this series again but I did. Now I'll say it again! I think they are extra good but customers seem to want to leave when it appears on screen.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomanton, Ala. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 1—Very good. People like this subject and it should be advertised as heavy as the feature. This should be a must for your theatre. If you don't book it your opposition will. Brings in the coin, too. Running time, 18 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

MISSISSIPPI MOODS: Hall Johnson Choir—The songs and music in this are fairly good. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM IN A NIGHT COURT: Nu-Atlas Productions—It's all right and that's all. Nothing to boast about. Running time, nine minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town Patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RAMPAGE: Headliner Series—Good. People liked this short fairly well. Is a good time filler. Not dull. Running time, 19 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

WORKSHOPS OF OLD MEXICO: World on Parade—Another fluke for this theatre. Not advisable to book unless your patrons have a strong desire for travelogues. Running time, 11 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

LAUGHING AT FATE: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Patrons like plenty of thrills. The Newsreel Cameraman gives them more than plenty. Play this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SKI PARADE, THE: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—For Winter sport lovers this is made to order. Ski jumpers and winter scenery combine to give thrills and beauty to the movie fan. These newsreel cameraman shorts are "tops." Running time, 10 minutes. J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

BOMBING OF THE U. S. S. PANAY: Movietone News—Very interesting and timely subject.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

United Artists

DONALD AND PLUTO: Mickey Mouse—This rare combination bids fair to put Mickey out of business. This is a little on the absurd side but it pleased.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MUSIC LAND: Silly Symphonies—Fine, but not worth the extra price to me. They say they make no program pictures, but some of theirs (mostly foreign make) were worse than program pictures for me.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Universal

HOLLYWOOD SCREEN TEST: Universal Special—Very good. This short not only holds the patrons' interest from start to finish but teaches him something at the same time. This type of short is very desirable and should play every theatre. Running time, 21 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Va. Small town patronage.

LEGION SPECIAL: Newsreel—If you have not played this Universal newsreel covering the New York convention of the American Legion, pick it up. Circularize the Legion and the business will surprise you. The reel is o. k. and pleasing.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

AT THE RACES: Edgar Bergen—Guess Charlie McCarthy has acquired a lot of finesse since he made these shorts. His ability over the radio is so much greater than the shorts that it has caused a slight lack of interest in the shorts. Running time, one reel.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BACKYARD BROADCAST, THE: Broadway Brevities—If your folks like children performers, don't miss this one. It is a knockout. Running time, 22 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

BRING ON THE GIRLS: "Charley McCarthy," Edgar Bergen—This short, if sold properly, should bring in as many people as the feature. This is a real box office draw, where McCarthy and Bergen are such radio favorites now. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

CAN'T THINK OF IT: Ken Murray, Oswald—This seemd to be over the head of my Saturday night crowd. At least I didn't hear much laughing. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE TALK: "Charlie McCarthy," Edgar Bergen—Excellent. Although it is only a reprint means big extra business because McCarthy is radio's most popular star now. If sold as heavy as the feature, should draw many extra patrons. Running time, 18 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

INDIA'S MILLIONS: Colortour Adventure—A dandy travel tour well made with better color than heretofore and an interesting subject. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LEON NAVARA AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Better than the average put out by Vitagraph this season. Had a better plot and it went over better than the former ones. Let us hope they are now on the upgrade. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SWING FOR SALE: Hal LeRoy—Good musical featuring the fast stepping rhythmic feet of Hal Le Roy. Gets them in receptive mood for the feature.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SWING FOR SALE: Broadway Brevities—O. K. for a filler-inner. Not strong enough to advertise very heavily. A good, enjoyable short. Running time, 22 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

SING, BING, SING: (Mack Sennett) Bing Crosby—This is a good two-reeler. Print was new and in good shape.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Serials

Republic

DICK TRACY: Ralph Byrd—This was pretty fair serial. Not as good as we expected.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

DICK TRACY: Ralph Byrd—Will someone please tell us why directors of serials insist upon making their characters do such absolutely impossible things; things that a 10-year-old would know better than to do? That is what kills the serial with adults. Running time, two reels.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PAINTED STALLION, THE: Ray Corrigan—This was a fine serial. Much better for use than "Dick Tracy."—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

GOVERNMENT FILM AID IN MEXICO DISCUSSED

Two Congressmen Sponsor Legislation Designed to Extend Federal Control of Industry

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

The proposition of government aid for the Mexican film industry in the form of plans sponsored by two federal congressmen is again intriguing the industry and giving rise to speculation. It has also aroused the more than passing interest of American sectors of the business in this country.

Strict prohibition of the importation and exhibition of any picture in English or other foreign languages as a means of aiding the home industry by compelling alien producers to enter Mexico on a large scale and employ Mexican players, technicians and others, is the high spot of a measure that is fathered by Congressman Victor Alfonso Maldonado.

He also wants a law enacted which would compel exhibitors to cut their prices for the accomodation of the poor. Cinema charges in Mexico City and other Mexican population centers range now from about five to 35 cents, with an exceptional maximum top of 60 cents. The legislator thinks these tariffs exorbitant and asserts they deprive hundreds of thousands of the poor of film fare.

Exhibitors pay a daily average of about 13 per cent on their daily gross in the shape of federal, state and municipal taxes, must pay government inspectors who check up on their receipts and have other expenses which cut deeply into their intake.

Congressman Maldonado also wants the federal government to establish two substantial annual prizes for the domestic industry: one for the producer who makes the best picture of the year, the other for the player whose work is outstanding.

The legislator's film plans found support in Ismael Falcon, who has added a recommendation of his own; instead of banning foreign films to tax them so heavily that alien makers must come down here to make pictures for this market. He also proposes that cinemas whose owners chronically violate health, sanitation and safety regulations be torn down. Congressman Falcon is father of a bill, now pending in congress, which calls for the limitation of foreigners' activities in industrial or commercial pursuits and the restriction of foreign capital in such businesses.

A form of helping the home industry without legislation has been put up to the ministry to finance by elements of the industry. It is to found a government controlled bank to finance production and kindred activities. The bank is to have a capital of about $140,000 supplied on a 50-50 basis by the industry and the government, and its headquarters in Mexico City.

Mexico City's biggest cinema, a 6,000 seat house to be known as the Cine Teatro Orfeon, is nearing completion in the downtown sector. It is being built by Manuel Cavas and associates. The house is scheduled for inauguration in the late winter.

The trend of the times in Mexico City and obeisance to the automobile, have sounded the death knell for North America's oldest theatre, in continuous operation for more than 200 years. This fate has befallen the Cine Principal which continuously from the early 1700s until four years ago was a stage house then was converted into a cinema. It is to be razed, under an agreement made between the municipal government and the operators, and converted into a parking center for the simultaneous accomodation of 600 cars.

Considering Tax Proposition

A two-purpose measure to double federal taxes in the Federal District, which includes Mexico City and has a population of about 1,400,000, is being considered by President Lazaro Cardenas and the ministry of finance. As far as can be ascertained these propositions, which call for levies to be computed on exhibitors' daily revenues and increasing the general amusement tax by five per cent, will apply only to the district.

Sponsors of the proposition say that as the cinema has become almost as much of a necessity as bread and beans and that exhibitors enjoy "a fabulous income" and can well afford to pay higher taxes.

The sponsors argue that present imposts are out of all proportion to exhibitors' revenues and that the system of fixing the cinemas' imposts on the average intake for a three-month period is all "wet." It is alleged that exhibitors are such cunning fellows that they show the poorest and cheapest pictures during the quarterly tax-fixing period which establishes how much tax they shall pay for the whole year.

Exhibitors deny the charge, saying they try to show top grade pictures but cannot always do so and that inferior pictures crop into program without any intent on the exhibitors' part to influence tax fixing.

Exhibitors and other showmen are protesting vigorously against the five per cent increase in the general amusement tax, contending that if their imposts, now averaging about 15 per cent of gross, are further increased many of them will be obliged to get out of the business.

Strict enforcement of the law which demands that all cinemas must exhibit pictures produced in Mexico at the rate of at least one a week is being undertaken by the Mexican City general amusements inspection department. The department has threatened two large first run houses of the capital with heavy fines if they continue to exhibit foreign films exclusively.

Radio in Mexico will come closer to government regulation if the bill congress is considering passes, an action which is anticipated for early in 1918. The measure calls for organization of a federal radio commission and provides for deleting of any mention on the air of religion or politics as well as the banning of anything that: "Slurs the Mexican government, people and customs or those of friendly countries; offends good manners and taste; ridicules individuals, races or creeds; tends to disturb general peace and public order or libels persons or institutions at home or abroad."

Film making in Mexico is to have an innovation with the production of "Refugees in Madrid" by a recently organized company, Films de Artistas Mexicanas Asociadas (FAMA), of which Francisco de P. Cabrera, prominent in the domestic industry, is president. This is to be the first made-in-Mexico picture of international appeal. It is a true to life account of the experiences of the miscellany of folk who found protection in the Mexican embassy during the bloodiest days of fighting around the former Spanish government.

The script is by Celestina Gorostiza, Mexico's best woman playwright and novelist, and Rafael Muñoz, who is known to the American public through his best seller novel, "Vamonos Con Pancho Villa" ("Let's Go With Pancho Villa"), which was made into a picture by a Mexican company. Direction is by Alex Galindo, young Mexican technician who is making a name for himself.

The cast is headed by Maria Conesa, the Mae West of Mexico, 50 years an actress and possessor of two diamond teeth, who was a sensation because of her beauty and talent when she came to this country from Spain in 1900 and is still highly popular; Fernando and Domingo Soler, ace Mexican dramatic actors, Arturo Cordoba, Lupe Velez's leading man, in her Mexican film, "La Zandunga", and Vila Vidal, Spanish screen actress.

"Refugees," which is to have titles in English, is to be released late in March. Extensive American exhibition is being arranged.

Social Club Formed

Picture and radio performers and technicians of Mexico have founded a social center, Club Cine Radio, at Pasco de la Reforma, 156, Mexico City. Juan Garcia is manager. Foreign members of the fraternity are welcome. The founders are Robert Cantu Roberts and Alfonso Sanchez Tello, producers.

Producers' Association Elects

Officers of the Association of Mexican Movie Producers have been elected as follows for the ensuing year:

President, Juan Pezet; Vice-president, Jose Saigo Piquer; Treasurer, Salvador Bueno; Secretary, Lic. Eligio Hidalgo Alvarez, and Gabriel Soria and Luis Bueno, board members.

The Association is seeking to become a branch of the Mexico City chamber of commerce.

All first-run cinemas in Mexico City want to show made-in-Mexico pictures as often as they can, but fulfilling the legal requirement that such exhibitions be at least twice a month is a physical and business impossibility.

Mexican picture producers first approach the largest house of good class patronage. If the film is accepted, this house gets the exclusive first-run exhibition. There is no such thing, as yet, in the Mexican capital, as a picture running simultaneously in two or more houses. If the one theatre rejects the offer, the proposition goes to another. Very rarely two or more home-made pictures run concurrently in the first-run houses. Frequently, made in Mexico's have their premieres in second-run or neighborhood houses.

An indication of what Mexican movie fans like best in the way of made in Mexico pictures is afforded by the some 250,000 answers to a questionnaire submitted by a Mexico City newspaper. The majority of those replying asserted that cowboy and cowgirl, real Mexican dancing, country scene and folklore are the best for they represent the true Mexico at home and abroad. The fans implied that city life and social and economic problem pictures had just as well not be made.

"CIRCUIT" IN CANADA FOR BRITISH FILMS

The report once more has been revived in Toronto, Canada, that financial and theatrical interests of London, England, are behind a move to establish a circuit of large theatres in key centers of the Dominion to provide definite outlets for British film productions.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

52 WEEKS A YEAR

Invariably, when a new theatre is about to be opened, we note a great hullabaloo concerning "good will," "civic spirit," "community enterprise," etc., etc., and justifiably so. Unfortunately, however, this great uproar usually dies down to a mere whisper or a loud hush after the theatre has been open a year or longer. By this time the theatre manager is usually too engrossed with weekly statements, new campaigns, and scores of other details which enter into his daily life at the theatre, to pay much or any attention to this important phase of his operation.

As a constructive suggestion to Round Tablers we believe it appropriate to cite the activities and consistency with which this institutional work is carried on by a fellow Round Tabler.

Jim Long is the manager of the Plaza Theatre in Kansas City, a suburban shopping center located in one of the finest residential sections of the city. Evidently Jim realizes that he is in business fifty-two weeks a year. His consistency in selling the theatre as an institution is obvious evidence of his belief that the selling of individual attractions is not necessarily subordinate to promotions which go beyond his merchandising each change of show. A detailed account of Long's activities may be found in this week's Round Table Section. We most decidedly prescribe a few doses of this kind of tonic for box office inertia.

CHURCH SERMONS

Dr. Christian F. Reisner, pastor of the Broadway Temple Methodist Episcopal Church in New York, recently devoted one of his Sunday evening sermons to praise "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." This was arranged through the efforts of Rutgers Neilson of S. Barret McCormick's staff at RKO Radio Pictures.

Pointing out the fact that more than a half million people in one city would flock to see "Snow White," Dr. Reisner said: "It shows that when something that is great in its simplicity, and simple in its greatness arrives, there is an audience for it."

He continues, "Just several blocks away on Broadway there are plays running which are debasing in their appeal."

It is with this last statement that we are concerned. There is no question but that this special sermon was very helpful to business at the Music Hall in New York.

However, when making a tie-up of this sort, we caution you to specifically ask your pastor to refrain from comparing the wholesome qualities of this film to other films which in his opinion may be "debasing." There is a natural tendency for churchmen to emphasize their point by comparison. After all, there is only one "Snow White" and by praising this one film at the expense of perhaps many others he is not helping you.

TRAILERS

Word from Harleigh Shultz of Howard Strickling's publicity department at M-G-M in Hollywood mentions an important item concerning the effectiveness of trailers. Harleigh informs us of the trail-blazing, pioneering efforts of the Studio in making trailers, under the supervision of a special department under Howard Dietz. The trailer on "The Last Gangster" is specifically brought to our attention, and having seen this advance screen ballyhoo, we were most impressed by its informality, originality and potent selling qualities.

Most theatre managers are fully aware of the tremendous advertising possibilities their screens have to offer. We consider it one of the most important mediums of advertising you have at your disposal. A word concerning the effective use of this powerful ad medium, therefore, seems in order.

In a nutshell, you have as your own property, a priceless instrument of merchandising. The thoroughness, care and capable manner in which you put it to use means many dollars to you. Remember, your newspaper ad may be passed over by someone who may not see the theatre page that day . . . your radio blurb may be missed by someone listening in to another station . . . your circulars or posters may be overlooked as well as your lobby front by people who are in a hurry. But one thing remains a certainty: your screen must be and is seen by everyone in your theatre; no more direct approach to moviegoers has yet been discovered. What you are doing to take advantage of this should be one of your foremost thoughts of the day.

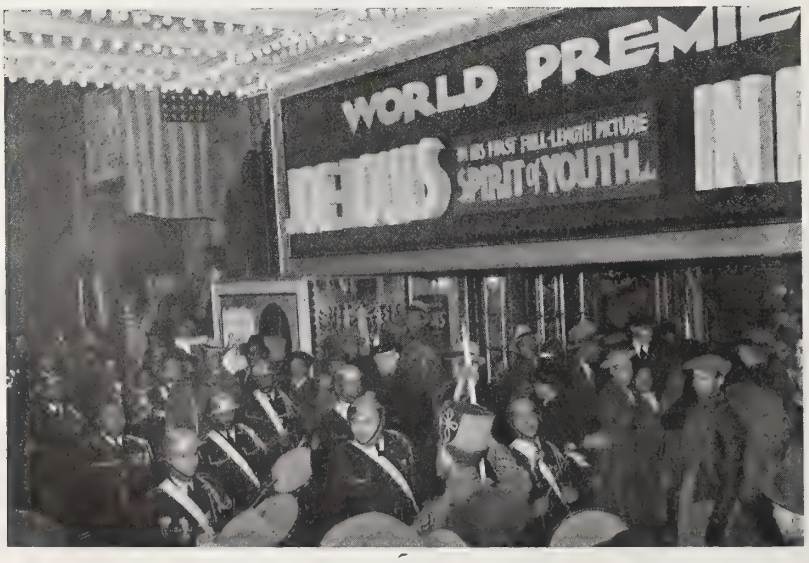
Let's hear from you.

Jack Goldstein

Devised by E. J. Hayes, in charge of the New York Broadway Temple M.E. Church's plays, was "Snow White" playlet enacted by kiddies of the congregation. Shown at left is Pastor, Christian F. Reisner with the children dressed as the Queen and seven dwarfs. Pastor devoted sermon to the picture and urged his parishioners to see the film.



Round Table In Pictures

Featured by J. Wessel, manager for Warner Brothers in Amsterdam, Holland, was unique lobby display on "Emile Zola" at the Tuschinski Theatre. Replica of court room scene was constructed of beaverboard and used ahead of opening. Broadcast by leading actors netted plenty of newspaper publicity.

Nautical exploitation was the order of the day for "Souls at Sea" engagement at the Prince Edward Theatre, Sydney, Australia with Hermann E. Flynn, advertising and publicity director hiring an auxiliary schooner properly bannered to ply the harbor advertising the date.

World premiere of Joe Louis' starring vehicle "Spirit of Youth" was given gala atmosphere at Washington, D.C. recently. Photo shows James Reese Europe Post, American Legion Brass band playing in front of the theatre awaiting a personal appearance of Joe himself and his entourage which included many colored notables.

Advance lobby display at right was conceived by Manager Albert Garfield, Warner's Keith Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., for "The Hurricane." At no cost, the original illustrations of the Saturday Evening Post story were obtained from the artist, W. H. D. Koerner, and mounted on easels each, with card of explanation. Center of display carried credit card.

Effective and in the long run inexpensive is street float operated by Ken Leach of the Strand Theatre, Calgary, Alberta, Canada. To be pointed out is the fact that Leach's display is permanent and each week the 24 sheets on either side are changed to plug current attraction.

Unusual and eye-arresting indeed was the animated lobby display conceived by Manager Harry Goldstein, M & P Morton Theatre, Mattapan, Mass. for "Ali Baba Goes to Town." Turntable in back of display rotated the scene stills shown below giant head of Cantor, whose eyes also moved.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Promotion

An effective tieup was arranged by Bill Craft, Capitol Theatre, Mildura, Australia for "Dodsworth." Contacting leading perfumery manufacturer who features an "Evening in Paris" preparation, Craft tied up the Paris episode in the picture and promoted giveaway of powder sachets to each lady patron and a perfumed calendar card. For street bally the showman used an 18 foot calico title banner about 45 feet from ground atop new building in course of construction.

Another excellent slant which Craft reports as being highly successful for him is a child beauty contest tied in with local newspaper and running over a period of three months.

Publishes Paper

With Millinocket, Maine boasting no newspaper, William W. Johnson, Opera House, for "Stage Door" created his own paper called the "Millinocket News" which he distributed house to house. This three column paper contained theatre advertising, publicity and enough advertising from merchants to cover entire cost.

For his lobby display, Bill constructed from beaverboard a section of wall containing a "Stage Door," wall of which was covered with imitation brick crepe paper and door painted off in panels with light placed above. Door was padlocked and week ahead of opening, keys were distributed to patrons. To those whose keys fitted the lock and were able to open the door, guest tickets were awarded.

Premiere

To usher in Larry Graburn's "Victoria the Great" date at the Capitol Theatre, Halifax, Nova Scotia, local celebrities were invited, prominent among whom were His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, His Honour the Premiere of the province and His Worship the Mayor, among others. Letters on special "Victoria" stationery were addressed to churches, schools and club authorities drawing attention to the opening, school board was supplied with study guides and permission was granted to dismiss school earlier to permit students to attend special showing.

Advance lobby display cut out from 24 sheets was resplendent with flitter and other displays included reviews and exchange material, special front was constructed and newspapers came through with stories and art work.

MILT HARRIS ALSO MONTHLY COLUMNIST

Milt Harris, publicity director for Loew's Theatres in Cleveland, is a full-fledged columnist for the Ohio Motorist. Milt writes a page each month, exploiting the coming attractions to Loew's Theatres. The publication is mailed to the homes of thousands of members of the Cleveland Auto Club.

He also engineered an exclusive tieup with the annual Cleveland Food Show. At each of the 135 booths, Harris has planted a head of a star who plays his houses. People identify them for prizes which were all promoted.

Church Cooperation

Because of the unusual angles offered by the picture "Monastery," Manager B. L. Kearney of the State Theatre, Manchester, N. H. and Mort Aronson, in charge of exploitation, took full advantage of the situation and secured cooperation of priests in all Catholic Churches who praised the picture for three Sundays in advance of showing. Similar announcements were made in public and parochial schools.

Bishop Petersen of the Manchester Diocese requested all Catholics to support the picture and dinner was given to Father Ahern, narrator for the film. A benefit performance for the Catholic Women's Clubs sold 2,000 seats and special preview was held for local prominents.

Old Home Week

E. D. Yaborough, manager of the RKO Capitol and State Theatres in Union City, N. J. exploited "A Damsel in Distress" by highlighting the fact that George Burns and Gracie Allen, co-starred with Fred Astaire, first met at the Capitol Theatre.

Local interest was secured with an ad reading "Hudson County's own Freddie, Gracie and Georgie in reunion. Freddie went to school in Weehawken and Gracie and Georgie met for the first time when appearing in vaudeville at the Capitol. So we've declared an old home week and we're bringing them back for a reunion with their old Hudson County friends in a lavish music and fun show."

Hudson Dispatch carried a wire from George Burns, relating the romance that started in Union City and asking patrons to come and see Fred Astaire, "the local boy who made good."

Unusual Slant

Pat Argust, New Spreckels Theatre, San Diego, pulled a neat one for "First Lady" by tying in with local annual fire and policemen charity ball. At the dance cards were distributed to ladies with caption "You are someone's 'First Lady', pin this card on and see if your number tallies with that of any worn by a gentleman." To the men the copy read "Someone is your 'First Lady', look around" etc., etc. To those presenting duplicate numbers at the theatre, guest tickets were awarded.

On "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round" attractive girls distributed cards to which promoted peanuts were attached, copy reading "you'll go nuts," etc., etc., cooperating merchant devoting entire window to display. Blowup of telegram on business picture had done in other key cities was placed in telegraph window, full page co-op ad was built around a misspelled word contest and three sheets were sniped on walls of all buildings in course of construction.

Classified Ads

Ernest H. Wolf, Landis Theatre, Vineland, N. J., through tieup with his local newspapers runs the name of a few of his patrons on the classified ad page, offering ducats to those whose names appear. Paper in turn gives the gag a nice break on the front page each week.

For "100 Men and a Girl," Wolf entered his decorated advertising truck in local parade and arranged with merchants for various window displays plugging the attraction.

Local Boy Angle

When Lou Smithgall, manager of the Rialto in Canton, Penn., received a large photo of Harry Davenport, Warner player and local Canton boy, he garnered some extra publicity for his theatre by planting photo in lobby and local papers came through with "local boy makes good" stories.

Music Tie-In

Contacting all night clubs and local bands, Roy Cooper, Palomar Theatre, Seattle for "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round" supplied leaders with orchestrations. Through tieup with local five and ten chain, window and counter displays were promoted, sound truck covered streets playing hit tunes from picture and various plugs were given over ether.

Boucher & Fannin Report Activities On Openings

Fourth in our series of reporting activities concerning campaigns for the opening of new theatres.

The Blair Theatre in Hollidaysburg, Pennsylvania, opened December 24th, and is operated by the Silverman Brothers of Altoona, Pa. The house is under the supervision of Frank Boucher, with William H. Plank as local house manager.

One of the many outstanding features of their campaign was a tieup with the local Kiwanis Milk Fund, whereby the Kiwanis Club sponsored the opening of this new house, guaranteeing the management the full admission price for each ticket, retaining all the money in excess for their worthy charity. This tieup was instigated for a two-fold purpose: first, to gain good-will of the community, and secondly, to guarantee a capacity house the opening night despite a pre-Christmas rush. Practically every ticket sold brought double its value, thus giving the Kiwanis Milk Fund a substantial sum. Special letters were mailed by the Kiwanis organization, and much newspaper publicity was received on this tieup.

Many full-pages ran in the local newspapers at no cost to the theatre, since advertisers participated in the cost of these pages.

A neat little program was gotten up for the Grand Opening and Dedication, also at no cost to the theatre, since the back page was bought by the Pennsylvania Edison Company.

Special circulars, posters, etc., played a prominent part in the general activities concerning the opening.

The premiere itself was a brilliant affair, with addresses being made by the house manager, William Plank, the President of the Borough Council, President of the Civic Club, a spokesman for the Citizens of the Community, a representative for the Blair Theatres and greetings from the Kiwanis Club.

Shreveport

Playing fourth-run pictures, the campaign for the opening of the new West End Theatre in Shreveport, Louisiana, was especially effective, since the theatre seats but 388 and has a limited budget. The complete campaign was handled by Glenn T. Fannin.

As part of his campaign, Fannin ran trailers long in advance of opening at four other houses owned by his organization. Choice window and telephone pole locations were tacked with special cards, and excellent lobby displays were secured at small cost.

Two days before the opening date the cashier called every telephone number in the section of town where that theatre is located. Thousands of paper bags were stamped and distributed by grocers, fruit stands, etc., one week in advance of opening.

Thirty-five hundred two-color novelties, distributed house-to-house and in autos, showed card with foot imprints on top, copy reading "Let's Step Out to see . . . " then followed copy concerning opening. These cards cost theatre nothing, on tieup secured with an advertiser. The radio was used good effect and newspapers allotted generous space to this theatre, which could not afford huge ads.

"Let's Hear From You!"

Various Tieups Sell "Wells Fargo"

Through cooperation of local automobile agency, Louie Lamm, Warner's Palace Theatre, Loraine, Ohio, for "Wells Fargo" had bannered new model car cover downtown area plugging opening at his theatre. Agency also took ads in local papers. Classified ad contest was also planted with guest tickets going to those whose names were scattered throughout ads. Special front was constructed for the engagement and bookmarks were distributed at public and lending libraries.

More Suggestions On How to Avoid Costly Accidents

Third in a series of articles on "Safety" as explained in a special manual issued by the M. & P. Theatres in New England. Quoting from this pamphlet:

"The following suggestions will help you take a prominent part in our No Accident Campaign. Every one of these preventative suggestions are the culmination of actual accidents—cases taken from our insurance records here at the home office.

BASEMENT:

1. All miscellaneous basement storage and operation rooms should be inspected. The poster department may have a large quantity of combustible material and may be using inflammable paints or stains.
2. Motors, blowers and cooling apparatus should be thoroughly inspected. They should be clean and well lubricated.
3. A suitable equipment of fire extinguishers should be installed throughout the basement.
4. Observe transformers and note condition.
5. Dispose of all excess scenery, curtains, advertising matter stored under stage.

ELECTRICAL:

"We will not attempt here to cover electrical conditions in detail. Inspections should be made by electricians who should be familiar with hazardous electrical conditions.

1. The electrical equipment should be gone over by a competent electrician at regular intervals. Condition of wiring, sockets, switches, etc., should be carefully checked.
2. Extension cords should be properly maintained. Any worn cord should be replaced with new. It is not practical to repair cords where insulation is worn or damaged.
3. Fuses only of proper capacity should be used. Any wires, coins, etc., used for fusing, should be replaced with enclosed fuses.
4. Cabinets or rooms containing electrical apparatus should be kept under lock and key where possible.
5. Rubber mats should be installed at and about principal switchboards, especially where floors are damp.
6. Motors, switchboards, starters, rheostats, transformers, etc., should be checked most carefully, looking out particularly for overheating due to overload. Rheostats and other starting devices which produce heat should be installed, giving consideration to this factor, and where there is any possibility of hot melted parts dropping to the floor, the floor should be covered with asbestos. Motors should be kept properly lubricated but should be kept as clean and free from excess oil as possible.
7. Equipment should be tested for grounds.
8. Transformers are particularly hazardous and should be constantly inspected.

Fourth in this series on "Safety" as explained by M. & P. Theatres will appear in next week's Round Table Section.

KANSAS CITY MANAGER SELLS THEATRE AS AN INSTITUTION

Plaza Theatre Promotions Include Community Cooperation; Patrons Cheer Return to Single Features; Radio Ally

Jim Long has been manager of the Plaza Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., for the past two years. He discovered that his audiences were fundamentally the same as other movie audiences; people who still like quality when other theatres almost universally are selling quantity entertainment.

He recently tried running double feature bills for a period of four weeks. When he announced a return to single feature programs, his patrons greeted the news with applause and cheers. The change back to single feature programs, augmented by carefully selected short subjects, was accompanied by an increase in admission prices, and reportedly turned out most successful.

Radio

Radio has made many national events such as major prize fights, speeches by important public figures, and so on, tough competition for night theatre business. Last fall, Long hooked up a small radio to the regular sound system and relayed the speech of Chief Justice Hugo Black directly to Plaza patrons. He cut his program at 8.30 P.M. sharp, turned up the house lights, and had a capacity, attentive audience which greatly appreciated this extra courtesy.

Lectures and Bridge

A variety of activities contribute to its patrons' feeling of the Plaza theatre being "theirs."

During the winter months, the Plaza Association sponsors a series of eleven bridge lectures every Tuesday morning before each Christmas, and then follows with a series of book reviews.

Well known people conduct both series, and the attendance is large. It averages, according to reports, between 1200 and 1500 for bridge, and even more for the reviews. Primarily, women attend the lectures and reviews, which means that in most cases each of them represents a family; or, an audience of 2000 represents a potential movie patronage of 8,000 to 10,000. Mr. Long points out that not only is this excellent advertising for the Plaza, but it produces revue as well.

In the same category: the Christian Science Church holds its Sunday services, testimonial services Wednesday noon, and occasional lectures, all in the theatre.

Two different Saturdays this winter the Junior League has leased the theatre for a children's charity show.

Good Will

Also productive of good will, though not of revenue: every other week on Friday nights, Mr. Long admits free the 15 children comprising the patrol at nearby Bryant school. They are the children responsible for enforcing the school's safety program. This not only encourages school safety, but also helps build good will with the Parent Teachers Association.

The E. C. White school, also nearby, is given free use of the theatre for its graduation exercises each year.

Annually, the art class from Kansas State College at Manhattan visits the Plaza, and thoroughly reviews details of the theatre's construction, decoration, and furnishings. Members of the class are required to produce an essay on the theatre after their return to Manhattan.

"VOGUES OF 1938" FASHION SHOW IN PLAZA THEATRE PATIO LOBBY

Fashion Show

In connection with "Vogues of 1938" Mr. Long presented a style show in his large patio lobby. A stage presentation of the same show would have been expensive. Also, by having the show in the lobby, patrons could watch it as long as they cared to, while hearing a small orchestra. Six mannequins paraded over the runway placed across the center fountain of his lobby, and they used twenty-five changes of costume.

Question Box

A "Question Box" program which Mr. Long staged each Thursday night last winter has since been taken up by other theatres in various forms. Members of the audience contributed questions. Those used earned the contributor a pair of passes. Participants, five each Thursday, were patrons and competed for the two prizes of $15 and $10. This promotion is reported to have stimulated the business of an otherwise slow night. It also served to give Plaza patrons a new impression of the theatre to carry with them.

Trailers

Currently, Long is running a series of twenty trailers, using a different one at each change of program, built around the more beautiful and significant details of the theatre; its architecture, design and decoration. Brief and to the point, they begin with the admonition to "Know Your Plaza Theatre."

Attendance at the Plaza, according to observers, is most consistent; one reason no doubt being the high type of institutional promotion employed by the theatre.

Round Table Members are invited to send in any material they may have concerning the selling of their theatre as an institution; also, it may be remembered that these activities are applied to entrants' credit for 1938 Quigley Awards Consideration.

Holdsberg Holds "Topper" Preview

To sell his "Topper" date at the Paramount, Des Moines, Harry Holdsberg held a special preview with two girls at phone two days ahead calling telephone subscribers and telling them about the show. Opening night comment cards were distributed to patons. Gag street bally slants were used, series of humorous ads were run in local dailies and special front was constructed.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk(*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J C JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska.

Dear Herald:

Last night we saw "Stella Dallas," with Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Allan Hale and Ann Shirley. This picture was better than we expected it to be. If you are expecting to find comedy in this you will be disappointed, for there is no comedy in it, except that you perhaps will regard it as comedy when Allan Hale comes to deliver a Christmas turkey to Stella when he is drunk and insists in cooking the turkey in an oven without any heat. You will find sob stuff in "Stella Dallas" rather than comedy. It's a picture that portrays some of the homelife in about every community, of people who haven't any sense.

We regard the acting of Miss Stanwyck in "Stella Dallas" as the best we have ever seen her do.

In his "Rolling Along" column, Guy Williams says, "Whenever Fred Astaire blows a line of dialogue, he invariably snaps his finger, whirls on one foot and steps out of the scene," and Jimmie Fidler adds, "And I wouldn't give a snap of my finger if he never stepped back."

Why, Jimmie, aren't you ashamed to talk that way about Freddie?

We are living in constant fear that the dockwallaping negroes down south won't get something else framed up to take the place of the "Big Apple" by the time our northern "high society" folks get it worn out.

J. E. Scott, branch manager of the Fox exchange in Omaha, sends us a check and asks us to have the HERALD sent to his home so his wife can read it. He says he gets one at the office but wants his wife to have a chance to read it also. It is quite likely he thinks this will satisfy her better than a fur coat and will keep him from having to frame up a lot of alibis that she won't believe anyhow. Thanks, J. E., we'll do it.

We recently sent to Gertrude Merriam, who helps Jack Goldstein with the "Round Table" department of the HERALD, some theatre passes the boys sent us, and she winds up her letter to us by saying, "Please give my very best regards to the boys." By gosh, we won't do it. Why in thunder don't she confine her best regards to one person? What's the sense in scattering them all over the United States anyhow?

We have a son who is agent at Powder River in Wyoming and part time dispatcher for the Burlington railroad at Casper, and he wants us to come out there during the open season on antelope. We know what he wants. He wants us to get him some antelope meat.

The other night we heard a fellow on the radio telling about their excellent gasoline. We were glad to learn of this, for we have been burning gasoline over something like 250,000 miles of road for 12 years and didn't know of this product. The radio is a wonderful disseminator of gasoline knowledge.

If you should ever come out here and go through the "Gateway to the West" we hope you will remember to close the gate, for one fellow left it open and Jake Squires' sow and five pigs got out and now he can't find 'em. Such doggone carelessness will bust this town up yet, just as sure as the billy dickens.

We have just received a letter from Aunt Pruny Barnloft back in Indiana and she says, among other things, "Your Uncle Cedric and Axel Peabody has gone over to the widow Witherspoon's place to help her son Abner and Caleb Stoner butcher a couple of hogs. It just peers like your Uncle Cedric has to help all the neighbors do their butcherin'."

We have been hearing considerable noise of late about curbing monopolies. In fact, we have been hearing that for several years, and we are wondering just how much there is to it. The press carried a statement the other day that the radio commission was going to require the various sub-stations to cease playing phonograph records and hire orchestras, and this inclines us to wonder if the radio commission had been granted a monopoly of the air. Just who owns this air, anyway?

You have no doubt heard that old saying that "clothes make the man." Well, that may be true, we don't know, as we have never tried it, but we have known of some instances where clothes failed to make a star.

It seems that some women will resort to almost anything to get on the front page. We recently saw a picture in the press of two women who staged a public wrestling match on a stage covered with mud. Some one once said that "the fools are not all dead yet."

The other day we had a little swelling on the back of our neck, and after the doctor examined it he said, "It looks like you've got something there."

"First Lady," with Kay Francis, Preston Foster and Walter Connolly, is a satire on high society political life in Washington. Louise Fazenda put some comedy in it as president of the women's W. P. P. Society. In fact, Louise generally adds some huckleberry pie to the menu.

If your enemy "smites you on one cheek" knockheloutofhim.

It is quite likely that we won't rate much above a pigmy, but, nevertheless, when a flock of ducks come along we aim to shoot both barrels. We shot at a flock of geese once and both barrels went off and the gun kicked us off of a rathouse and on our back into ice coldwater, but we got three geese. Gosh, wouldn't a roasted goose be good right now? But we'll probably have sowbelly for dinner.

WORLD MARKET

GENERAL HUGH JOHNSON'S general business is being militant and often indignant. He first appeared on the motion picture horizon as a bucko mate of the New Deal in charge of the N.R.A.'s Blue Eagle brand of national salvation by industrial rule. Now-a-days he is a newspaper columnist and has to be militant, also indignant, about something six times a week. The job is a bit tough because for competition in the same syndicate he has Mr. Heywood Broun, who has one subject to be militant about all the time, and Mr. Westbrook Pegler, who is persistently and entertainingly indignant about everything always and is looking for more.

The other day while the General was chewing his pencil in anxious meditation about something to be angry about, the papers brought along some figures on the current popular success and high earnings of a nice athletic little girl from Norway, Miss Sonja Henie.

ONE glimpse of the box office records at Madison Square Garden and the General had found a cause. He scolded terrifically about Miss Henie and by the time he had got to little Master Freddie Bartholomew, the General had a full head of steam. How much he does not care for Freddie is remarkable. The whole trouble, it appears, is that the patriotic General burns with annoyance at the fact that persons from overseas can come into this American industry of amusement and collect large salaries. He did not go into the subject of taxes, income taxes and final net figures.

The General seems to be under an impression that we are being invaded, raided, looted.

It is just possible that if our irate patriot would examine the overseas returns and earnings on American motion pictures, and the merchandise they help to sell, the cost of employment of the imported players who so importantly contribute to giving our screen wares international appeal would seem less devastating.

It is true enough that the great domestic market could support a competent, and entirely indigenous, motion picture art and industry, but it is also exceedingly obvious that the American public is served with an order of production that has grown up in the abundant nurture of a world market and can only be maintained in current standards by that market.

The motion picture can do without any rabble rousing about alien players.

SUGGESTION

"ONE in twenty British Films rejected—five times the proportion of banned U. S. subjects" snorts a headline in To-Day's Cinema in London, recording the report of Mr. J. A. Montgomery, Irish government film censor.

Perchance from the viewpoint of the London editor's desk this sounds like more treason from the Irish.

But from here it looks as though the British might take note of some of the merits of the American industry's Production Code and its administration. Self-regulation is in the nature of that famous "ounce of prevention."

THE SCHOOL JOB

"WHAT Education Cannot Do" was the subject under which President Hutchins of the University of Chicago addressed the Inland Daily Press association there. "The shadiest educational ventures under respectable auspices are the schools of journalism," he told the assembled journalists. "They exist in defiance of the obvious fact that the best preparation for journalism is a good education. Journalism itself can be learned, if at all, only by being a journalist."

Dr. Hutchins is profoundly anti-vocational in his policies, asserting that all education can do is to train the minds of students so they can "adjust themselves to any job."

That brings to mind the fact that there are budding educational attentions toward the vocational study of the motion picture. And that they are likely to prove even more futile than college manufacture of journalists.

The fact is, all too obviously, that educational institutions, more especially the colleges, have gone into showmanship, all the way from athletic field to class room, and are conspicuously, if not with dignity, rampantly set in pursuit of devices of publicity. New courses make headlines, and often nothing else.

"PUBLIC RELATIONS"

"PUBLIC relations is not something that can be taken out of a bottle in small doses," remarks Mr. A. O. Dietz, president of Commercial Investment Trust in New York, writing for Metropolitan Life's "Executives Service Bulletin."

"There is nothing secret or mysterious about it. The way a business is conducted is its public relations program—good, bad or indifferent. And a progressive public relations program is comprised of these three things: A good product or service; A house kept in order; Interpretation and appraisal of the product and the business behind it from the objective or public viewpoint."

Mr. Dietz's prescription seems to define rather well what the organized motion picture industry of the United States tries to do, and rather consistently does.

The motion picture consists almost entirely of public relations. It has no other concern.

FROM Rochester comes news of a new photographic adventure and achievement in a lens for airplane photography and mapping which increases the scope of the camera by three times. It is the "Metrogon," made by the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company, a name long familiar in the world of the motion picture. This new lens, it is said, gives a negative from a mile high so well defined that it shows individual, separate railroad ties anywhere in a two mile circle below. No camera could be more candid.

This Week

4-Way Film Bloc

From Italy this week came a report that government officials and producers of motion pictures are openly discussing a "Pact of Four" which would align Italy, France, Germany and Great Britain against the United States in the matter of distributing films. The report was qualified by the assertion that consummation of the agreement depends upon Italy and Germany on one side and France and Great Britain on the other approaching each other in the "political field." In the other three countries mentioned in the Italian story, it was denied that negotiations are underway. The foreign department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors also said it had heard nothing of the proposed pact.

See page 12.

Propaganda Films

The National Defenders, a patriotic organization claiming a membership of about 60,000 persons, has launched a motion picture campaign to counteract the propaganda which it claims is contained in foreign produced films. The group's second film, "The American Way," is now being distributed in both 16 and 35 mm. Officials of the organization predict that the picture will receive as widespread distribution as their first picture, "We The People," which was shown, they claim, in 1,000 theatres.

Details are on page 14.

Challenged

John Josephs, Newark exhibitor, this week challenged Frank Nugent, film critic on the New York Times, to produce documentary evidence to prove a published charge that many exhibitors cut feature films with the result that "abridged versions" of features are seen in neighborhood houses. Exchange managers in New York joined with Mr. Josephs in pointing out that exhibitors are forbidden under the copyright law to cut films.

The story is on page 66.

Literary Properties

Original stories accounted for 68 per cent of the 35 purchases of literary properties made by 10 motion picture producers during January. For the most part, the stories will be used for production during the 1938-39 season. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer acquired the most number of stories, six originals and two novels.

The titles of the 35 stories and all available credits are part of a story on page 15.

RKO Management

Leo Spitz decided this week to continue as president of RKO and at the same time announced that J. R. McDonough, a former president, had been elected a vice-president and a member of the board of directors. The developments ended several weeks of speculation over possible changes in the company's management, extended conferences were held on the Coast and then were transferred to New York.

Sunday Shows

Advocates of Sunday motion pictures received setbacks this week in Charlotte, N. C., Portland, Me., and Beatrice, Neb. In Charlotte, the city council tabled a proposal to hold a referendum on liberalizing Sunday "blue laws"; in Portland a theatre manager was fined $10 for operating on Sunday, and in Beatrice a recount of a referendum vote showed that Sunday show proponents lost by 14 votes.

These and other legislative matters are included in a story on page 34.

No 'Snow White' Cuts

Walt Disney will not delete any of the so-called "horror" scenes in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," before it goes into general release, an official release from the Disney studios announces. A close check on the film's runs at the Carthay Circle in Hollywood and the Music Hall in New York showed there were no complaints on the scenes concerning which several sources, including the British censors, were exercised.

In fact, the release continued, several children, when queried as to what they liked best in the picture voted for "the nasty old witch."

Mr. Disney, discussing the subject, said: "We have never made films for children. That we do is a popular fallacy. We'd soon go broke if we did. It is true that we firmly believe in keeping the contents of our pictures above reproach, but what we really strive for in our productions is to appeal to the child qualities which linger in every adult."

Trouble in the Spring

Hollywood labor ranks, in view of the continued silence by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees as to its plans for making good its claim to jurisdiction over all branches of the film industry, is looking for important changes in alignment before the summer. Looming on the horizon are the producer-labor basic agreement conferences set for late in March and developments in the Screen Actors' Guild plan for a closed shop for extras. Lining up of the forces was noticeable in the action of the writers' and directors' organizations which on Tuesday night voted to aid each other and the Screen Actors' Guild in resisting any encroachment by the IATSE.

Labor news is reported on page 27.

Third Reading

Amid protests and lobbying from and by producers and distributors the proposed new British Films Act this week came up for its third reading in the House of Commons, preliminary to final debate on the floor of the House and voting by that body and the House of Lords. Among last minute amendments proposed by Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, one in particular aroused loud clamor, a plan to allow films costing £30,000 to count as triple for distributors' quota. The bill, as it neared the vital legislative stage, did not vary greatly from the original White Paper introduced by Mr. Stanley and the only important changes made in that first draft were those proposed by the Board of Trade president himself.

See page 44 for the news from London.

Dual Bill "Stooges"

Coincident with the spread of Chicago's movement to resort to law for elimination of double features, came a statement this week from Edward A. Golden, Monogram's sales manager, attacking the anti-dual move and branding Chicago's single-bill advocates as "stooges" for "monopolistic groups" within the film industry. These groups, after repeated unsuccessful attempts to eliminate double features, have turned to the health question, in desperation, Mr. Golden declared. He warned that abolition of dual bills strikes at the "very heart of the industry" and would be ruinous economically.

Mr. Golden's statement and other developments concerning double features are discussed in an article on page 30.

Product in Australia

Hoyts and Greater Union, the largest circuits in Australia, have virtually completed negotiations for product with all distributors, ending a battle of wits and checkbooks that officially began January 1st but actually had been waged for a considerably longer period. Allied with the product matters is Hoyts' interest, with Snider and Dean Theatres, in a new circuit, National Theatres Corporation, which already is beginning operations.

How American product is fitted into the Australian distribution solution is detailed by Cliff Holt on page 28.

Decision Reversed

Dr. Lee DeForest, inventor, developed the arc lamp method of reproducing sound phonographically, the United States Court of Appeals in Philadelphia ruled this week in reversing a decision handed down by the Delaware federal court. The lower court had held that the device, said to be important in the production of sound motion pictures, was developed by three German scientists, Joseph Engl, Joseph Massole and Hans Vogt. The patents of the three Germans are held by the American Tri-Ergon Corporation which sued at Wilmington to have them declared the originals.

Signs Gloria Swanson

Gloria Swanson, whose one-year contract with Columbia expired about two months ago without her appearance in any productions, has signed a three-picture contract with Republic, Moe J. Siegel, managing director of Republic announced Wednesday before leaving New York for the Coast. Miss Swanson's latest picture was "Music in the Air," produced in 1934 by Fox.

Chance Games

Hearings conducted by the Post Office at Washington on the legal status of chance games under the lottery laws may bring a "fraud order" classifying "Bank Night" as a lottery, and close the mails to the game.

In New York, members of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association are gathering information on Bingo games in church and lodge halls which will be submitted to law enforcement officials in a campaign to eliminate the games as competition to neighborhood theatres.

In Florida the supreme court ruled that Bingo is gambling, while in St. Louis a new giveaway scheme, known as Trading Stamps, and initiated by Fanchon & Marco there, is being adopted by neighborhood houses.

For complete chance game developments see page 30.

January Decrease

Effects of the present slump were reflected in the monthly report of tax collections issued by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. January totals for the federal admission tax were $1,353,415, a decrease of $152,264 from the $1,505,676 reported for the same month last year and $936,611 less than the December, 1937, receipts of $2,290,027.

Warner Radio Show

A contract providing for a 15 weeks' extension of the network time for the Warner Brothers-American Tobacco Company radio program was signed this week. The program, "Your Hollywood Parade" is broadcast on the red network of the National Broadcasting Company and the present contract expires in two weeks. The program will remain substantially as it is now, but, it was announced, a few slight changes might be made. The contract between Warner Brothers and the tobacco company, aside from the network company, just renewed, is for 52 weeks and applies to talent and the production of the program.

Commercial Films

The United States Steel Corporation and its subsidiaries this week revealed plans for joining the ever increasing number of companies that seek to employ the motion picture as an advertising medium. U. S. Steel has set up a budget of more than $200,000 for three films, two in color, which are virtually completed. The two color films run one reel and four reels while the third, in black and white, is six reels in length. The shorter of the two colored films is planned principally for theatrical distribution throughout the country and the other is intended for theatres in cities and towns where steel mills or plants are located and for non-theatrical showings. The six reel film, containing detailed and technical information, will be distributed non-theatrically.

Details of the corporation's plans are on page 62.

New Censor Board

Reorganization of the Board of Moving Picture Censors of the Province of Quebec is contemplated under a bill, notice of which Premier Maurice Duplessis gave the legislature this week.

The Saskatchewan, Canada, film censor will be given authority to classify all films shown in the province as "general" or "for adults only," under an amendment to the Theatres and Cinematograph Act, which will be introduced in the Saskatchewan legislature this session.

A crowd of more than 3,000 in the Orpheum theatre, Vancouver, B. C., registered a protest this week against the censorship ban on "China Strikes Back," which had been scheduled for showing. Led by A. M. Stephen, president of the Canadian League for Peace and Democracy, Vancouver branch, under whose auspices the film was to be shown, the crowd passed a resolution asking for an investigation into the amount of influence brought to bear on the censors by foreign consulates.

4 NATIONS TO "FREEZE OUT" HOLLYWOOD, SAY ITALIANS

Italian Producers and Press Openly Discuss Projected Pact But It's Denied in London, Berlin and Paris

Amidst the political turbulence in Europe, with Germany's coup in Austria and the resignation of Captain Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary and opponent of the Anglo-German accords, Joseph D. Ravotto, correspondent in Rome of Motion Picture Herald, reports negotiations among four countries, Italy, Germany, France and England, for a motion picture trade treaty designed to provide for the production of sufficient films in Europe to form an effective bloc against Hollywood product. Knowledge of such a plan has been denied by representatives of industry organizations in each of the three countries supposedly involved with Italy in the matter and by the foreign department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

It has long been known that it is the ambition of Premier Mussolini to build a strong Italian motion picture industry, strong enough, in fact, to threaten or eclipse the American domination of the European market. The building of Cinecitta, largest and most modern film production center on the Continent, was the first step. Three companies, financed respectively by French, German and English money, are now engaged in production in Italy, and in another story herewith, Mr. Ravotto, reporting that Italian production is more active than ever before in its history, quotes Vittorio Mussolini, who recently entered a production pact with Hal Roach, as predicting that the Italian industry soon would be in first place in the world market.

Mussolini's dream of a "Pact of Four" is the prompting force of negotiations now going on among producers and officials of four countries.

Ever since Italy initiated its film renaissance with construction of the largest and most modern cinema city in Europe, conversations have been carried on with Great Britain, France and Germany for four-way collaboration.

The prime object of these dickerings is "Freeze Hollywood out of the foreign market."

Although these negotiations have been

Italy Will Take First Place in Film Production, Says Vittorio Mussolini

by JOSEPH D. RAVOTTO in Rome

Vittorio Mussolini, in his first article since he returned from his unpropitious Hollywood trip, predicts that in a few years Italy will become one of the world's leading film producers.

The article appears in the first issue of the new local weekly review publication called Film. It is in regular newspaper format but done up in rotogravure, with snappy photographs. Two pages are devoted to radio. It is published by Giovanni Tumminelli and edited by Mino Doletti.

Looking over the film horizon with new hopes and greater promises, Mr. Mussolini in the article, headed "New Year, New Hopes," writes:

"Even if for the time being we are at the tail of world's production, 1938, at least, is happily initiated. France, no one yet seems to know why, has left us 'way back in the rear.

"Let us console ourselves with the fact that with us are the comrades of the Axis. But not for long. I am sure that in a few years' time (don't become frightened by the few years) when this period of trial is over, when the last smoke of a cinematographic Utopia has vanished, when work will be done with more seriousness, we will pass the others and we will be in first place."

In reviewing the present moment of Italy's film industry, the dictator's 21-year-old son calls it a "period of adjustment." He explains that the producers have organized to produce on a continuous, long time basis, and that alone and together with foreign houses they have turned out a series of amusing and popular films.

"We have noticed the new possibilities of several actors already sadly exploited in the past," he continues. "We have finally awakened to the fact that our directors, even the second class ones, are making gigantic steps to at least place themselves in the "golden means.' We breathe a more oxygenous. optimistic air, even if production, distribution and projection remain the basic unsolved questions."

The son of Il Duce opens the article by diagnosing Italy's most catching and infectious disease of the times. He calls it "cinematographic typhoid, . . . the most fashionable and most dangerous of seasonal diseases—influenza."

He says that cinema has become the prime obsession of the country and that it is the one subject that all classes have in common. He adds that it brings them together in a general cameraderie:

"Anyone can speak of it without fear," Mr. Mussolini declares. "Even more important, anyone may share in it. Have you a million that weighs on you? Become a producer and you will recoup your money with interest even in the dullest work turned out. Have you a subject? You will surely sell it. . . . Make 100 copies of it and finally some producer, too tired to turn it down, will pass it on to the least scrupulous directors, who will realize it with more blame than praise."

The Duce's son exalts patience and says that those having that quality are sure to be rewarded in the industry. The secret lies in hanging around waiting rooms, he says. "It is to this that many stars owe their fortune. It is not to their will, application or talent, but in having shown their legs to a few more people than modern morality permits."

The Italian public must come to love their own films even "if this often causes them great displeasure," Vittorio Mussolini solemnly preaches. He adds that they must not stay away when an Italian film is projected because "it is necessary to love it even as we love the most rebellious of our sons."

With all this off his chest, he concludes:

"A usually malignant friend said to me, 'Do you know what difference there is between the Americans and us? Over there industry is serious and publicity makes it ridiculous. Over here it is ridiculous and publicity makes it serious.' But to tell the truth, I must add that that was the last night of 1937."

ITALY WOULD DOMINATE MARKET

rather hushed up for some time, references to them have been seen and heard with more frequency in recent days. Producers and government officials speak of the projected pact with less restraint, while newspapers again are beginning to make comments under such heads as "European cinema has taken up arms against Hollywood."

Europe As "Dumping Ground"

The motif of all these articles is that Europe is nothing more than a dumping ground for Hollywood since American consumption handsomely pays the cost of production and anything realized in Europe and South America, they add, is clear profit. For this reason European producers are undersold on films that cost them less to make than the "super films of Hollywood." Competition under these conditions, they conclude, is out of the question.

The object of the "Pact of Four" would be to combine the resources of Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany to compete with American producers. The best actors, directors and talent would be pooled. Financial assistance would come from these four sources. Sites and locations would vary with the film produced.

The plan calls for distribution of these productions, not only in the countries bound by the pact but also in the rest of Europe and in South America. A definite attempt would be made to buck Hollywood, which now is the main distributor. The combined financial aid of the four countries, it is felt here, would be sufficient to guarantee the production of a superior type of films that could compete with American films.

Difficulties Cited

The local Popolo di Roma, writing about these negotiations, admits that such a pact would be confronted by many difficulties. The most important mentioned is "different audience appeals." The paper explains "between the oleographic and banal tendencies of the British soporifics of the Germans, the turbid 19th century tendencies of the French and the ever amorphous theatricals of the Italians the differences are profound."

This same paper makes no attempt to conceal its hopes that Italy would be the chief gainer in such a deal. It writes: "It is to be hoped that the major portion of the films produced would be made in Rome at the Cinecitta (cine city), which offers exceptional conditions for equipment and location."

"The 'Pact of Four' is seductive and could transform the entire European situation," continues the newspaper. "It would not interfere with the autarchial programs because it would be based upon export and monetary accords presently in vogue."

According to foreign film observers, Italy's object is to dominate the European film market. It is no secret to anyone acquainted with the local industry that Italy means to attain cinematographic autarchy just as she is seeking self-sufficiency in other economic domains.

This "Pact of Four" will not affect film autarchy. If Italy had anything to lose by such an agreement, observers say, she would not lift a finger to see it consummated.

In looking over the film situation, it is evident that Italy has progressed during the last year. She has expanded her distribution until it includes the Balkan and Baltic states, the protocolists, Austria and Hungary, the dictatorships of Germany and Rumania, and her new economic ally, Jugoslavia. Inroads have been made in South America.

Every picture Italy sells is one less that comes out of Hollywood, for the latter formerly held a practical monopoly in all these countries. While the total number of films sold to foreign nations by Italy may not even remotely compare with Hollywood's foreign sales, the gains are looked upon as progressive and as promising for the future.

Nominally the pact would not affect the accord reached by Mussolini and Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. This agreement regulates the number of American films that can be sold in Italy and limits the amount of Italian money that can be taken out of the country by American distributors.

Actually, American distributors here say, Italy would get around this by arbitrarily banning more films than presently, while much more procrastination would be shown regarding the annual withdrawal of Italian money from the country.

GERMANY SEEKING SPANISH MARKET

The New York Times, reporting that the German Ministry of Propaganda had ordered the Reich film industry to make a major effort to conquer the Spanish market and South America, said:

"The film program is part of the Ministry's campaign to increase National Socialist Influence in the Spanish speaking world. The Government's financial control of the film industry established last April disposed of the financial problems involved."

A program of purely Spanish or German and Spanish films has been prepared for production, two of which are now being made in Berlin studios. The Hispano Film Corporation is filming "The Barber of Seville' 'in Spanish only with a Spanish cast and the Government-owned UFA is filming "Andalucian Nights."

The announced plan of the Reich Propaganda Ministry is in line with reports from Brazil that the Fascist countries, Germany, Italy and Japan, are flooding the Spanish speaking countries of South America with propaganda and that they are appropriating every possible medium for that purpose.

The recent tendency here has been to encourage foreign firms to produce in Italy with combined Italian and foreign capital. This is the "Pact of Four" on a smaller scale as it insures distribution of the films in the partners' countries.

At present there are quite a number of these firms working in Italy. There is the Two Cities Films Company of London which is producing seven two-version films at Tirrenia. There is the Franco-Italian combine known as Latina Films, which already has produced "Il Fu Mattia Pascal." The Italo-German Astra Otzup company shortly will begin work at Capri on the first of a projected series of two-version films. The German refugee, Seymour Nebenzahl, with French money, has "Tarakanova" almost ready for release. It was produced at Cinecitti in French and Italian versions.

Whether the pact is realizable or not depends almost entirely on whether France and Britain on one side and Italy and Germany on the other can approach one another within reasonable distance in the political field.

Films Double Last Year Indicated

Never before in the history of the Italian film industry has there been so much activity in the local studios.

There are 30 films in work or planned. When it is recalled that Italy produced 36 pictures in all the last film year, it is easy to believe the reports that the local industry will more than double that total in the current year.

The most pretentious film of the year will be "Giuseppe Verdi," based on the life of Italy's famous composer. It will cost in the neighborhood of 6,000,000 lire ($300,000). Carmine Gallone, who directed "Scipio l'Africano," will be at the helm. Italian Academician Lucio d'Andrea will be in charge of scenery and historical detail. It will be produced by S. A. I. Grandi Film Storici, organized especially for this film.

The picture will be based on the composer's three most creative periods: that of "Nabucco," the trilogy of "La Traviata," "Il Trovatore," "Il Rigoletto" and "Aïda." Although it is still in the project stage, work will begin late in March. It is to be completed in time for the Venice Exposition.

Gigli Heads Cast

The cast is imposing. Beniamino Gigli, still considered on top among the world's leading tenors, will head the cast. Fasio Giachetti will interpret Verdi and stage actress Emma Grammatica will play the composer's mother. Italy's two leading dramatic artists, Ermete Zacconi and Ruggero Ruggeri, will play the role of the two patriots, Cavour and Manzoni respectively.

There will be a bevy of French stars, which reportedly will include Gaby Morlay as Giuseppina Streppoli, Verdi's wife; Harry Bauer and Pierre Blanchard as Bal-

DRIVE ON FOREIGN FILM PROPAGANDA PLANNED

Two New Organizations Enter the Motion Picture Field to Combat Film with Film

Seeking to counteract propaganda in foreign produced motion pictures, the National Defenders, a self-styled patriotic organization, has undertaken a film campaign and is now distributing its second picture, "The American Way."

Another organization, the American League for peace and Democracy, also is planning to employ the screen as a means of carrying its "message" to the American people.

However, the League, while contemplating the production of four films depicting the rise of Nazism in America, Germany, Rumania and Poland, has not decided upon any production date or distribution plans.

Meanwhile, in San Francisco, opposition was reported to be forming against the Italian film, "The Man Who Laughs." The film, said to contain "Fascist propaganda," has met with opposition from civic organizations and newspapers. In one newspaper, Ettore Patrizi, who is said to be responsible for the showing of the film, was reported to have returned recently from a conference in Italy with Piero Parrini, Italian minister of propaganda abroad, on the use of motion pictures as a means of spreading Fascism among American Italians in California.

World Pictures Corporation this week announced that it had acquired the American rights to "Marseillaise," which the company described as "the first motion picture to be made under the auspices of the French Popular Front" and as a production which "has aroused more speculation than anything that has come out of Europe in several years."

The picture, the company said, tells the story of "the birth, growth and success of the struggle for democratic liberty among the French people, a theme which is highly pertinent in the present world situation.

The February birthday anniversaries of Abraham Lincoln and George Washington have given impetus to the National Defenders' campaign, said J. B. Carrigan, vice-president. Requests for prints of "The American Way" are being received from all sections, he said, predicting that the picture will receive as widespread distribution as the Defenders' first motion picture, "We, the People." That film, he continued, was exhibited in 1,000 theatres throughout the United States and, in addition, was shown to numerous fraternal, industrial school and church groups.

In their small Fifth Avenue office on New York, Mr. Carrigan and the organization's national director, L. M. Bailey, explained that distribution of the films is handled through the organization's membership, which they said totals about 60,000. Voluntary contributions support the group's activities and pay for the films, the latest of which was produced by the commercial department of Pathe.

A third film, "The Right to Work," is planned for production next month.

"The American Way" had its first public showing recently at the Rialto theatre, New York City, and since has been shown in several other theatres, Mr. Carrigan said. The film, he pointed out, is available in both 16 and 35 mm. prints and is distributed free of charge, except for postage.

Mr. Carrigan explained that theatrical showings were obtained through members petitioning local theatre managers to book the pictures.

Italian Studios at Production Peak

zac and Victor Hugo respectively and other French actors not yet selected. Maria Cebotari, the German soprano, will have a role. Tullio Serafin, director of the Royal Opera orchestra, will be in charge of music.

Second in importance will be "Ettore Fiaramosca," to be produced by a company as yet unnamed, and directed by Alessandro Blasetti, easily one of Italy's best directors.

The picture will cost about 3,000,000 lire ($150,000).

The great success of "Squadrone Bianco" (White Squadron) and "Sentinelli di Bronzo" (Bronze Sentinel) not only in Italy but in other Continental nations has encouraged other producers to join the band wagon.

The first "Luciano Sera Pilota" is approaching its final stages. The exteriors are being turned by Corrado Alessandrini in East Africa while Vittorio Mussolini is doing the interiors in Rome.

The other two pictures are "Sotto la Croce del Sud (Under the Southern Cross), which is based on a story of Jacobo Comin of the cinema department of the Ministry of Popular Culture, and "Equatore," story by Alessandro de Stefani and directed by Gino Valori.

Work is about to start on "Argine" (The River Bank), which is based on the comedy of Rino Alesi.

D'Errico has his hands full. When he finishes "Afgine" he will initiate "Alta Marea" (high tide), story by Telesio Interlandi. Negotiations for the German rights have been completed.

Production is under way for the following films: "Hanno Rapito Un Uomo" with Vittorio DeSica and Maria Denis, produced by Juventus Film, directed by Gennaro Richelli. It is a comedy in which a capricious Russian Grand Duchess kidnaps a handsome Italian actor. "Crispino e la Comare" (Crispino and the God mother), based on the comic opera by Francesco Maria Piave, is directed by Vincenzo Sorelli, produced by Stabilimento Caesar. Chief roles will be interpreted by Ugo Ceseri, Silvana Iachino, Cesare Zoppetti, Guglielmo Sinaz. "Partire" Departure), from the comedy by Gherardo Gherardi, is being produced by Astra Films, and directed by Pietro Mastrocinque. When he can find time free from "Hanno Rapito Un Uomo" (A Man Has Been Kidnapped), Vittorio De Sica is doing the lead role. "Il Ponte di Vetro" (The Glass Bridge), produced by Gedea Film, directed by Piero Ballerini, has Germana Paolieri, Tina Zucchi, Marcello Spada, Ugo Ceseri. "Toto N. 2" has Luisa Ferida, Lily Hand, Calisto Bertramo. It is being made by Titanus Film.

The English version of "Tredici Uomini e Un Cannone" (Thirteen Men and a Cannon), the first of seven films to be produced in two versions jointly by Two Cities Films Company of London and the Italian playwright, Giovacchino Forzano, at Tirrenia, is reaching its concluding phases.

Under preparation is "Caterina de'Medici," story by Rino Alessi. The film will be done in French and Italian versions.

In the cutting room are "Tarakanova," Italian version directed by Mario Soldati, French by Fedor Ozop.," and "Mazurka di Papa" (Dad's Mazurka), directed by Biancoli.

Finished and ready for release are: "Pietro Mieca," directed by Aldo Vergano; "Solo Per te" (Only for You), directed by Carmine Gallone; "l'Allegra Cantante" (The Merry Singer), directed by Gennaro Righelli, produced by Juventus Film; "l'Ultima Nemica" (The Last Enemy), directed by Vincenzo Sorelli, and three documentary films, "Roma" (Rome), "La Montagna di Fuoco" (The Mountain of Fire) and "La Caccio di Volpe" (The Fox Hunt).

GERMANY HOPES TO IMPROVE ITS FILMS

Joseph Goebbels, Nazi Propaganda Minister, in Berlin on Tuesday laid the cornerstone of the State Academy of the Film, which, according to a wireless to the New York Times, will teach film production in all its branches, including acting.

He said this first attempt to teach film making systematically was taken as a result of "profound dissatisfaction with German films." Despite special privileges obtained by so-called film treaties with several States, German films were called a failure abroad.

Dr. Goebbels, who now controls German films financially as well as through censorship and the Film Chamber, has on several occasions bitterly criticized the present general level of German film production without effecting any noticeable change.

At Theatre Supply Meeting

Earle G. Hines, president of General Theatres Equipment and International Projector Corporation; H. Griffin, vice-president, and George Friedl, Jr., of International Projector Corporation, and Walter Green, president, and E. Hartley of National Theatre Supply Company, left New York by plane Wednesday to attend a meeting of the Midwest branch managers of National Theatre Supply Company in Chicago February 24th and 25th.

Among subjects to be discussed is the new Simplex E-7 mechanism, shown for the first time this week at the branches.

"SWISS MISS" IS TAILORED

TO LAUREL AND HARDY

A HERALD PICTORIAL REVIEW

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

FOR several years Hal Roach has sought a means of making the ludicrous comedy antics of Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy a legitimate component of feature length production. His objective was a vehicle in which there would be unique love interest, light melodrama and the suspense inherent in such a combination plus music and picturesque spectacle.

"Swiss Miss" promises to be a successful culmination of the Roach experimenting. The original story by Jean Negulesco and Charles Rogers was considered ideal for the purpose. The transcription to screen play form made by James Parrott, Felix Adler and Charles Melson; the music and lyrics provided by Phil Charig and Arthur Quenzer; the settings designed and constructed by Charles Hall; the innovations suggested by S. S. Van Keuren and the ideas concocted by Laurel and Hardy met with the producer's full approval.

Assigning John Blystone to direct and alloting the production a substantial working budget, Mr. Roach and his assistants proceeded to the job of choosing a cast that would be harmoniously attuned to the theme as well as to the personalities of Laurel and Hardy. From MGM they borrowed Della Lind, a starlet whom that studio has been keeping under cover. Walter Woolf King, remembered for many pictures, especially "One More Spring," and the accomplished comedians Eric Blore, Adia Kuznetzoff and Charles Judels, were added.

The setting is a hotel and its environs high up in the Alps Mountains. Comes there a composer, bitter against a world which chooses to acclaim the woman (his wife) who sings his ballads rather than their creator. Also arrives a pair of American mouse-trap salesmen who analyze the great cheese-making country of Switzerland as a fertile field for their enterprise.

The theme, locale and nationality of the major characters lend themselves readily to the introduction of numerous unusual production effects. Moments will be given over to folk-dancing, Swiss bell-ringing, the blowing of the huge Alpenhorn; demonstrations of the spectacular art of flag-throwing in which Franz Hug, 1936 Olympic Games champion, will be featured, and picturizations of other Alpine customs.

At this writing Messrs. Laurel and Hardy are busily thinking up the gags that will make their appearances in the anticlimax and their fadeout from the picture. But Mr. Roach and MGM have decided upon a date for its release which seems appropriate, April 1, 1938.

RKO MANAGEMENT TO STAY, HEADED BY SPITZ

McDonough Vice-President and Board Member; Program Follows Proposal by Irving Trust

Leo Spitz this week formally decided to continue as president of RKO and announced that J. R. McDonough, a former president, had been elected a vice-president and a member of the board of directors of the company.

Retention of Mr. Spitz as head of the company, the addition of Mr. McDonough and the continuation of Pandro S. Berman in charge of the studio were the basic points of the management program advocated by the Irving Trust Company, RKO trustee, during conferences, first on the coast and then in New York.

The naming of a successor to Nate J. Blumberg, who resigned as RKO theatre operating head to become president of Universal, was not part of the discussions and it is understood no appointment will be made for several weeks.

A brief statement from Mr. Spitz, reporting the election of Mr. McDonough, was the only formal announcement made by the company, but the election of the former president was understood to give him pre-defined duties as an executive aide to the trustee, and for this reason it was believed that his appointment is for the period of reorganization.

Mr. McDonough reputedly was given a one-year contract with renewal options. His first assignment is expected to be at the studio, where he will concern himself exclusively with financial matters.

Mr. Spitz planned to leave New York for the Coast over the weekend.

Several Conferences Held

Conferences on possible changes in management were undertaken shortly before the first of the year and continued for several weeks in Hollywood. They were participated in by Mr. Spitz, Mr. Berman, the principal creditors, Atlas Corporation and Lehman Brothers, and representatives of the trustee.

When the discussions were transferred to New York, the creditors' representatives did not take part. However, the inability to reach an earlier decision reportedly was due to the trustee's desire to have Mr. Spitz continue as president and to have a financial aide added.

Mr. Spitz, it was understood, sought to avoid development of any situation which might lead to divided authority and executive conflict within the company. For this reason all proposals advanced during the discussions had been tentative.

Reorganization Delayed

An application for another postponement of Federal court hearings on the RKO reorganization plan is expected when company creditors go before Judge William Bondy in New York for the scheduled hearing on Monday.

The new postponement, however, probably will be sought for a brief period only, instead of the four to six-weeks adjournments which have been obtained heretofore. Because the new delay will be sought to permit the creditors only enough additional time to determine whether agreements on amendments to the plan calculated to speed reorganization of the company are possible, the further postponement probably will not be refused.

RKO's principal creditor groups have been conferring for several weeks on various proposals for amending the company's reorganization plan with a view to making reorganization feasible within the next three to six months, but have reached no conclusive decisions yet. Moreover, from present indications, the probability is that the creditor groups will not have fully explored either all of the desired amendments or the possibility of reaching an agreement among themselves on the essential ones by Monday.

400 Attend Dinner For "Duke" Clark

Four hundred attended a testimonial dinner in Columbus, Ohio, Tuesday night for M. R. ("Duke") Clark in honor of his 10th year as Paramount branch manager in Columbus.

John H. Harris, one of the founders of the national Variety Club, was toastmaster. J. Real Neth, of the Neth theatres, was chairman of a committee in charge of the dinner and dance. Mr. Clark is founder of the Columbus Variety Club, Tent No. 2, and has been president since its inception several years ago.

An all-girl orchestra, a band, a style revue, a vaudeville show, fortune telling and Bank Night were among the entertainment features.

Kay Francis Heads Warner Payroll

Kay Francis, actress, received a salary of $209,100 during 1937 and was the highest paid employe of the company, it was revealed this week in a report filed by the company with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Miss Francis also received the company's top salary in 1936 when she drew $227,500.

Hal Wallis, production head, drew the second largest salary, $208,083, last year, and Dick Powell, actor and singer, whose salary was $176,249, was third.

Balaban Ends Vacation

Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, returned from a three weeks' vacation in Florida Thursday to attend the monthly meeting of the company's board of directors in New York. Stanton Griffis, chairman of the company's executive committee, will leave Friday for a two or three weeks fishing trip in Florida.

The plans of Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, to visit Hollywood to discuss proposals for increased employment for studio musicians remained indefinite this week as a result of Mr. Weber prolonging his vacation in Florida. He is expected to arrive in New York over the weekend.

Advertising Plan Offered Industry

A new department has been created by Street Railways Advertising Company, New York, and Express Motion Poster Company, Inc., to offer a "special package" of advertising material to motion picture producers and exhibitors.

The "special package," according to the Barron Collier Advertising Organizations, will combine car card and dashboard advertisements on the street cars and buses throughout the United States and Canada, with posters on the subway, elevated and suburban trains and on the side of Railway Express Agency vehicles.

The combined advertising, the announcement continued, will be so coordinated that each major release of the motion picture producers will be merchandized in every community prior to and during the film's run.

The new department was created under the direction of Walther Liebler, formerly associated with Lord and Thomas, advertising agency.

M. J. Ahern, S.J., and Church Leaders Guests of AMPA

Persons active in church and motion pictures were the guests of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at luncheon in honor of Rev. Michael J. Ahern, S. J., at the International Casino, Thursday. Father Ahern, founder of the Catholic Truth Period on radio station WNAC in Boston and noted seismologist, made the narration for "Monastery."

Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, director of the National Conference of Jews and Christians, and Dr. Hyman Schachtel, Rabbi of the West End Synagogue, were also invited to speak on motion pictures and the church. John W. Alicoate, publisher of Film Daily, introduced the speakers.

Others invited were: Mrs. Mary Harden Looram, chairman of the reviewing committee, National Legion of Decency; F. G. Dunham, educational director, National Broadcasting Company; Terry Ramsaye, editor, Motion Picture Herald; Dr. Robert A. Ashworth, National Conference of Jews and Christians; Rev. Francis Talbot, S. Cohn Signs Writer Contract

Alfred A. Cohn this week signed a long term writer contract with Twentieth Century-Fox and will join the studio March 1st when his term of collector of the Port of Los Angeles expires. Mr. Cohn recently resigned his position as collector to reenter the motion picture industry where his activity since 1915 included such screen plays as "The Jazz Singer," "The Cisco Kid," "Abie's Irish Rose" and the "Cohens and Kellys" series.

HOLLYWOOD LOOKS TO IMPORTANT CHANGES IN LABOR SETUP BY SUMMER

Indicates Delay of All Negotiations Between Producers and Union Groups Pending Basic Agreement Session in March

Following blunt announcements last week from the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees that it intends to proceed with plans for bringing all branches of the amusement industry, including performers, under its jurisdiction, labor factions in Hollywood began laying plans to suit their programs to the certainty that important changes in union alignment would be made before summer.

It appeared probable that all negotiations between producers and union groups would be delayed until after the basic agreement conference between the IATSE and the producers late in March when the IATSE position will be clarified.

Out of the situation, too, appeared the possibility that even if the IATSE's flat claim of complete jurisdiction is not pushed to its ultimate conclusion some sort of federation of all labor groups concerned with the film industry would be formed.

Formation of a tri-guild front to preserve the talent units from encroachment in the IATSE jurisdiction drive was begun Tuesday night when the writers' and directors' organizations signified their intention of aiding each other and the Screen Actors' Guild if the Alliance pushes its demands.

At a meeting of the Screen Writers' Guild called to pass a new constitution giving autonomy to the Guild and making it an affiliate rather than a member of the Authors' League of America, the members voted to stand with the other two talent groups whose members the IATSE claims along with other organization rosters. The board of directors of the Directors' Guild voted to aid the other Guilds in the event of attack by the International. Although the Actors' Guild directors also met Monday night no disclosure was made of the business transacted.

AFA Pledges Loyalty

The American Federation of Actors in a communication to the Associated Actors and Artistes of America on Monday said it would stand in a united front with the parent organization in all matters pertaining to union affairs. The letter was in reply to charges that the Federation was sympathetic to the IATSE claims.

Robert Montgomery, president of the Screen Actors' Guild, will be in New York in the near future to assist in working out a "united front" of entertainers' unions comprising the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, according to Burgess Meredith, acting president of Astors' Equity Association, writing in the current issue of Equity Magazine.

Mr. Meredith reiterates the recent Four A's declaration of its intention to resist the IATSE's efforts to dominate the actors' unions "when and if such efforts become official," and says he does not believe the claims have the backing of the IATSE members. This belief was echoed by Frank Gillmore, president of the Four A's, in a statement in which he said:

"Reluctant as we are we will have to put on our armor and fight. I do not believe the majority of the IATSE membership is in favor of the idea. . . . We will be prepared to meet any and all advances. Our ranks are solid. Our bargaining power now is as great as anyone could wish."

The Four A's narrowly averted a split within the ranks last month when Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors' Guild, answered charges that the Guild, by means of its larger membership and voting power, was attempting to dominate other Four A's unions. Rivalry between the east and west coast entertainers' unions has been marked on several occasions during the last six months. In attempting to resolve the internal differences the Guild has proposed either a "united front" of entertainers along the lines of one big actors' union instead of many, or amendments to the Four A's bylaws governing voting rights.

The IATSE as yet has made no overt move to make good its claims and has not published any details of its plans but it was feared in Hollywood that developments in the situation would occur when the Screen Actors' Guild presses its demands, already filed, for reopening of its ten-year contract with producers in order to provide a closed shop for extras. The move was regarded as the Guild's first counter offensive against the IATSE's plans.

A sub-committee of the national Business Advisory Council in a report to President Roosevelt last week recommended a far-reaching program for industrial peace which included drastic revision of the National Labor Relations Act and restriction of the powers of the Labor Board.

The program was submitted to the president by the council's Industrial Relations Committee, headed by John D. Biggers, unemployment census director, and Charles R. Hook, of the National Association of Manufacturers.

The report attacked the Labor Act for its failure to provide the employer with means of redress in labor disputes, condemned coercion in any form, and said that "the fundamental principles essential to industrial peace should be embodied in a consistent industrial relations policy, fair to employers, employees and the public." This policy, the committee added, "should be expressed in voluntary action and in state and federal legislation."

UNION CELEBRATES 25TH ANNIVERSARY

A banquet in the ballroom of the Hotel Astor on May 8th will climax the 25th anniversary celebration of Local 306, New York, member International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. George E. Browne, International president, and other officials will attend, as well as representatives from locals in other cities. It is said to be the oldest operators' union.

Two hundred members of the union who have served as operators 30 years will hold their annual reunion at the Martinique Hotel on March 8th. Joseph D. Basson, president of the local, will be the principal speaker. An exhibit of old-time projection equipment will be held.

3 Judges to Hear Injunction Plea In 'Divorce' Case

A statutory court composed of Arthur B. Sanborn and Seth Thomas, United States circuit judges, and George F. Sullivan, United States district judge, will hear arguments in Fargo next Tuesday on Paramount's petition for a temporary injunction to restrain North Dakota state officials from enforcing its theatre divorcement law.

The same jurists, after rendering their decision on the injunction petition, will hear the Paramount action to have the state law declared unconstitutional. The law is scheduled to go into effect March 15th but if Paramount should obtain an injunction no action would be taken by the state until after trial of the action.

Minnesota and American Amusement Companies, subsidiaries of Paramount, are the only companies operating affiliated theatres in North Dakota and, consequently, the only ones affected by the state law.

In his application for a temporary injunction, John Friedl, operating head of the two circuits, pointed out that if the divorcement law went into effect 105 employees of the circuit would lose their positions and that the state would lose admission taxes which totaled $11,611 in 1937.

The North Dakota law was sponsored by Allied States Association of the Northwest but Allied of New Jersey will not support a theatre divorcement bill reported planned for introduction in the current session of the New Jersey legislature, Irving Dollinger, president, said.

Similarly, Independent Exhibitors, Inc., the Allied New England unit, refused to support a divorcement bill before a committee of the Massachusetts legislature, giving as its reason a desire to see how the North Dakota measure fared. The bill was referred to the next annual session.

In Columbus, Ohio, following the ruling of a federal three-judge statutory court invalidating the Ohio law against designated playdates, an injunction was granted RKO Distributing Corporation, preventing state officials from enforcing the law.

In its ruling the court declared: "The statute does not prohibit exhibition of any film, no matter how improper, at any particular time or place, and no matter how unsuitable. In fact, the law does not prevent the showing of an entirely immoral picture. The Ohio Censor Board is already clothed with ample authority to reject films affecting public morals, but this statute in no way extends or touches on that power of rejection. We cannot assume any local exhibitor would put aside pecuniary consideration in the interest of public morals to a greater extent than the wholesale distributor."

AUSTRALIA'S LARGEST CIRCUITS SET PRODUCT

Infantile Paralysis at Adelaide Halves the Attendance; New Theatre Circuit is Formed

by CLIFF HOLT
in Melbourne

Australia's largest circuits, Hoyts and Greater Union, have now virtually completed negotiations for product with all distributors, bringing to a close an interesting battle of tactics which officially began January 1 but actually was waged ov a much longer period.

Product deals by Hoyts have been entered into with United Artists, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Bros., RKO, Columbia, and Gaumont-British. The Columbia deal is spread over a number of years.

Greater Union has closed with Paramount, Universal (for three years), MGM and Associated Distributors and also will have the output provided by the local producing organization, Cinesound. The MGM deal excludes attractions of roadshow caliber which MGM will require for its own first-run houses in the key centers. These are the St. James and the Liberty in Sydney, the Metro and Cremorne theatres in Brisbane, and the Metro in Melbourne, even without those attractions, however, Greater Union believes MGM has sufficient additional films of good quality to make profits for the circuit in the situations it controlled in the capitals.

A joint announcement by Charles E. Munro, managing director of Hoyts, and Cecil Mason, Australian executive of Columbia, sets out that negotiations on the Hoyts-Columbia deal began as far back as last June. They describe the deal as one of the most important ever made in the Australian film business, one that overseas executives will regard as internationally significant.

MGM product deals in Australia with Greater Union, and in New Zealand with J. C. Williamson Films, the Fuller-Hayward Circuit, N. Z. Theatres and Christchurch Cinemas, places the Leo trademark in a dominant position in the two Dominions. The company will service eight city outlets in Sydney, two exclusively. In Melbourne MGM will have four city outlets, one exclusively; it has two outlets in Brisbane, both depending entirely on MGM product, and further strong representations in Adelaide, Perth, Newcastle and Tasmania. In New Zealand Leo's muffled roar will be heard from no less than 296 screens in 240 situations.

Infantile Paralysis at Adelaide

Adelaide's theatres now are suffering from the effects of an outbreak of infantile paralysis in South Australia, and local theatremen say that receipts have dropped as much as 50 per cent.

Forewarned by Victoria's experience, South Australian legislators were quick to move when the first dangers of the epidemic were apparent. The public was officially warned to avoid crowds and theatres were specifically mentioned.

A deputation of the South Australian Theatres Proprietors' Council waited on the renters, newspaper managements and Employees' Union to obtain their cooperation in sharing the heavy losses that inevitably will have to be faced, and the newspapers at once responded with generous reactions in advertising space. It is understood that distributors are treating the matter as individual entities and not through the Motion Picture Distributors' Association.

The total number of cases in Victoria since the outbreak early last August has reached 2,000, but the public's attitude has changed to almost indifference and business has improved considerably. Suburban matinees, however, still are prohibited.

New Circuit Forms

With plans to begin operation at once, National Theatres Corporation Pty., Ltd., has been registered. National will take over a number of city theatres formerly controlled by Snider and Dean Theatres, Ltd. This company and Hoyts Theatres are strongly interested in the new circuit, the three joint managing directors of which are Charles E. Munro, Hoyts chief; Leon S. Snider and George B. Dean.

National assumes control of the St. James, Brisbane, Mayfair and Civic, Sydney; Lyceum, Melbourne and Majestic, Brisbane. The company proposes spending £12,000 ($60,000) to recondition and modernize the St. James, and £9,000 on similar work on the Mayfair.

The new circuit has signed with Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO, Columbia and Gaumont-British.

Construction in Canada Shows Substantial Gain

Based on contractors' figures and building permit statistics, theatre construction and alterations in Canada during 1937 brought a total expenditure of $1,943,000 by circuit and individual owners. This was a substantial gain over the previous year.

The largest investment in new theatres and the modernizing of old ones was in the Province of Ontario the total was $929,000, or a gain of 176 per cent over 1936. Second on the list was the Province of Quebec where the building outlay was $410,000, or a gain of 116 per cent. The sum of $327,000 was expended in British Columbia where the gain over the previous year was 407 per cent. The Province of Saskatchewan registered a gain of 520 per cent, but the amount involved was only $31,000 as building operations in that area had been practically at a standstill because of the drought.

In the Maritime Provinces on the Atlantic Coast the cost of theatre construction was $56,000. Only $8,000 was spent on theatre rebuilding in Alberta.

Petition Filed By Alperson to Reorganize GN

After a brief battle to keep Grand National Films, Inc., of New York and Grand National Studios, Inc., of California, from involuntary reorganization under Section 77B of the Federal bankruptcy act, Edward L. Alperson, president, signed a voluntary petition in Hollywood Monday, seeking federal aid in realigning the companies. His action resulted in William James, Federal judge, appointing him and Lloya Wright, attorney, as trustees under $50,000 bond each.

In the petition, Mr. Alperson listed the assets of Grand National Films at $1,352,345 and liabilities at $985,316. Grand National Studios' assets are $438,564 and its liabilities, $448,913, he reported.

The court set March 12th as the date for the first hearing under reorganization and granted Mr. Alperson and Mr. Wright 30 days in which to present plans for revamping the companies.

At a meeting of creditors last week at the GN studios, Mr. Alperson, Phil Krasne, GN vice-president, and Phil Goldstone, acting as advisor, attempted to make arrangements with creditors to eliminate the Federal court action brought by B. F. Zeidman Productions, Inc., Pacific Title and Art Studios, Inc., and Howard Anderson who petitioned the court for reorganization under Section 77B. At that time Mr. Wright was appointed temporary trustee, but Judge James, two days later, revoked the orders allowing the filing of the petition and the appointing of Wright due to the contention of GN executives that they had not been heard.

Mr. Alperson signed the petition this week after lengthy conferences in Judge James chambers. Had he refused to sign it, the court would have one of two courses of action to follow. A trustee could have been named over Grand National's protest or the action could have been dismissed.

Edward Peskay, vice-president, was to leave New York by plane Thursday for Hollywood for the reorganization proceedings. Reports mentioned Bank of America as a possible participant in new Grand National financing.

SEC Reports on Monthly Stock Transactions

Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive board of Paramount, disposed of 1,000 shares of Paramount common stock through a gift and 1,000 shares of second preferred stock by sale during December, the Securities and Exchange Commission revealed in its second semi-monthly summary of transactions of officers and directors in the equity securities of their corporations.

The commission also announced the receipt of 1938 reports from Sol Edwards and William J. Neary, New York directors in Grand National, showing that neither held any equity securities, and similar reports of no holdings from Nathan J. Blumberg, William A. Scully and Joseph H. Seidelman, officers, and Ottavio Prochet, director, in Universal Pictures.

U.S. STUDIES CHANCE GAME STATUS UNDER THE MAIL LOTTERY LAWS

Hearings Completed in Post Office Department's Inquiry Into Bank Night After Inspectors Visit Theatres

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

A United States Post Office Department "fraud order" classifying "Bank Night" as a lottery and closing the mails to Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., of Denver, holders of the patents on the theatre giveaway scheme, may be forthcoming as a result of the Government's hearings on the federal legal status of the practice.

Postal Department officials now are studying the testimony and argument presented at a series of hearings held in Washington, culminating months of work on the part of Postmaster James A Farley's "secret service"—the postal inspectors.

The case against Bank Night is part of the department's national campaign against lotteries of all types, which are barred from the mails under the provisions of Section 601 of the Postal Laws and Regulations.

Investigation of the Affiliated Enterprise scheme was secretly initiated early last year after several instances in which the department had held unmailable newspapers' and other advertising matter on Bank Night at specific theatres.

Advised that thousands of exhibitors throughout the country were operating Bank Nights, the department foresaw an almost endless flow of inquiries from postmasters as to the legality of newspapers carrying Bank Night advertising and determined upon an attempt to cut the plan off at the source.

Accordingly, postal inspectors in various sections of the country were instructed to make an investigation of the plan, which, postal officials later said, netted the Denver company something like $1,250,000 in two years.

A score of Post Office inspectors joined the ranks of theatre goers in as many parts of the country, and attended a number of Bank Night performances. So far as can be learned, none of them was ever successful in winning the "pot," but, more important, they reported to Washington that, so far as they could determine, no particular ability was needed to win a prize and the distribution was made purely by lot.

This finding, it was said, was supported by a study of the contract offered exhibitors by Affiliated Enterprises, in which the method to be followed in running "Bank Night" was set out in detail.

Seldom, if ever, bringing formal proceedings unless quite certain that they had sufficient evidence to substantiate their charges, postal officials felt that the material they had accumulated was adequate to support a citation of the company on charges that it was violating the lottery laws.

With millions of dollars at stake, the company fought the charges strenuously and succeeded in securing a number of hearings at which it presented evidence which, "Bank Night" counsel contended, proved the scheme was not a lottery in the sense in which the term is used in the postal laws, but a legitimate method whereby exhibitors might advertise their theatres.

Indications now are, however, that the high postal officials at Washington who are to decide the case apparently were not influenced by the company's argument, in the face of testimony from postal inspectors that they went to theatres and saw numbers drawn out of a container to determine winners of the prizes, with the persons holding those or other numbers not required to do anything necessitating ability or skill. The U. S. line between a legitimate prize contest and a lottery is that the former requires contestants to win by ability, the latter by lot or chance.

Postal Department officials probably will require some time to finally decide the case. In the event the company is held to have operated in violation of the lottery section of the law and is denied the use of the mails, such a decision, it is pointed out, would not necessarily affect individual exhibitors who desired to conduct "Bank Nights" or similar schemes of their own, so long as they did not attempt to use the mails. It would, however, effectively take the owners of Bank Night out of the picture, since experience has been that a concern can hardly exist without some use of the mails.

Post Office Department officials this week refused to hazard any guess as to when decision would be rendered.

It was pointed out that inasmuch as a number of months were required to investigate, take testimony and hear oral argument in the case, some time might be required for study of the testimony and contentions of department and company counsel.

Officials explained that a month or more frequently is required for determination of the merits of cases brought to close the mails to alleged violators of the lottery prohibition.

Because of the highly important effect upon business concerns of the withdrawal of mail privileges, the department moves with the greatest caution, both in bringing and deciding cases, although the careful investigation which precedes the issuance of a citation, in the great majority of instances develops sufficient evidence successfully to defend the department's charges.

Independents Go Ahead With Plan to Gather Evidence Against Bingo in Churches As Unfair Competition

The Independent Theatre Owners Assotion of New York will go ahead with its plan to gather evidence on Bingo games in church and lodge halls, and submit it to law enforcement officials in Brooklyn, Manhattan, Queens and Richmond boroughs with the request that legal action be taken to stop them.

In Florida the supreme court of the state ruled that Bingo, no matter how it is played, is gambling. The decision has made theatre managers playing Screeno, Bank Night and other chance games speculative over action against them.

Nebraska's supreme court upheld a statewide ban on chance games.

The newest turn to the giveaway is that of Fanchon and Marco and St. Louis Amusement Company, in the form of trading stamps.

Called Unfair Competition

The ITOA feels that Bingo games are "unfair" competition to theatres since they draw large crowds and the neighborhood theatres suffer as a result. Police officials and the district attorneys will be asked to halt Bingo parties.

The ITOA's campaign follows the banning of Bingo by District Attorney Foley in the Bronx.

The Nebraska supreme court denied a motion for rehearing a decision against the Fox theatre at Beatrice, Neb.

In another decision in Florida, Circuit Judge H. C. Petteway, in Lakeland, decided that Bank Night, Screeno and such plans are illegal.

In Salt Lake City, arguments in two cases expected to go far towards defining authority of the new Utah Trade Commission were taken under advisement by the commission.

Parents-Teachers Protest

The board of managers of the Iowa Congress of Parents and Teachers, meeting in Des Moines, has adopted the suggestion of the motion picture committee chairman, Mrs. Clay Swisher, that the organization oppose Bank Night "and other lotteries."

In Kentucky, Hopkinsville took the spotlight in the move to determine legality of the theatre Bank Night as Commonwealth's Attorney John T. King, suing in the name of the State of Kentucky, filed petitions in Christian circuit court asking penal judgments of $5,000 each against two theatres operated by the Crescent Amusement Company.

The sale of lottery insurance by which theatre patrons may win at Sweepstakes when absent from the theatre at time of drawings, has been banned in East Liverpool, Ohio, by Mayor Lee Copenhaver, who has instructed police to stop the practice and arrest future participants.

In Wapakoneta, Ohio, an injunction to restrain county and city officials for interfering with giveaways has been refused.

The Vermont supreme court has ruled that Cash Night at a theatre is illegal under state statutes forbidding the operation of lotteries.

The court of criminal appeals in Austin, Tex., has made final its decision that Bank Nights are lotteries in overruling a motion for rehearing by H. S. Cole, Bonham theatre owner. The court affirmed Mr. Cole's conviction and $100 fine.

GOLDEN CALLS CHICAGO DUALS' FOES 'STOOGES' OF 'MONOPOLISTIC GROUPS'

Monogram's Sales Manager Warns of Censorship As Parents in New York and Milwaukee Join Movement

The Chicago movement to prohibit double feature programs by adoption of a city ordinance—first of its kind—spread to other sections this week.

At the same time, Edward A. Golden, sales manager of Monogram Pictures, took up the cudgels for dual bills, charging that "monopolistic groups" within the industry are responsible for the agitation for single features.

Mr. Golden, unofficial spokesman, of the independent distributors that favor double bills, charged that the Chicago club women battling for elimination of dual features were "prompted by propaganda of certain selfishly motivated interests" and that the "well-intentioned women are unaware of the fact that they are merely serving as 'Stooges' to further the interests of monoplistic groups within the industry."

"Do those producers who are continually fighting censorship and regimentation of the industry realize," Mr. Golden asked, "that their support of the demands made by these women's groups means that they are fostering the growth of puppet censors who will spring up all over the country, and, like a boomerang, strike at their existence?"

More Associations Act

The movement agitated by Chicago's Parent-Teacher Association already has been taken up in Milwaukee, where PTA members have held meetings and are seeking to enlist the aid of health department officials.

In New York, the United Parents Association, claiming it represents 100,000, is considering a poll of its membership.

The agitation of the Chicago groups, who contend that dual bills are impairing the health of Chicago's children, resulted in a ruling by Barnet Hodes, corporation counsel, that the city council has the power to regulate the exhibition of double features as a health measure. The ordinance, which would limit all motion picture shows to two and one-half hours and thus eliminate dual bills, already has been prepared, and is expected to be submitted to the council Tuesday.

In his attack on Chicago's action, Mr. Golden said success in the anti-dual fight would lead to demands in other fields. He then demanded to know: "Are we to permit them (single bill advocates) to use us as guinea pigs for the destruction, not only of our own enterprise, but who knows what next? . . . Does the motion picture industry realize the extent to which these groups (the unidentified 'monopolistic groups') will go to attain their ends?"

Sees Only 300 Features Needed

"May I repeat," Mr. Golden wrote, "for the edification of those short sighted exhibitors who sanction the elimination of the double bills: With a single feature policy only 300 features will be required per year? What prices will be demanded for such product? What recourse will one have?

"Would the producers who oppose double features relish the following situation? A single feature policy in the United States would undoubtedly mean that countries like England, Australia, and Canada, which are now practically 100 per cent double feature territories, would follow our lead and adopt single features. Naturally, if these countries will need less product, they will play pictures made in their own countries instead of American product."

And in America, he said, the movement would mean smaller staffs in the production and sales departments of film companies.

"We who are closely connected with motion picture production, distribution and exhibition should not permit any infringement of our rights to operate our business."

Calls Methods "Devious"

"These monopolist interests," Mr. Golden continued, "have used devious means to abolish double features during the existence of the Code Authority, and when they failed here, they organized insidious propaganda and on the preposterous grounds that double features are immoral, enlisted the aid of religious groups. They met with no more success here, but that did not discourage them. Their next move was to argue that double features depreciate the quality of motion pictures. This remark was too feeble to elicit any response and they next attempted to form various organizations which made an effort to boycott theatres which showed double features, but this, like the rest of their attempts, met with very little success.

"In desperation, certain companies tried to insert clauses in their contracts, precluding the placing of any of their pictures on a double bill. This was pronounced a conspiracy and in restraint of trade. . . .

"Polls were next taken in various theatres, at the instigation of these groups, asking audiences whether they preferred single or double feature programs. Announcements were made that such polls indicated an audience preference for single features. These theatres continued to show double features. Does it not seem strange that exhibitors should refuse to heed the wishes of their patrons? . . .

Sees Censorship Opening

"First it is the length of the show, next it will be the physical aspects of the theatre which appear unhealthy to them. Perhaps the ventilation in theatres will not please them. What is to stop their demanding sterilization and fumigation at periods they will designate? After all, they might even disapprove of air conditioning—and why can't they become miniature health departments for theatres."

The first results of a poll by the entertainment magazine, Cue, placed single features first in preference of residents of the New York metropolitan area. Approximately 10,000 replies have been received to date; 180,000 ballots were sent out. The magazine's survey among high school students showed they favored duals three to one.

A single feature policy will be inaugurated at Loew's Ziegfeld in New York for Tuesday and Wednesday of each week, Gilbert Marbe, manager, said.

In Boston, the Metropolitan dropped its stage shows and inaugurated a dual bill policy. Prices dropped to 25 cents until 1 P. M., 35 cents to 5 P. M. and 55 cents until closing. They formerly were 35, 50 and 65 cents.

A resolution attacking double features was passed by the PTA council of Omaha.

NEW THEATRE GIVES AN HOUR TO SHORTS

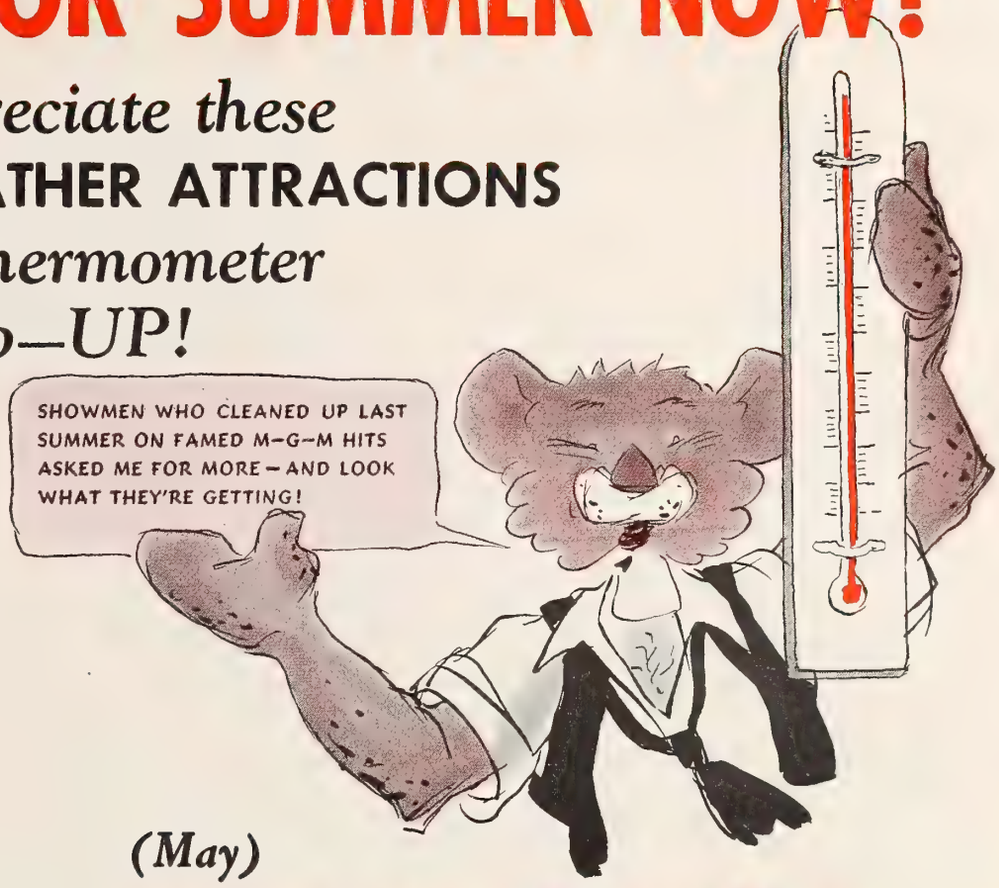
One hour of short subjects, called the "Esquire Hour," is a part of the program offered at the new Esquire theatre in Chicago which opened last Wednesday with a single feature policy. Public response to this type of program has been very good, according to Harry Balaban, circuit executive.

Writer Withdraws Name from Awards

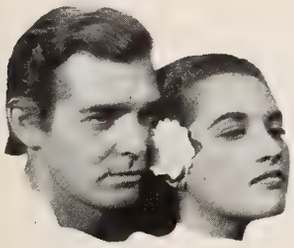
For the second time in the history of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences annual awards, a writer, nominated for an honor, has refused to participate.

John Lee Mahin, president of the Screen Playwrights, Inc., has written the Academy withdrawing his name as a candidate for the screenplay award, for which he was nominated, with his collaborators, Marc Connelly and Dale Van Every, for work on "Captains Courageous."

Mr. Mahin gave as his reason: "Unfair discrimination . . . practised in the selection of the writers' branch of the awards committee and my disagreement with their subsequent decision as to requirements for voting." He said he was acting entirely as an individual and not in any way representing any organization.



The other writer to withdraw was Dudley Nichols, voted the writer of the outstanding screenplay of 1935, "The Informer." Mr. Nichols, president of the Screen Writers Guild, at that time declined the statuette, primarily because of the then current Guild fight with the Academy.



In appointing the awards committee, Frank Capra, president of the Academy, named Claude Binyon, Oscar Hammerstein II and Dwight Taylor to represent the writers. They are members of the Screen Writers' Guild. The Playwrights were not represented because of Mr. Mahin's delay in answering a letter inviting the group to participate in drawing up plans for the awards. The Academy writers' branch, as such, has no members on the awards committee, although Howard Estabrook and Jane Murfin are members of the general group.

Carl Dreher, chairman of the board of judges for the Academy's scientific or technical awards, has appointed two sub-committees to consider the detailed nominations submtited. Membership of the committee for the sound field consists of Homer Tasker, chairman; Lloyd Goldsmith, Elmer Raguse, Gordon Sawyer and S. J. Twining. The photographic field group consists of Virgil Miller, chairman; John Arnold, Farciot, Fred Gage and Joseph Valentine.

"BLUE LAWS" AND TAXES IN LEGISLATIVE MOVES

Charlotte City Council Tables Sunday Referendum Plan; New York License Tax Proposed

Proponents of a plan to liberalize Sunday "blue laws" in Charlotte, N. C., received a setback this week when the city council, after a heated public hearing, tabled a proposal to hold a referendum and rescinded a previous amendment permitting Sunday sports, including the showing of motion pictures.

Other legislative matters affecting the motion picture industry included the following:

A ban on Sunday shows was upheld in Beatrice, Neb.;

New York legislators planned to introduce a bill which would impose a tax of five mils a foot on originals or copies of films to be licensed;

A bill introduced in Virginia would prohibit smoking in places of public assembly, including theatres;

The New York state senate was considering a bill to levy a tax of five cents a square foot on outdoor advertising signs or devices along state highways;

A luxury tax measure, defeated in Georgia would have been levied on theatres.

Charlotte's public hearing on the "blue laws" question was featured by Councilman H. H. Baxter's charge that while ministers of the city were opposed to an "open" Sunday, one pastor in the city had shown Sunday moving pictures in his church and agreed to give to the picture operators a part of the contents of the collection plate.

Straw Vote Move Fails

A proposal for a straw vote, if the state legislature failed to authorize a referendum, gained little support after it was pointed out that there would be no way of determining which residents of the city were entitled to vote. A motion to table the referendum plan was carried by a vote of six to three.

In Maine, recent unsuccessful attempts to legalize Sunday motion pictures were followed this week by the imposition of a $10 fine upon Charles Kellerman, manager of Keith's in Portland, for operating on the Sabbath.

A recount of last summer's vote for and against Sunday shows in Beatrice revealed a majority of 14 votes against the seven-day openings. A total of about 3,200 votes were cast. The recount was ordered when a 49-vote error was discovered.

New York's proposed five mils tax on films would be a substitute for one cent of the proposed four-cent levy upon gasoline. Bernard J. Moran, assemblyman, Brooklyn, declared his proposal is "not in any sense a pest tax on the moving picture business."

Also in New York, Assemblyman Harold B. Ehrlich's bill legitimatizing admission of children, over 8 and under 16 years of age, to theatres employing regular matrons or "chaperones," was passed by the assembly and turned over to the senate codes committee.

Senators Abrey G. Weaver and Leonard G. Muse are sponsors of the Virginia bill to ban smoking in theatres. A fine of $300 or three months' imprisonment are provided for violations.

Under the defeated Georgia luxury tax, theatre tickets would have been taxed on a sliding scale basis, ranging from two cents on tickets selling at 20 and 25 cents to 20 cents on tickets selling for $2 and over. The legislators were called into special session to adopt revenue-raising measures, but before adjournment they killed a new chain store tax act that would have raised the taxation rate on nationally operated chains, including theatre circuits. The present chain store tax exempts theatres.

Legislators in Massachusetts, by a rising vote of 47 to 40, defeated a curfew law which would have prohibited children under 17 years of age from being on the streets after 9 P. M. The bill, which, it was believed, would have worked serious injury to the film industry, was proposed by Representative Francis X. Coyne, who also is author of a bill now pending to forbid the billing of screen stars by other than their legal names.

The possibility that film rentals will be exempt from the Philadelphia sales tax, which is still in the formative stage, was seen this week after the writing in of an amendment to the definitions of "sales" and "service" stating that charges would be made for any purpose "other than exhibition." There will be no city sales tax on admissions which already have national and state levies.

Producers Honor Mayer at Dinner

Louis B. Mayer, retiring president of the Motion Picture Producers' Association, was honored by members at a testimonial dinner at the Hotel Biltmore, Hollywood, Thursday. Among those invited to speak were Governor Frank W. Merriam of California, Cecil B. DeMille, Paramount producer; Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; George Jessel, master of ceremonies; Jack Benny, and Joseph M. Schenck, recently elected president of the Association. Mr. Schenck presented Mr. Mayer with the gavel he used during his turn of office, with a suitable gold inscription.

Mr. Mayer will accompany a group of 17 film stars to San Francisco for the annual St. Patrick's Day luncheon of Islam Temple. Robert Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck will head the delegation.

Mr. Mayer, Dr. A. H. Gannini, Al Lichtman, A. N. Bowles, Morgan Walsh, George M. Cohan and Loyd Wright are among lecturers who will address the first class in the newly introduced course in "Motion Picture Distribution," inaugurated at the University of Southern California.

Admission Tax Revenues Drop

Exhibitors felt the first effects of the current business recession toward the close of last year, it is indicated by the monthly report of tax collections issued by the Bureau of Internal Revenue February 21st.

January revenues from the federal admission tax, the bureau reported, were $1,353,415, a loss of $152,264 from the $1,505,676 reported for the same month last year and $936,611 under the December, 1937, receipts of $2,290,027.

The month's total was the lowest for any month since May, 1936, when receipts were $1,318,765, and the decline from December was approximately $200,000 heavier than from December, 1936, to January, 1937, bureau records disclosed.

For the first seven months of the fiscal year starting July 1st last, however, receipts from the admission tax were still $1,081,579 above those of the same period a year ago, totaling $12,807,432 against $11,725,853, but Treasury officials refused to speculate as to whether this would not be wiped out within the next few months unless economic conditions showed rapid improvement.

Oklahoma Returns Decline

Oklahoma poured $1,044,856 in sales tax into the state strong boxes during January, falling $1,378 short of the amount collected during January, 1937, a state tax commission summary revealed this week.

This sum represented the tax on December sales. The two percent sales tax applies to all theatre admissions at Oklahoma box offices. The division of research and statistics of the tax commission said that changes in the base of the tax, from 1 percent to 2 percent, by the sixteenth legislature preclude an exact comparison of the condition of business this year, based on sales tax data.

Oklahoma County in which Oklahoma City is located was the most productive of the state's 77 counties, contributing $202,743.11. Of this $198,219.70 was paid by Oklahoma City consumers.

A total of $198,878.95 was reported by Tulsa county with the city of Tulsa providing $188,-579.01 of this total.

Smaller cities produced the following portions of the month's sales tax revenue: Muskogee, $21,532.99; Enid, $18,411.81; Bartlesville, $17,053.48; Shawnee, $14,833.98; Ponca City, $12,933.57; Ada, $11,628.09; and Ardmore, $10,-503.19.

Kansas City Sales Taxes

Theatres in Kansas City paid $235,128.94 in sales taxes during 1937, according to the report of Forrest Smith, state auditor of Missouri. Other shows, attractions and amusements paid $38,418.49; athletic contests paid $25,776.65, and dances, $3,842.58. The admission group paid $303,166.66.

This is for the 12-month period ending Nov. 30, 1937, and includes December, 1936. The tax levy was one per cent for the first seven of the months covered in the report, two per cent for the last five months. Figured on the basis of two per cent, the tax collection of $235,128 from theatres indicates a total gross at Missouri box-offices of $11,756,400. The actual gross, however, would be substantially larger than this.

W. W. Hawkins, Jr., eastern story editor for Columbia, has resigned. Eve Ettinger remains in charge of the office.

Camera Technique

If one watches Fritz Lang direct a picture for any length of time and notices how he handles the camera and the cinematographic crew, the observer cannot help but feel that the man has gone completely berserk. He makes snake-eye views and bird eye view of sequences; he makes views that nobody ever dreamed of before and which the prosaic director might consider rather fantastic. But if one talks to Mr. Lang, he dons his monocle and launches into a lucid explanation of his antics.

He believes that since sound has come to be taken for granted and color has ceased to be a novelty, the film industry has needed a new stimulus. His theory as to what this new stimulus should be is the mobile camera, a maneuvering of the photographic apparatus whereby audiences can be made to feel scenes instead of merely seeing them.

When Mr. Lang first advanced his ideas to producers, they were considered by executives with what he describes as "latency." He was told that they might be great for artistic European produced films, but that there were serious doubts that they would be appreciated by the American public.

While everyone conceded that the novel and unique photography of "Metropolis" and "M" was an advance in cinematographic treatment of story, it remained for "Fury" and "You Only Live Once" to demonstrate that Mr. Lang was several steps ahead of his contemporaries in his use of the camera.

On the Paramount lot where he is directing "You And Me," a picture that has a melodramatic theme, Mr. Lang is practising some strange tricks. He's moved the camera as it seldom has been moved before. He has focused it from angles that look impossible. But he's doing everything for a purpose.

Says he, with the conviction of a man who knows what he's talking about:

"Anyone knows that pictures will prove more entertaining if audiences can be made to feel they are participating in what is taking place on the screen. This can be accomplished by proper use of the camera. To illustrate, in the legitimate theatre the spectator is in the position of a man looking through an open window. He sees only in one direction—straight ahead—and if the actors turn around, the spectator sees only their backs and cannot watch what they are doing. Today the theatre as an actor's field of expression has been torn wide open by motion pictures. The camera can present a hundred scenes from hundreds of different angles in the same time that was devoted to three or four acts on the stage. The camera can look at the action in the same way the author visioned it when he wrote the story. As readers vision everything when they read a story, mobile use of the camera, which after all, is only a universal eye, possesses a power whereby audiences are literally lifted over the footlights and made participants in the action."

Laboratories

Hollywood correspondents, adept in recording the news of moving pictures and those who make them, journeyed into strange and bewildering fields twice in Valentine Day week. Both adventures demonstrated to reporters that no matter how comprehensive their knowledge of flesh and blood stars might be, all were quite ignorant of the technical and scientific side of picture production.

Fritz Lang. whose uses of the camera have attracted attention, on the Paramount set of "You and Me" with Sylvia Sidney and George Raft.

First experience was a trip to Warner Brothers' new $500,000 laboratory in Burbank. Guided by chief engineer Fred Gage and his aides, Al Tondreau and Ed Munson, the party paraded through the largest and best equipped laboratory, marveling at but hardly understanding devices and processes that are not in use elsewhere.

The battery of film driers, through which miles and miles of positive and negative stock was speeding, first excited interest. The trip to the developing room didn't reveal much, but that was because but little was visible under the diffused red and green illumination. In fact, the boys and girls were just as much in the dark about the processes of developing as were the lights in the room.

The dial gadgets, that demonstrate that the air in the building is triple filtered and that temperature and humidity are maintained constant regardless of outside atmospheric conditions, were a little easier to understand. But when the crowd descended to the basement to see the devices which reclaim silver from waste products, the only fact they could fathom was that the machines recovered sufficient silver to pay the annual chemical bill of the laboratory.

On Thursday, along with stars and executives, the press accepted Tob Baily's invitation to inspect the new National Screen Service Studio. Lunch, with suitable accessories, was the first order of the day here. Followed a tour through the studio, which, like Warners' laboratory is the best equipped in the world, producing about 400 trailers a year. The party discovered that the plant is so designed that every foot of film handled moves in continuous circle and is comparable to the assembly line of a modern automobile factory.

To produce the average trailer which is about 180 feet long, about 7,000 feet of each picture must be handled, which adds up to approximately 2,800,000 feet of film handled to turn out the 400 prevues. As in the Warner laboratory the atmospheric conditions within the plant are scientifically guarded. But the feature that was evident to all was that the old fashioned tank and rack method of developing and printing had been abandoned in favor of new high speed Art Reeves developing machines.

Five Films Start

Production continues at a slow pace. Five pictures started in the week; four were finished.

Of the new work, two pictures are credited to Columbia. Larry Darmour started "Stage Coach Trail," in which Eleanor Stewart and Jack Luden will be featured. Charles Starrett and Iris Meredith are in "Hidden Trails."

Two productions also started at Universal. "The Winner's Circle" will present Jimmy Savo, Nan Grey and Robert Wilcox in the leading roles. Sally Eilers and Paul Kelly head the cast of "The Nurse from Brooklyn."

Walter Wanger returned to the field of active production by starting "The River Is Blue." It will present Madeleine Carroll, Henry Fonda, Leo Carrillo and John Halliday. United Artists will release the film.

Two pictures were completed at 20th Century-Fox. The cast to be seen in "Mr. Moto's Gamble" includes Peter Lorre, Keye Luke, Dick Baldwin, Jayne Reagan, John Carradine, Lynn Bari, Douglas Fowley, Harold Huber, Charles Williams and Cliff Clarke. "Island in the Sky" will present Gloria Stuart and Michael Whalen, with June Story, Robert Kelland, Paul Hurst.

Monogram completed "Code of the Range," in which Tim McCoy, Judith Ford and Rex Lease will be seen.

Republic finished "Fire Over the Waterfront." The cast includes Robert Livingston, Rosalind Keith, Warren Hymer, Jack LaRue, Clay Clement and Dick Wessell.

Kodak Sets Discounts

Eastman Kodak Company this week announced it had mailed fair trade contracts fixing the maximum retail discounts allowable for its principal items, to dealers in 42 states having fair trade laws. Items covered are Kodak film and film packs, cine-kodak film, kodachrome film, kodaks, bullet cameras, cine-kodaks, kodascopes, extra lenses for home film equipment and most of the brownie cameras.

"Publicity Girl," a novel by Paula Gould, motion picture and theatrical press agent, will be published by House of Field, Inc., on April 15th. The novel depicts methods employed by motion picture publicity folk to exploit pictures and players, producers, directors and others.

Merrily We Live

(Hal Roach-MGM)

Farce

About a year ago Hal Roach, acclaimed past master of unvarnished cinema slapstick, revamped production plans and embarked upon an ambitious undertaking of providing entertainment which, while built for the same wide field, would take upon itself a mantle of dignity insofar as artistry and situation were concerned.

The first of this new type of production which Mr. Roach produced was "Topper," the success of which spread quickly throughout the land, albeit it contained a possible hurdle for the sensibilities of many patrons by virtue of its plot in which two dead persons return to earth to do good deeds.

The second picture is "Merrily We Live," a combination of elements making for mass and class appeal well qualified to take a rightful place high among the laugh riots of the year by both entertainment and box office standards.

From the writing staff of "Topper," Mr. Roach, aided in this film as in that by executive producer Milton Bren, took Eddie Moran and Jack Jevne, and commissioned them to concoct a blend of sophistication, slapstick and farce, of a family whose members, to all outward appearances, were fit subjects for psychiatrists. The writers tossed in a mother whose pet hobby was taking in tramps and attempting to rehabilitate them, one pretty daughter who showed semblances of sense, one young daughter constantly scheming for spending money, one son apparently normal, one father whose wife, aforementioned, drove him to drink, one butler plainly worried over mental shortcomings of his employers, and one personable young man mistaken for a tramp.

From the "Topper" cast he took Constance Bennett, Billie Burke and Alan Mowbray, and added Brian Aherne, Tom Brown, Patsy Kelly, Ann Dvorak, Bonitą Granville and Clarence Kolb, the first three the strongest on the marquee and the last two growing in favor.

Norman Z. McLeod, who directed "Topper" and whose cinema history has been dotted with creditable guidance of many previous comedies, drew the assignment on "Merrily We Live."

The preview audience received Mr. Roach's latest departure with hosannahs that indicated it felt the newly found Hal Roach talent expressed in "Topper" was present in a more pronounced form in "Merrily We Live" and that "Topper" was not a flash in the pan.

"Mrs. Kilbourne," whose hobby is attempting to rehabilitate tramps, welcomes "Wade Rawlins," novelist, who wanders into the house to use the phone after a car accident. "Rawlins," hired as chauffeur by "Mrs. Kilbourne," doesn't give him a chance to explain, and he takes the job because of the attractiveness of daughter "Jerry." Hilarious complications, involving the domestic staff, distinguished guests and all members of the family, culminate in a romantically satisfactory outcome.

Previewed at the Chinese theatre in Hollywood to a highly enthusiastic reception, members of the audience laughing until tears rolled down their cheeks and unstintingly praising all phases of the production.—VANCE KING.

Accidents Will Happen

(Warner Bros.)

Racket Expose

Dealing in all phases of the fake accident racket, "Accidents Will Happen" possesses above average showmanship content. Although the cast is adequate and there is certain publicity value in the featured and support names, the real exploitation meat is found in the story, as such frauds have cropped up in many communities and have been discussed in the press.

While the plot is formula, detailing the experiences of an honest man who turns crook, partly to revenge himself upon a wife who double crossed him but mainly to break up the racket, certain departures have been made.

"Gregg," an honest adjuster, loses his job when his inconsiderate wife, "Nona," testifies against him. In alliance with "Patricia," a cigar counter girl, "Gregg" sets out on the trail of "Smith," chief racketeer, with whom "Nona" has become friendly. "Gregg" and "Patricia" become so proficient in staging fake accidents and mulcting insurance companies that they are accepted by "Smith." Realistically portrayed in action and sequence, many of the methods used by the fakers are illustrated. Eventually, "Gregg" accumulates sufficient evidence to convict "Smith," and though he himself is implicated, the testimony he gives in court exonerates him. The gang is jailed, "Gregg" is reinstated in "Oldham's" insurance company, and plans are started to get a divorce from "Nona" and eventual marriage with "Patricia."

"Housemaster"

Character Comedy Melodrama

With little to sell it to an American public beyond the dominant name of Otto Kruger in the title role, this adaptation of the Ian Hay play starts at a disadvantage—despite its New York stage record—but a disadvantage which is greatly overcome by its sleepy and comfortable native quality, for it is, despite its American director, a truly English creation, with that soft and restrainedly sentimental flavour which the English call "human." The study of a casual but deeply sympathetic schoolmaster, lonely and profoundly honest, it traces its quiet way across an English public school setting in which few of the constituents have been missed, for here are the creeper-clad mullion window, the deep fireplaces, the breezy and beefy form masters, the hymns in chapel, the angular omnivorous boys and the placidly dehumanized clergyman who is the head. It cannot be termed a great or even an excellent film, but it is charming, sympathetic and human, and has the breath of English life and outlook.

Brenon has done better than well with his material, and Otto Kruger, as the pipe-sucking, rather doddery old loyalist, is his most valiant collaborator. Kruger's role is that of a housemaster, who, with success neither in love nor learning, plods manfully on, moulding the youth into manhood, misunderstood by his head, loved by his boys and his friends, unwillingly victimized by the young, to earn as reward the loss of his post and the fading of a long dim love, and then, at the penultimate hour, to be elected, by fate and a diplomat's wit, headmaster of his school. It is warm-hearted, kindly stuff, unified by the sympathetic and likeable work of Kruger as the undemonstrative Donkin, the species of portrayal which should warm the hearts of audiences to its creator no less than his creation.

The whole cast, in fact, is more than usually alive and from the superbly classic clerical placidity of Kynaston Reeves as the head, to the chirruping juvenility of the very appealing young Rosamond Barnes, fuses the breath of life into the picture. Phillips Holmes, bespectacled as a dreamy science master, Diana Churchill, a sympathetically girlish child admirer of Donkin, and Cecil Parker as the lumbering but highly diplomatic Cabinet Minister, are all cameos which help to ornament the character album.

Cedric Dawe's settings can be taken as unexaggerated, and Otto Kanturek's camera has added reality to them. As it is, "Housemaster", like many an English production, is very casual in its pace and can be trimmed of dramatic superfluities, but it has something.

Previewed at the Cambridge theatre, London, the film was warmly received and generally acknowledged as the sort of picture Britain can do and should do again.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Produced and distributed by Associated British Pictures. Producer, Walter Mycroft. Directed by Herbert Brenon. Original story by Ian Hay. Scenario Dudley Leslie. Photography, Otto Kanturek. Film editor, Flora Newton. Settings, Cedric Dawe. Running time, 95 minutes. General audience classification.

L'Alibi

(B. N. Film, Paris)

(Detective Melodrama)

This exciting police picture is a big production which, besides having excellent quality, shows for the first time what interesting elements the French Cinema can bring to detective films.

It is based on an original story by Marcel Achard, a young French author, who has written several successful plays and film stories. It was directed by Pierre Chenal, one of the most promising young French directors, who also directed "The Late Mathias Pascal," shown in New York a few months ago. The strong cast is headed by Erich von Stroheim and Louis Jouvet, and has very clever dialogue.

"Professor Winckler," telepathist appearing in a fashionable Parisian night club, notices among the spectators an American man, "Gordon," whom he has vowed to kill. "Winckler" shoots him in his car, returns to Paris, goes to the house of "Helen," professional dancer, and offers her a large sum of money to say that he has spent the night with her. Not knowing the motive, "Helen" consents. "Inspector Gallas" almost tricks "Helen" into acknowledging the truth, but she remembers "Winckler's" threats. "Helen" falls in love with "Laurent," "Gallas' aid," and finally confesses. The "Professor" commits suicide. "Helen" and "Laurent" are reconciled.

Von Stroheim turns out a good piece of work as "Professor Winckler." Louis Jouvet, as the Inspector, gives his usual polished performance. Jany Holt, while not revealing extraordinary talent as an actress, is better in the role of "Helen" than she has been in any film to date. Albert Préjean, star of "Under the Roofs of Paris," is likeable as "Laurent."

In the story several surprises are occasioned, the principal one being the discovery that "Laurent" is a police officer.

Viewed at the Marivaux first-run theatre, Paris, at a Sunday evening performance, the second week of showing. The house was packed. The audience paid close attention. On Christmas Eve the picture broke all receipts records in Paris.—P. A.

Born to be Wild

(Republic)

Romance and Adventure

In recent months magazine writers in increasing numbers have demonstrated that the same spirit of adventure which presaged success for stories of the stage coach, pony express, and railroad, is amply expressed in the modern trucking business. In "Born to be Wild," a title which tells little of the nature of the picture, showmen have a well integrated, single-pointed story which capitalizes in full the qualities which from the days when minstrels told the sagas of the highwaymen have proved sure fire story material.

Added to this base there are better than capable performances by new and as yet comparatively unknown players in the lead roles which showmen should find valuable secondary material for campaigns based on the obvious treatment to be followed for the story.

Ralph Byrd and Ward Bond are the carefree spirits who typify the drivers who guide tons of machinery and material over the country's roads. Engaged for a special job, with a large bonus as the attraction, they discover that the lettuce they are supposed to be carrying is really 26 tons of dynamite, ordered by officials of a town near a dam which has been weakened by the jamming of emergency locks by unscrupulous real estate dealers. Struggle for possession of the dynamite, between the townsfolk who want to blow out the locks and the real estate operators who want the dam to burst, begins before the truck is well started, with the two drivers interested only in delivering their load. Gun play, first fights and romantic interest follow in logical sequence and are climaxed by a wild ride down a mountain with the hero and heroine jumping to safety as the dynamite laden truck crashes into the canyon above the emergency locks.

Pleasant musical interludes are inserted at appropriate places without detracting from the movement of the story which, under the direction of Joe Kane, is well paced.

The Candid Kid

(Vitaphone)

Diverting Musical

When Miss Josephine Huston, noted nightingale of the metropolitan night clubs, and her friends, all rabid candid cameramaniacs, are given contest assignments of snapping the pulchritudinous song bird chirping in a terra-firma-ish and hot spot locale and, also, while warbling from the watery perch of a gondola, the musical cues and settings are nicely and plausibly arranged in a tuneful and sprightly concoction of light veined entertainment. Though the song stretches of Miss Huston's vocal numbers are smoothly styled, the intermittent moments of hit and miss humor supplied by some of the club constituency blurs the generally bright focus of the subject's range. A lively dance routine by the attractive Gae Foster Girls affords considerable asset trimmings to the credit balance.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Donald's Better Self

(RKO-Radio)

Donald Duck

In the usual Walt Disney style, Donald Duck goes through a series of humorous incidents in this cartoon. Donald, as a schoolboy, has two constant companions, his Better Self and his Evil Self. The two vie for control over Donald from the time he is awakened in the morning by his Better Self until he finally gets to school. In the meantime, though, his Evil Self gains control and persuades Donald to play hookey from classes to go fishing. Once at the fishing stream, the Evil Self successfully proposes that Donald take a few puffs on a pipe. Donald's groggy reactions are a highlight of the cartoon. The Better Self arrives on the scene in time to prevent Donald from continuing the smoking experiment. After routing the Evil Self, the Better Self leads Donald to school. Running time, 8 minutes.

This subject concerns interesting visits with persons who make their living or their hobby out of the unusual in life. At Notre Dame University we see Dr. Maurice Goldblatt, art detective, inspecting paintings to establish their authenticity; in New York, Peggy Lynch finds a remunerative use for the seahorse; in California Captain Banning operates the state's original stage line; in London Arthur Webb draws pictures upon the city's sidewalk; Mel Forrester puts ships in bottles; in Los Angeles Anton Chris makes castanets for a living, and for added touch, in Hollywood Bob Burns is seen at his favorite hobby, looking through a microscope. Porky's boss, with a sense of humor slightly askew, plans to give to the roseate dreams of the aspiring postal candidate a sobering touch of reality and fills a mail bag with old horseshoes. When it is discovered that Porky has taken by mistake the real stuff and comes across with prompt and brave delivery of his task, the heroic efforts of the porcine routeman are rewarded by promotion to the position of postmaster, with his former boss now a letter licker. The subject is excellently contrived and comically executed.—Running time, seven minutes.

Good Looking Winners
Pulchritudinous Sportlight

Those advocates of Victorian conviction that no nice young lady cheapens herself by participating publicly in athletics will be rather flustered to see in this latest Grantland Rice Sportlight some energetic modern misses who have attained championship standing in their respective sport spheres and have still retained their good looks and their lady-like demeanor. Amusingly contrasted with the anæmically refined sportswomen of the "Gay Nineties" period, the sport girl of today is shown to be a vividly alive lass, as good looking as she is proficient in playing her game, be it hurdling, tennis, golf, riding, swimming. The usual brisk tones of a Ted Husing commentary gives the subject a well rounded finish.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Good

Tidbits of an informative nature served to interest an incredulous audience include the latest device for manufacturing unbreakable spectacles; the plucking of ostrich feathers, presumably for some enterprising fan dancer; a sisterly team of lady butchers and a young trick equestrienne. Additional items concern a trained duck and her juvenile mistress, a world's champion feminine knot tier, and a visit to an insular nesting spot for pelicans. Inclusion of the subject should enhance the entertainment quality of any program.—Running time, nine minutes.

Mediocre Musical

The material presented in this Mentone Musical subject is plentifully supplied but, though high in quantity, the quality of the entertainment offered must be given a low mark. Under the vocal direction of radio songsters Billy Jones and Ernie Hare, as masters of ceremonies, rehearsals start for a barn dance show to be given in modern fashion. The up-to-date motif is fashioned from an assorted collection of one tap dancer, one hill billy band, one pseudo Parisian torch singer, and one troupe of dancing boys and girls. In comparison, the real old fashioned bucolic hoof and wing does not seem so outmoded in entertainment value, but perhaps the whole affair was supposed to be a rehearsal, after all.—Running time, 17 minutes.

Interesting as Usual

A tidy collection of novel tidbits has been gathered to fashion for the latest number of this group the different degree of entertainment to be expected from the class as a whole. The content concerns three subjects that should receive wide and agreeable response. The first item is devoted to an exposition of the patient genius needed for the training of trick canines. The middle section reveals the uncanny skill of the billiard star, Ralph Greenleaf. The concluding sequences study in glowing colors the manufacture of lithographic pictures.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Singapore, cross-roads of the East, founded in 1819 by Stamford Raffles, an Englishman, is very much in the news with the dedication of Britain's strategic military and naval base in the Far East. This picturization of Singapore, except for a brief view of the Fleet in the harbor, has steered clear of military matters and has fashioned the subject out of a score of interesting activities, buildings, river craft and scenery. Narrated by Andre de LaVarre. Running time, 11 minutes.

Himber Harmonies

Tuneful Day in the Life of a Melody Maker

Life may be a song to some persons but to Richard Himber and his popular dance orchestra it is a serious and arduous business of long hours. Following the Himber bandmen around the clock, the listening spectator is given, along with some melodic moments, an instructive insight into the daily routine of an orchestral group. Following the morning rehearsal comes a session devoted to the phonograph recording of the Hit Parade number, "True Confession", with the tuneful and attractive Alice Marion supplying the vocal refrain. Then there's a radio broadcast featuring a novel rendition, by the band and the Selinsky String Quartet, of the jazz classic, "St. Louis Blues". The day ends for the music men with a night club stand and Stuart Allen's singing of "Blossoms on Broadway". Nicely and melodically done up, the subject should prove welcome fare especially for the younger set.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Items in this latest issue of the Going Places series are as different in kind as they are varied in geographical locality. A visit to the strange land of the rapidly disappearing Malayan race, with its quaint customs and folk lore, is effectively juxtaposed to an inspection of a modern day New England doll factory. Though the little girl doll owners are supposed to be made of sugar and spice and everything nice, their miniature dollies are composed of such unpalatable ingredients as doughy, sticky stuff, glue, paint and hair. The contents have been mixed to effect an extremely well made and entertaining piece of novelty worth.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

With his mistress exiting abruptly, Pudgy is left behind, and his frantic efforts to follow her causes him to pull the emergency cord. Escaping the irate conductor, the canine leaps from the car and, amid the labyrinthian dangers of the subway tunnel, walks the tracks to safety. Finally, the penitent pup arrives home with his adventuresome tail considerably curbed and a tale well learned to stay at home. Metropolitan audiences will derive the greatest amount of enjoyment from the clever cartooning of subway travel, but the subject's pace is so fast and amusing that even non-subterranean riders should get several good laughs. — Running time, seven minutes.

Quintupland
(RKO-Pathe)
Interesting

The five famous Dionne girls, Annette, Cecile, Emelie, Marie and Yvonne—now three and a half years old—are shown frolicking outside despite the temperature which the narrator, Andre Baruch, reports is 20 degrees below zero. The picture opens with an airplane view of the Canadian country where the quins live. This is followed by shots of the thriving village, made famous by the five little girls. Dr. Allan Dafoe is seen being admitted to "Quintupland" by a gateman and then the five sisters are shown cavorting in the snow, tobogganing and attempting to ski. Subsequent shots show the quins, eating, dressing in their nurses' clothes in preparation for visiting an imaginary patient and viewing a Mickey Mouse short subject for the first time. Dr. Dafoe's activities also are depicted. He is heard dictating answers to fan mail and delivering one of his series of broadcasts. Frederic Ullman, Jr., produced; Frank Donovan directed; photography was by Frank Hogan and the orchestra arrangements were by Nathaniel Shilkret. Running time, 19 minutes.

Hit and Run
Telling Screen Sermon

A sound and sensible screen sermon is entertainingly and dramatically preached by Floyd Gibbons in this newest edition of the "True Adventure" series. The text of Mr. Gibbons' talk concerns in vivid strokes the evils and the dangers attendant the error of drinking while driving. Using the concrete case of one unfortunate motorist who was involved in the serious situation of being charged as an intoxicated hit-and-run driver, the lecturer shows a young man almost arrested for such a crime through circumstantial evidence of liquor on the breath, a blood stained car and a bent fender. Following tense moments of expertly plotted suspenseful action, the suspected driver is exonerated on the confession of the real culprit, a sober and repentant individual. The moral of the tale is made considerably more effective and convincing by the revelation that such a story had actually happened to a person. The narrative is done in the crisp and crackling style of the famous Floyd Gibbons school of story telling and should prove powerful entertainment and propaganda for the cause of safe driving.—Running time, 12 minutes.

Pictorial No. 7

Of Interest

The first of the three items in this Pictorial subject has special interest in a journey to the Yerkes Observatory in Wisconsin to view the moon through the largest lens-type telescope—and practically everyone seems to be vastly concerned with the moon at one time or another. Through the telescope, however, it is not the inspiration of the song sentimentalist, but more like an unadorned relief map. The narration is by Alois Havrilla. David Ross, in the second item, autumn in the Alps, describes the picturesque countryside. Ed Rickard winds up the subject with a demonstration of shadow plays, manipulating his fingers against a white background. Running time, 10 minutes.

The Sneezing Weasel

Agreeable Stuff

Concerning some cute chicks and their adventures with a wily weasel, this pigmented merry number from the Melody classification retails comical entertainment that should tickle the fanciful risibilities of the average audience. The barnyard fable begins with a colorful electrical storm shooing indoors a mother hen and her poultry brood of young ones. One of the offspring, the problem fowl of the homestead, catches a cold and, instead of the family doctor arriving, the weasel creature, who has learned of the medical call, disguises himself as the practitioner and comes to succor the ailing chick. How the fraud is unmasked and how the villainous weasel receives a dose of his own medicine furnishes some clever and lively moments of cartoon capers.—Running time, seven minutes.

A Fascinating Adventure

Excellent

While in the Sportlight series, this is more of a nature subject, but whatever its classification it is a most interesting excursion through the spring-fed streams of Central Florida. The canoe containing Ross Allen, a naturalist; a girl and a pet monkey is followed by the camera, which records the exploration. Some unusual shots of jungle life are shown. There are deer, squirrels, owls, raccoons, an underwater sequence and a near encounter with an alligator. Running time, 10 minutes.

Waiting Around

Not Worth the Trouble

When Frank Libuse, Jimmie Shea and Gus Raymond, a team of eccentric and acrobatic dancers, breeze into a night club spot with more nerve than financial support, the irate head waiter of the establishment insists that the pecuniarily embarrassed revelers work off their bill by contributing their bungling service to the running of the dining room. While fulfilling this obligation, the trio attempt to interest a producer, who is eating there, in their respective talents. Such a pursuit calls for a turn or two of routine jigging and some raucous and rowdy horse play. The outcome of the exhibition finds the impresario enthusiastically signing up the questionable talent, while overlooking the decidedly different dance act of the Stanley Twins, but, then, he does want to finish his meal. Running time, 20 minutes.

PROPAGANDA USE VOTED BY BRITAIN

The British House of Commons last week unanimously passed a motion that, in view of foreign propaganda against Great Britain by Press, radio and motion pictures, the Government should give every "moral and financial encouragement" to "wider and more effective presentation of British news, views and culture abroad."

All shades of political opinion in the House agreed on the general objectives and all joined in suggesting ways and means. Although no definite means were recommended an amendment was adopted asking "widespread dissemination of straightforward information and news based on enlightened, honest public policy."

The move was precipitated by the increase in radio programs emanating from European countries in which British policy and influence was ridiculed and attacked.

Pathe Parade No. 4

(RKO-Radio)

Of Interest

Instead of the usual three subjects, this issue of Pathe Parade is devoted entirely to the United States Air College at Randolph, Texas. Andre Baruch, commentator, explains that the school is the Annapolis and West Point of the air, and that 10,000 students are trained for flying each year. The reel opens with the registering of cadets and follows them through the training course. They are seen receiving class room instructions, working on engines, learning to fly "blind," taking a first flight with an instructor and then reaching the highpoint of the course by taking a solo flight. Running time, 10 minutes.

Theodore Mitchell Dies At Home in Beechurst

Theodore Mitchell, one of the motion picture's first road-show press agents, died Wednesday morning at his home at Beechurst, Long Island, from injuries sustained when he fell and broke his neck.

Born in Covington, Ky., on April 27, 1874, Mr. Mitchell spent 12 years with the Cincinnati Inquirer as dramatic editor, going to Broadway in 1906 as press agent for the Erlanger theatrical interests. He was one of the first Broadway press agents to leave the stage for film press agentry. After serving Erlanger's for years, and also bringing much of the publicity fame to Lillian Russell, he organized the Washington Square Players, predecessor to the present Theatre Guild, in 1913. In 1915, Mr. Mitchell joined with Jefferson (Jeff) McCarthy to press agent the D. W. Griffith road shows, starting with "The Birth of a Nation," and subsequently handling most of the "big" films for "D. W." and other producers, including Metro-Goldwyn's "Big Parade."

When Mr. McCarthy left independent press agentry, some years back, to join Fox, the McCarthy-Mitchell partnership was terminated, and Mr. Mitchell returned to Broadway, eventually organizing the Theatrical Managers and Treasurers Union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and served it as president in recent years.

TRIPLE QUOTA PROPOSAL ATTACKED AS BLOW TO U.S. AND BRITISH FILMS

Last Minute Amendment Arouses Indignation in CEA Ranks Before Third Reading Of Bill in House of Commons

BULLETIN

Oliver Stanley's proposal to allow films costing £30,000 ($150,000) to count triple for distributors' quota was abandoned by the Government on Wednesday.

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

In the face of opposition from all branches of the industry Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, on Tuesday, prepared to present the Films Bill for its third and final reading in the House of Commons with only the precarious cabinet situation following the resignation of Anthony Eden likely to interrupt the proceedings.

Last minute proposals by Mr. Stanley for amendments reducing to £15,000 the minimum cost of those films which may be counted as eligible under the proposed reciprocity clause, and especially one permitting films costing £30,000 to be counted as triple in valuation for the distributors' quota were regarded by exhibitors with dismay and indignation as liable to force many independents out of business.

Grave concern was expressed in a memorandum signed by Charles P. Metcalfe, who will retire as president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association next month, and Ken Nyman, who will succeed him as president. They pointed out the privileges extended to the distributors exclusively, and foresaw the advantages accruing to American companies. They expressed belief that small producers would be eliminated, that there would be a sharp reduction in the total number of British films and that wholesale exhibitor defaults would result.

On Monday exhibitors began active canvassing in Parliament in opposition to the plan, claiming that it would reduce the quota obligations of American distributors one-third those imposed on exhibitors. It was forecast that under the normal quota there would be 97 films yearly and that the new plan would reduce the total to 33 in the first year and that exhibitor needs would go unsupplied.

The exhibitors visited the Board of Trade hoping to persuade Mr. Stanley to withdraw or modify the proposal but he was absent and they received no encouragement.

At this stage it is not insignificant to note that the final draft of the bill, as threshed out and approved by the committee, follows almost exactly the lines laid out by Stanley's own White Paper. As forecast in these columns, it has proven a Stanley bill, for the fate of the myriad amendments propounded by the industry's parliamentary stooges and barrackers, has been, speaking generally, dismissal.

Main development—and not unexpected when toll is taken of the wholehearted exhibitor backing, and tacit approval in other trade circles—has been the expansion of the Advisory Committee into a Films Council, with immensely wide powers and privileges. Trade demand for a Films Commission was widespread and pronounced. The Film Council is a compromise between this and the insipid Advisory Committee. In this vital development lies one of the new act's most provocative constituents, for it is generally believed, or at least hoped, that its constitution will be elastic enough to serve as a tribunal for matters which do not at the early stages satisfy either or all of the industry's divergent branches.

The setting up, on paper, of what has been described as an optional viewing panel, provided for in that clause of the bill, inserted by Mr. Stanley, under which a film which has passed the cost test may yet be rejected on grounds of insufficient entertainment value, is yet another vital (if in the opinion of many confused) principle which has found its way into the proposed legislation. Whilst exhibitors originally, and to a great extent still, skeptical about a cost test, acknowledge it as a concession to their quality test insistence, other branches of the industry dismiss it as not only an illogical and paradoxical contradiction on Mr. Stanley's own principle, but an immediate hindrance to film finance and production generally.

There are minor percentage changes in the exhibitor quota—an increase of two and a half per cent, which Stanley, for reasons best known to himself, introduced at the last moment and the precise values of which neither exhibitors, renters nor producers seem able to assess.

There, for the present, the bill and its prospects stand, a bill despised by producers, criticized by renters and accepted with placid contentment and few criticisms by exhibitors.

It is on the question of protection that the bill meets its most telling criticism from American renters who, though they have made no public pronunciamentoes on the subject, contend that far from affording protection the new act will merely accentuate competition.

The bill is, they believe, damaging both to the United States and the British industries.

Ten years ago protection was provided by legislation compelling exhibitors to show a certain percentage of British films. The effect of this protection has been nullified by the fact that the 1937 bill, in effect, compelled U. S. interests to produce films in this country, thereby competing with the genuine British films.

Now, when the industry really needs protection, the new bill simply reenacts the 1927 legislation, and provided competition instead of protection, which is an embarrassment to both the industries.

Smaller British renters whose product has been the keenest objective of exhibitor criticism, are naturally among the malcontents, their brand of quota product being doomed. Exhibitors, on the other hand, reply that the new competition which is to be introduced will improve the calibre of product and assist reciprocity.

They, who have had Mr. Stanley's ear all along, and who have rigidly and logically stuck to their original contentions, and have not wavered from their initial arguments, have only one fear, and that is shortage of product, not only of British product, but of Hollywood product, on which, admittedly, they earn their bread and butter. Anxiously they await the full details of the Films Council constitution on which, and the elasticity and privilege of which, they pin a great deal of their faith.

"A revival of the industry will not be accomplished by fantastic amendments increasing quotas upon renters to 40 per cent and upon exhibitors to 50 per cent. If there is a slump when the quota is 20 per cent there would be no industry left at all when the quota rose to 50 per cent.

THEATREMAN STARTS 26th YEAR IN READING

Paul E. Glase, manager of the Embassy theatre, Reading, Pa., this month started his 26th year with the entertainment industry in that city. Mr. Glase, known to his friends as "Peg" because of his initials, never has been away from a Reading theatre for more than two weeks since he started doing theatrical publicity for C. G. Keeney at the old Hippodrome theatre back in 1913.

In the same year he launched a dramatic section in the Reading News, the first of its kind in the state. When the News was absorbed by the Reading Times in 1914 he went with that newspaper to handle theatre features and continued on the job until 1919. Shortly thereafter he joined the theatre firm of Carr and Schad, handling their publicity, and in 1930 he became associated with Wilmer and Vincent Theatres, managing the State and Capitol theatres. In 1933 he was named manager of the circuit's Embassy theatre and city manager of the company.

Mr. Glase throughout his quarter of a century in the industry has amassed a theatrical library and program collection which numbers thousands of items and is said to be one of the finest of its kind in the country.

Attendance 23,000,000

The average weekly attendance at British picture houses was 23,000,000 at the end of 1937, estimates Simon Rowson, film trade statistician. In 1934 it was 18,500,000, according to the same expert. Paid admissions reached a grand total in 1937 of 1,200,000,000. In 1934 they were 963,000,000.

With just over 4,800 halls seating reaches capacity figure of over 4,500,000. The previous figures were 4,300 houses and a total seating capacity of 3,872,000.

Rowson estimates that though these figures show a remarkable increase, takings remain comparatively stable and there is little change in the amount passing through the box office.

Censor Reversed

The British censor board received a sharp rebuke when the county Councils of London, Essex, Middlesex and Surrey accorded "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" a "universal" rating, thus permitting children to see it without restriction of any kind.

The censor board had placed the film in the "A" classification, permitting children to see the Disney cartoon feature only when accompanied by adults.

You and Me

(Paramount)

Melodrama and Romance

Understanding of the entertainment character and showmanship potentialities of "You And Me" may be gleaned from the fact that Fritz Lang, who made "Fury" and "You Only Live Once," is the director, and that Sylvia Sidney, who was featured in those pictures, will be starred in this with George Raft. Those pictures established Lang as a specialist in realism and a director who, while not ignoring dialogue, allows the camera to tell the story.

While it seems that Miss Sidney and Mr. Raft, together with Mr. Lang, will be the centers of publicity and exploitation endeavor, the supporting cast has definite name value. Robert Cummings, Lloyd Nolan, Harry Carey, Roscoe Karns, Warren Hymer and Guinn Williams compose the principal support, with Carol Paige, Vera Gordon and Paul Newlan given parts of lesser importance.

The hero and heroine of the story are a pair of crooks, employed in the department store of a man who believes in giving ex-convicts a chance. While the girl conceals her past, she and the man marry and are happy until he learns her secret. Disillusioned, the husband reverts to type and, in company with a group of ex-convict employees, plans to rob the store. The wife, learning of the plot, tips off the owner, and the crime is prevented, whereupon the husband bitterly denounces her. She disappears, but when the husband learns that she is to become a mother he and his gangster pals trace and find her in a hospital. Upon his begging forgiveness, she tells her love for him.

Basis for the production is an original story by Norman Krasna. His previous credits include "Big City," "Fury" and "Four Hours to Kill."

Release date: May 20, 1938 (tentative).

Crime School

(Warner Bros.)

Melodrama

Regardless of the other merits of "Dead End," the contributions which those tough boys of the slums, Billy Halop, Bobby Jordon, Gabriel Dell, Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall and Bernard Punsley and the gangster, Humphrey Bogart, made to it were of definite entertainment and commercial value in a great many theatres. The group has been reunited for "Crime School." The boys are the same in character, juvenile gangsters continually running afoul of the law. Bogart's character has been changed. He will appear as a settlement worker and commissioner of corrections who succeeds in reforming the boys. Woven through his professional efforts is a romantic love story. With practically all of the action occuring within a reform school that has been mal-administered, the melodrama is accentuated by the fact that the cards are almost constantly stacked against Bogart and he is forced to overcome many obstacles before he succeeds in his original purpose in addition to winning the love of the girl.

Predominately melodramatic in savor, probably the most vivid action sequence will be a "framed up" jail break inspired by a dishonest official with the intent of having the boys kill Bogart.

The story used in the production is an original screen play written by Crane Wilbur, who recently participated in the writing of "Without Warning," "Evidence" and Alcatraz." "Crime School" will be a Bryan Foy production. Foy's recent "The Beloved Brat" will probably incline theatre-goers to give his work a bit more consideration. The director, Lew Seiler, did "Larger Than Life" for Warner and "Turn Off the Moon" for Paramount during 1937.

Other players to be seen include Gale Page, Paul Porcasi, Weldon Heyburn, Cy Kendall and Helen McKellar.

Release date: To be determined.

Kidnapped

(20th Century-Fox)

Adventure

This production will have nothing to do with the modern crime racket. "Kidnapped" is one of Robert Louis Stevenson's best known stories. It is comparable in rank as an adventure-thriller with "Treasure Island" and "Doctor Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," which have been filmed. Basically, though, it is a story of kidnapping. In the pretentious style to which Mr. Darryl F. Zanuck is accustomed, it traces the experiences of an orphan boy who was kidnapped lest he give evidence that would entrap a national hero.

Warner Baxter, last in "Vogues of 1938" and "Wife, Doctor And Nurse," and Freddie Bartholomew, absent from the screen since "Captains Courageous," have the leading roles. Arleen Whelan, never on the screen before, will be seen as the center of romantic love interest. Heading the list of featured players are John Carradine, Reginald Owen and C. Aubrey Smith. Players of British extraction predominate in the supporting cast which includes Miles Mander, Ralph Forbes, Nigel Bruce, E. E. Clive, Halliwell Hobbes, Moroni Olsen, Aily Malyon, Leonard Mudie, Donald Haines, Arthur Hohl, Forrester Harvey and many others.

Alfred T. Werker, who recently has directed several Jane Withers' pictures and will be recalled as the director of "The House of Rothschild," is handling the production.

Reckless Living

(Universal)

Race Track Romance

Romance and comedy, rather than gamblers' skullduggery and thrills provided by thoroughbreds, will be the principal entertainment factors in this production. With the value of cast names, plus the significance that applies to preparation credits, they also should be the basis of exploitation.

The story takes a fresh slant, one in which there appears to be considerable human interest. The hero, who wants to make a killing, quit and marry a night club entertainer, can't make a winning bet. He can beat the slot machines, though, and win damages suits sufficient to make up the bankroll he needs. But there's an old timer residing in the same boarding house who needs $1,000 to permit him to enter a home for the aged. The hero pretends to bet his fortune on the horse his friends picks. It loses, but the boy pays off as though it had been a winner. Appreciating his sacrifice, the girl marries him and both move on to the next race meeting.

Robert Wilcox and Nan Grey, who have been together in several pictures, Miss Grey having been seen recently in "The Black Doll" and "The Jury's Secret," have the leads. The featured comic role is in the hands of Jimmy Savoy, seen in Universal's "Merry-Go-Round of 1938." Other players, residents of the same boarding house as the leads, are William Lundigan, Wilcox's rival for Miss Grey's preference, Harry Davenport, May Boley, Frank Jenks, Harlan Briggs and Samuel S. Hinds.

The story is an original by Gerald Beaumont. He will be remembered as an adept writer of sporting world yarns. The screen play was completed by Charles Grayson, lately associated with "You're A Sweetheart," "The Man Who Cried Wolf" and "We Have Our Moments." Direction was entrusted to Frank McDonald, long with Warners where, among other pictures, he made the first of the "Torchy Blaine" series.

Release date: March 18 (tentative).

White Banners

(Warner Bros.)

Family Story

Occasionally, while rounding up information, it can be sensed that the production being considered will result in an important picture. There are factors associated with "White Banners" which place it within that category.

"White Banners" is adapted from a widely read novel written by Lloyd C. Douglas. His "Magnificent Obsession" lifted Robert Taylor to stardom almost overnight. His "Green Light" was one of the steps up which Errol Flynn trod to prominence. The adaptation was accomplished by a skillful corps of writers. The players who will be seen in the screen version have been prominent in big pictures.

Fay Bainter and Claude Rains are well known. From "These Three" to "The Beloved Brat" Bonita Granville has been looked upon as one of the industry's finest juvenile artistes. "The Champ" introduced Jackie Cooper and "Boy of the Streets" is his latest film. Donald Crisp, Kay Johnson, Ed and William Pawley and James Stephenson are favorably known, as are Edward McWade and Frank Darien. This coterie represents name value.

The story traces the every-day episodes in the lives of a down-to-earth American family. Some of the incidents are joyful, others are tragic. All, however, are such as might be the lot of any ordinary family. A strange but kindly disposed woman makes the troubles of a man and his wife her's. She takes unto herself the guidance of their adolescent daughter's puppy love. At sacrifice to herself, she lifts all from despair to hope.

The film is being produced by Henry Blanke and directed by Edmund Goulding ("That Certain Woman," "Riptide" and "Grand Hotel"). It is not intended that "White Banners" shall be a tear jerker. Rather it is to be a page from life as many people know it.

Newspaper Critic Urges Colleagues To "Mind Their Own Business"

Rosenfield of Dallas News Charges Critics Are Most Concerned with Own Importance

Film critics of newspapers, sometimes called "film reviewers" or "drama editors," are concerned chiefly with their own place in the bright lights of theatrical ballyhoo, says John Rosenfield, Jr., himself a film critic, in his column, "Notes on the Passing Show," in the Dallas News.

In admonishing film critics to "mind their own business," Mr. Rosenfield, one of the best known of his line in the Southwest, takes a strongly-worded stand extremely opposite to the usual practice of upholding the profession as generally expressed in print by his colleagues.

Film reviewers on newspapers are reminded by Mr. Rosenfield that the fact they are permitted to sign their names to their reviewing accounts "is not necessarily a tribute to their wisdom or spectacular syntax."

"In a more enlightened moment, George Jean Nathan wrote that criticism always suffers from ward politics. The truth of the apothegm is as undebatable as a motion to adjourn," he adds.

"The critic is a highly indispensable feature of a complete publication," Mr. Rosenfield concedes, but he charges that "nine out of ten practice their craft in a manner neither fair to their art, nor just to the impresarios, nor faithful to unsuspecting readers who encounter their by-lines."

The First Fault

He says that "the first fault of a critic is always self-consciousness. The signature in bold-face capital letters at the head of his article impresses him far more than it does the reader to whom it is only one of a score of signatures in the paper that day. To the critic, however, it is his top-billing, his calcimine spotlight, his center stage.

"The music of Beethoven and Brahms is an excuse for the virtuoso to express himself. The lines of Shakespeare or Jack Kirkland are merely stimuli for an actor's great urge to self-revealment. The critic, however, uses both vehicle and performer as the material for rhetorical bravura. They are merely the subject matter for his play on words, his typewriter exercises in epigrams and his torrent of discursive and badly organized philosophizing. We have seen critics gloat over a turn of phrase with the same rapture that a movie actress contemplates her Adrian-gowned entrance into a Cedric Gibbons penthouse," Mr. Rosenfield observes.

A Functional Attendance

"Not often does the newspaper critic pause to reflect that his attendance at a play, a movie or a concert is functional. He is merely an agent of the press at a public event that must be chronicled. The reason why he is permitted to sign his name to his account is not necessarily a tribute to his wisdom or his spectacular syntax. The newspaper, as an institution, must bear responsibility for its anonymous content. No newspaper dares take the blame for comment on the arts it must ordinarily publish. So the paper prefixes the name of the commentator. It just avoids employment of that small-type editorial note ahead of its political columns, to wit:

" 'The opinions expressed herein are not necessarily the views of the newspaper.'

"Partly from self-protection and partly from indulgence, the press permits critics to act as prima donnas of the lively arts. The critics, in their self-absorption, seldom remember that there are better-paid and more important members of the staff who never sign their screeds. Few critics recall that the best dramatic critic in modern journalism, the late A. B. Walkley, and the best music critic, Ernest Newman, won their standing in total anonymity from their superb competence on their jobs. This took place during the period when nobody signed a name on the London Times.

"Snide Sensations"

"The critic is concerned chiefly with his own place in the bright lights of theatrical ballyhoo. If his competitor is tender-hearted he will be hard-boiled. If his competitor is sympathetic he will be cynical. If the other newspaper, by reason of superior circulation and reader confidence, receives the greater solicitude of the impresarios he will simply step up his nuisance value with snide sensations," Mr. Rosenfield asserts.

"So far behind him as to be ignored is the critic's raison d'etre. He is hired and given passes only to fill the columns of his publication with a truthful story of something that happened. He is, of course, supposed to know his business thoroughly enough to judge an exhibit for what it is worth, to fix it in an esthetic creed and a historical perspective.

"This, however, is not as difficult as it sounds. The critic of the arts is required to know no more of his subject than a police reporter, a city hall reporter, a political editor or a sports writer. Should he succumb to the temptation to rate an expert knowledge of Beethoven or Cecil DeMille above a keen-minded and informed orientation of George Sargeant among the solons of Dallas, Jimmy Allred among the Governors of Texas or Jim Levey among Dallas shortstops from Arthur Fletcher to Turkey Gross he discloses himself for what he probably is—an intellectual upstart.

"The critic who has taken the trouble to know the problems of management will then be qualified for at least one half his duties. The other 50 per cent can be the wispy idealism, the nebulous standard by which he scores merit. As a result he probably will relax into the business of reporting and leave management to those whose risk it is," Mr. Rosenfield concludes.

JOHN ROSENFIELD, JR., CRITIC OF CRITICS

John Rosenfield, Jr., who takes the unusual position of severely criticizing the members of his craft for their reputed concern over their own importance, is not new to motion picture writing. Now 38 years old, Mr. Rosenfield first saw the motion picture as a publicity writer, some years ago, at Paramount's Long Island studios, going there after a brief spell as motion picture reviewer for the now defunct New York Motion Picture Mail. From the Paramount studios, at their closing, he was shifted to the home office publicity department in New York for the same company.

He matriculated at the University of Texas and Columbia University in New York, edited Paramount's house publication, Exploiteer, served as political reporter for the Dallas News, and finally became motion picture and amusements editor for the News and its twin paper, the Dallas Evening Journal. He had left Paramount Pictures and Broadway to return to the Dallas of his birth, and, since returning, besides his newspaper work, has written "Texas History of the Movies" and stories and articles for magazines.

Melniker Bound for Brazil

William Melniker of Loew's foreign theatre department left New York this week for Sao Paulo, Brazil, where he will be on hand for the opening of the new Metro theatre there on March 15th. Loew's will also open a new house in Bombay, India, some time in May. Ben Cohn, manager of the College theatre, New Haven, Conn., has been appointed house manager for the Bombay house and will leave shortly for India.

Felix Warburg, New York financier and member of the Walter Wanger directorate, is in Hollywood for conferences with Mr. Wanger. Mr. Warburg, following the conferences, will go to Honolulu for a vacation.

John Barrymore said this week that he and his wife, Elaine Barrie, have signed a contract to appear together in "My Dear Children," a stage play to be produced on Broadway by Brock Pemberton next fall.

National Screen Service this week opened a branch office in Denver, Col. Sebe Goodlett, representative for the company in the Denver territory for years, will manage the exchange.

Elsa Newberger has joined the eastern story department of Selznick International. She was formerly with Universal.

By permission of the copyright owners and in a tieup with Warner Brothers, Postal Telegraph will croon "Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen" for customers, instead of transmitting a routine greeting message. Postal will croon "Bei Mir Bist" "greetings" anywhere in the country for a quarter, or a little more, depending on the distance the crooner is to croon. If a woman is to be the recipient, she will hear the crooning of a man crooner over the telephone, and if a man is to get the message, he will hear the warbling of a woman.

The stunt is intended to "plug" the song, which is published by Harms, Inc., a Warner subsidiary, and is featured in Warners' motion picture, "Love, Honor and Behave."

WE present herewith an account from the florists' trade publication, World, on the decorations used for the wedding anniversary celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Darryl Francis Zanuck, as held at the Joseph M. Schenck estate, in California:

"To complete the decorating job, 45 florists from shops throughout southern California worked a straight 36 hours. An eight-foot wedding bouquet of white Roses and Lillies of the Valley was a feature; in the same room 4,000 Mystery Gardenias were arranged in Birch trees. Several of the rooms were festooned with Grape vines; in one room 3,000 pink Perfection Camellias were twined in the vines—4,000 white Carnations in another—in a third, Violets in clusters gave the effect of grapes on the vines. The ballroom was decorated with thousands of maroon Carnations on trellises; the bay window at the end of the ballroom had been removed to permit the entrance of a 10-foot birdcage holding white cockatoos. Fourteen bridal bouquets, arranged in hats, adorned the main staircase; a large plaque of pink and white flowers was placed at the top. The porch was transformed into an old-fashioned garden with Eugenias, Boxwoods, Cypresses, etc. Tables for the 150 guests were decorated with old-fashioned bouquets.

"The florists' bill is reported to have been nearly $15,000—besides that of a long list of workers—160 in all. An interesting feature of the record-breaking decoration was the fact that no fern was used."

It took firemen two hours to get the blaze under control.

Someone's conscience is due for a terrific test when Sol Krim, heading Krim Theatrical Enterprises, finishes his new theatre at Birmingham, Mich. The theatre will have four huge stars on top of the marquee upright sign, and those stars will be used to indicate the rating of the picture playing—four stars will flash off-and-on for a four-star picture; three stars for a three-star film, and two stars for a two-starer.

Little doubt was left that if the broadcasters did not act accordingly, the big stick of Uncle Sam would.

Mae, evidently aware that hers might be one of the "big-names" spoken during the convention, hospitably paid for a full-page advertisement in a theatrical paper to welcome the delegates. The ad said: "SALUTATIONS! to the National Association of Broadcasters and all its members."—"From the Champion of the Box Office—Mae West." She signed off with a "REMEMBER ME, BOYS?"

Monogram's 1937 Gross Profit Is Set at $60,279

The financial statement of Monogram Pictures to December 31, 1937, sent to stockholders last Saturday, shows that Monogram had a gross profit of $60,279 during its yearly operations, but that selling, general organization and administrative expenses of the parent company and three subsidiary exchange corporations, amounting to $299,-355, were written off, accounting for a loss of $239,076 for the period.

The company as of December 31, 1937, said it had the benefit of only one week's income from what it described as "its most outstanding offering to date, "Boy of the Streets."

Current Working Assets $1,145,195

The report covers activities from Feb. 1, 1937 to Dec. 31, 1937, although actual releasing started in July, and explains that income of the product produced came in during only a small portion of the calendar year. "The pictures made during 1937 will get their biggest play in 1938," it was explained.

Total current working assets after film amortization amount to $1,145,195, against current liabilities of $332,095.

W. Ray Johnston, president, in this the first annual report of the "New Monogram," as reorganized last year, lists for stockholders some 30 feature releases from the beginning of production, last June, to March 16th of this year. He said that during the year the company built a distributing system in the field around 27 exchanges, as owned by individual franchise holders, and the company's own sales offices in New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

Circuit deals have been closed with Warner Brothers, Loew's, RKO, Texas Consolidated and Interstate Theatres, Great States, Skouras, Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, Fox West Coast, United Theatres, Balaban and Katz, Essaness, Schine, Consolidated Amusements of Honolulu and W. S. Butterfield.

Contracts With 5,134 Theatres

Mr. Johnston explained that the company has contracts with a total of 5,134 theatres for its 1937-'38 product. He announced the consolidated balance sheet as of December 31, 1937, as follows:

		$1,262,376.40

The company follows the policy of amortizing the cost of released productions in proportion to the estimated receipt of income from the exhibition of pictures. These costs (except 25 per cent of the negative cost of certain pictures which has been allotted to foreign countries) are amortized from the date of release in the United States over a period of 60 weeks for features and 75 weeks for westerns. Summaries of the amortization tables follows:

Weeks After Release	Features %	Westerns %
30	75¼	55½
45	92½	80¾
75	...	100

Minimum guarantees received by the company in connection with the distribution of pictures in foreign countries have been carried as an item of deferred income in the balance sheet inasmuch as these pictures had not been exhibited in such foreign countries at December 31, 1937, and, accordingly, the portion of the negative cost allotted to these pictures has not been amortized.

The company has granted options to purchase a maximum of 300,834 shares of its authorized capital stock at prices ranging from $4.00 to $8.00 per share, depending upon the year in which exercised: such options expire on December 28, 1942.

Directors of Monogram Pictures are scheduled to be reelected at the company's annual meeting of stockholders to be held at the home office in New York on March 2nd. The annual election of officers, to be held subsequently, likewise is not expected to bring about any changes.

Monogram Pictures franchise holders will convene in Hollywood the first week in April to go over the plans for producing 42 features for the 1938-'39 season.

A national sales convention is planned for the last week in April and will be held in some centrally located city, probably Cincinnati, Johnston said.

E. B. Derr, who reportedly has been seeking a major company releasing arrangement, may continue with the company under a deal calling for production of eight features on next season's schedule in place of the four which he made this year. Mr. Johnston also reported that he had renewed Monogram's lease on the Talisman studios for another year while on the coast.

Of the 42 features, 16 will be westerns, thus matching the company's schedule for the current year. Eleven features, five of them westerns, remain to be completed on this year's program.

Taxes Delaying UA Deal, Says Miss Pickford

Tax problems involved in a sale of the controlling stock interests in United Artists of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin stand as the "most important" barrier to consummation of a deal with David O. Selznick and Samuel Goldwyn, Miss Pickford said on her arrival in Chicago last Thursday from Hollywood.

Emphasizing that she, Mr. Fairbanks and Mr. Chaplin stood ready to sell their stock holdings in the company at any time "to the right party," Miss Pickford said that a Selznick-Goldwyn offer, which might also include Alexander Korda on either the buying or the selling end, is under consideration. She added, however, that the importance of tax considerations in such a deal impelled lengthy study and probably was sufficient to delay consummation of a deal for some time.

Miss Pickford declared that a deal might be consummated "any day" providing the offer came from "the right party accompanied by a pledge that the terms of sale would be fully met." Although she declined to amplify this statement, it is believed that she had reference to the recent failure of the Goldwyn-Korda option deal, which was subjected to considerable bargaining even after what was regarded as a final agreement had been reached.

Emphasizing the willingness of herself, Mr. Fairbanks and Mr. Chaplin to sell their United Artists stock holdings to active producers, Miss Pickford said that the three were "deeply considerate of the fact that United Artists should continue to provide a production opportunity for the Selznicks and Zanucks of the industry."

She intimated that the partners' primary consideration was that the company should be maintained on the principles of its founders and that, in the event producers willing to perpetuate those principles were properly interested, a deal for purchase of the three-fifths stock interest might be had at any time.

Carrington on Coast

G. L. Carrington, Altec vice-president, arrived in Hollywood this week for consultation with the research council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Mr. Carrington is expected to return to New York March 1st, stopping en route at Seattle, Salt Lake City, Denver, Kansas City and Chicago.

Nelson Eddy on Concert Tour

Nelson Eddy, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, left Hollywood this week on a concert tour which will take in 32 cities over a period of three months. John Carter succeeds him on the Chase and Sanborn air show.

Goldstein in Europe

Samuel Goldstein, treasurer of Guaranteed Pictures Company, Inc., is in Europe on his annual sales trip. Among the countries he will visit are England, France and Holland.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—They came, they saw and they laughed, at the funniest, fastest farce in a long time. Many came a second time and declared they enjoyed it as much as they did the first. Pulled a good business and patron reaction all good. Running time, 92 minutes. Played January 23-24-25.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clattskanie, Oregon. Small town and rural patronage.

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—A knockout. Irene Dunne is absolutely "tops" in this. Did better than average business by a small margin. —Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Cary Grant, Irene Dunne—Had a good house and, boy, how they laughed. This picture is tops in fun and laughter. We received a good print, which is something out of the ordinary, from Columbia. Thanks for the best comedy of the year. Running time, 92 minutes. Played January 30-31.—Pruitt Simms, Dale Theatre, Ozark, Ala. General patronage.

DEVIL IS DRIVING, THE: Richard Dix, Joan Perry—Quite an entertaining picture which contains a strong campaign against drunken driving. The local sports must have known about it in advance because they parked their cars and brought their bottles to the theatre. Three of these sports were able to leave the theatre under their own power, but one had to be carried out. The picture is exciting and thrill fans enjoyed it. Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 7.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Maine. Rural patronage.

DEVIL IS DRIVING, THE: Richard Dix—While this picture has a somewhat slow moving plot, it is instructive as well as entertaining. Good program picture. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD ROUND-UP: Buck Jones, Helen Twelvetrees—Buck is at it again. Bringing the extra customers out. Buck's fans will like this slightly different picture. Played this on a weekend to satisfactory business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD ROUND-UP: Buck Jones, Helen Twelvetrees—Not much of a picture, but it did better than average business. Weak story.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

IT'S ALL YOURS: Francis Lederer, Madeleine Carroll—Clever picture to less than average business. Columbia pictures do not draw; even the few good ones flop. Too much foreign accent in this picture. A little is okay, but when two of the three principal characters dish out this accent for the entire picture then it is too much.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS WITH LOVE: Jean Parker, Douglass Montgomery—It was supposed to be comedy, but maybe we have no sense of humor around here. Anyhow, nobody liked it and nobody minced words in telling us so. Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 2-3.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

OUTLAWS OF THE PRAIRIE: Charles Starrett—Much better than most of the 1936-37 Starretts. Had a better plot and had to do with the shipment of gold which is nearly always preferable to the worn-out cattle rustling angle.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

RECKLESS RANGER: Bob Allen, Louise Small—Fair western with the usual amount of everything.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

SHE MARRIED AN ARTIST: John Boles, Luli Deste—This is another one of those pictures better left unmade. No story, no cast, no money at the box office. Put them all together it spells ruin to any exhibitor who continues to play such pictures. Running time, 78 minutes. Played January 29-30.—H. M. Garber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

THEODORA GOES WILD: Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas—My patrons are still talking about this picture that I picked up from last year and sold to them on bargain night for the advertising that we could get out of the run. It worked and we did better on our next programs. I've found these good pictures from the previous year are better bets than some of the new punks that are coming along with too much regularity to suit me.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

THEODORA GOES WILD: Irene Dunne—A great show and pleased all who came. Dunne is a knockout in this, but business off 40 per cent. Evidently her name is not box office here.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

TRAPPED BY G-MEN: Jack Holt—Used as top half of double feature and went over well with most of the Saturday night fans.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

TRAPPED BY G-MEN: Jack Holt—Pleased fairly well and drew better than average, though this shows it was produced on a low budget.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

TWO GUN LAW: Charles Starrett—About the poorest western we have had from Columbia. The same old worn-out plot. The ranch owner's daughter, the cattle rustling, and the dance. So poor, in fact, that the crowd often laughed at the wrong time. (How I hate that.)—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

First National

ADVENTUROUS BLONDE, THE: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—Just a picture. Will get by on a double bill.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

BACK IN CIRCULATION: Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien—Saw some adverse reports in the Herald on this picture, but I found it okay for the end of the week use. I don't think you will be hurt running this picture on the end of the week. Running time, 82 minutes. Played January 15.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

LOVE IS ON THE AIR: Ronald Reagan, June Travis—Was afraid of this, but it turned out to be a good comedy drama, with Reagan and Travis pleasing our patrons.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HOTEL: Dick Powell, Frances Langford, Lola Lane. Benny Goodman and Band.—This picture did not live up to advance publicity. Too much singing, too many bands; in fact, too much of everybody and everything, except Ted Healy, who almost single handed kept this gigantic musical from overpowering my audience. He really was swell and we're going to miss his unaffected and refreshing personality.—J. A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HOTEL: Dick Powell, Benny Goodman and Band—Swell entertainment with a strong cast. As good as the average musical, although there are too many stars in the picture for any individual one to do proper justice to their assigned roles. Running time, 106 minutes.—Peter Panagos, Sipe Theatre, Kokomo, Ind. General patronage.

PERFECT SPECIMEN, THE: Errol Flynn, Joan Blondell—A good picture. Did not do any extra business, but most people liked it.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

SUBMARINE D-1: George Brent, Pat O'Brien, Wayne Morris—A small town natural if there ever was one. This picture puts Morris where he belongs in the top flight. It should appeal to all classes and Warner should look with pride to this production after a bunch of mediocre product that they have delivered this season. Running time, 95 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SUBMARINE D-1: Pat O'Brien, George Brent—A dandy picture for small towns and it did extra business for us. It will please.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

WHITE ANGEL, THE: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter—One of the best pictures we have played to a satisfied audience. Story, stars and acting tops with our patrons. Running time, 90 minutes.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Grand National

FRONTIER TOWN: Tex Ritter—One of the best of the Tex Ritters. Give us more like this.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SOMETHING TO SING ABOUT: James Cagney, Evelyn Daw—Don't bet two heavily on this one, because it will not make the grade. Was very much disappointed in this picture as most of the trade reviews had rated it very highly. It did fair business, but it did not click with the customers. Gave it top playing time and regretted it afterward. Played October 31-November 1.—R. D. Fisher, Cosy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

SOMETHING TO SING ABOUT: James Cagney, Evelyn Daw—This turned out to be "Something to Cry About" for the exhibitor. This picture has nothing to recommend it. The story is all washed out, the photography is very poor and the sound isn't much better. My print was quite badly scratched and that didn't help matters any. If this is Grand National's best, what must the others be, and now they lost the only star they had. Woe is me. Running time, 93 minutes. Played February 12-13.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce—Here's a masterpiece in any spot. Strong enough for extended runs. An outstanding production. Running time, 89 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

BEG, BORROW OR STEAL: Frank Morgan, Florence Rice—A pleasing little picture that made a perfect contrast on a double bill with "Portia on Trial." Not a big production, but one that will please generally. Running time, 72 minutes. Played January 19-20.—M. H. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Eleanor Powell, Robert Taylor—One of the famous 40 percenters from Metro. I'll join the rest in saying that this picture was a disappointment to our audience. Too much about horses and not enough music. These modern musicals just don't compare with those of former years. We don't consider Taylor either a comedian or a musician, so why cast him in this type of picture? Running time, 110 minutes. Played January 28-29.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Maine. Rural patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy —A very good production and done a little above average business. Running time, 87 minutes. Played December 26-7.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy —This fell down in spite of perfect weather and extra advertising. It moderately pleased those who saw it. I would say that its defect is that the characterizations portrayed by both principals are so caricatured that neither ever quite succeeds in completely capturing the sympathy of the audience. Running time, 87 minutes. Played February 7-8.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: Myrna Loy, William Powell —A good comedy and went over for extra business for me. No complaints.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy —My patrons enjoyed this immensely and the picture did a very nice business on a holiday, but when Metro got through taking their cut, I had prestige and experience. The picture borders on slapstick, but these small towners like it and will buy it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy —Went over nearly as big as "Awful Truth" and that is saying something. Comments numerous and the word-of-mouth advertising gave us a much bigger than usual second night. Really one of the most pleasing pictures we have screened. Used midweek to considerably above average business.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

FIREFLY, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Allan Jones —Just a little too long, but otherwise one grand musical that not only pulled but pleased just about every one. More favorable comments than anything we have played for some time. Running time, 132 minutes. Played January 16-17-18.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore.

FIREFLY, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Allan Jones —A great production that took a great nosedive. We lost plenty of money on this baby. Did not please as my people were wore out trying to stick it out. Running time, 138 minutes. Played January 9-10.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

LAST GANGSTER, THE: Edward G. Robinson—A good picture of its kind. Did not do above average business.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

LAST GANGSTER, THE: Edward G. Robinson, Rose Stradner—We ran this on our best nights and did fair business, but it wasn't worth three nights in this town. The picture had some good acting by a swell cast and it seemed to please, but put it on your weekend or your bargain night.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

LIVE, LOVE AND LEARN: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—Did just fair business with this on our best days and the picture seemed to please because we didn't have any knocks. Hardly worth the price, but I've got to help pay the in-laws' salary.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

LIVE, LOVE AND LEARN: Rosalind Russell, Robert Montgomery—Is a very good comedy. Did not do average business for me. I think the trailer hurt it as I had several say they did not want to see that picture if the trailer had anything to do with it.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

MADAME X: Gladys George, Warren William—If you want to see some character acting and you want to see it by yourself, here is the picture for you. If you want to buy some steak, don't run it because it won't gross film rental.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MADAME X: Warren William, Gladys George—This is a hard one to report on. Poorest midweek business for some time. It seems to cover too much story and territory in 72 minutes. May be a good picture, but certainly can't rate as pleasant entertainment. However, we heard several favorable comments.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

MAYTIME: Jeanette MacDonald—Played this in place of "Firefly." Went over great with the better classes. Some said the best we have played. Many fine comments. Was, however, a pain in the neck to those that only got as far as the fourth grade. I think it is the type that should be played once in a while even in the smallest towns.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

MAN-PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone—A disappointing picture to me, but in box office and entertainment. Just a program picture. Not a special. Running time, 73 minutes.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

NAVY BLUE AND GOLD: James Stewart, Robert Young—We cannot say too much for this picture. About the best thing we played for two years. A few more like this and we can live in our own home. Play it big and watch them come in. Running time, 92 minutes. Played January 2-4.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

NAVY BLUE AND GOLD: James Stewart, Robert Young, Tom Brown, Lionel Barrymore, Florence Rice —About the best picture that Metro has turned out for this town and it did a mighty good business. Not a sound in the audience during some scenes and when a picture can quiet them all, they are really being entertained. Grab it; boost it and be contented. It will deliver.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

NAVY BLUE AND GOLD: James Stewart, Robert Young, Tom Brown, Lionel Barrymore, Florence Rice —You will notice I star Jimmy Stewart as he was outstanding in his role. A swell football picture and a story of the service that's hard to beat. Push it and you will be well rewarded. Running time, 94 minutes. Played January 16-17.—Pruitt Simms, Dale Theatre, Ozark, Ala. General patronage.

PARADISE FOR THREE: Frank Morgan, Robert Young—Not a big picture and not a cheap picture, but just 80 minutes of swell entertainment. Not one adverse comment. Good enough for any change.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

ROSALIE: Nelson Eddy, Eleanor Powell—Grand picture. Different. Plenty action, audience appeal, nice story. Extended runs anywhere and music for the box office. But the producer takes it all. Exhibitors should live on love, anyway. Running time, 122 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ROSALIE: Nelson Eddy, Eleanor Powell, Ray Bolger, Frank Morgan—This is a very lavish production that failed to click with those who have seen it. For some reason or other MGM lost its zip and the picture is very draggy. It does not compare with even the cheaper allocations of Paramount when it comes to zest and spiriteliness, and falls 'way short of "Varsity Show" of Warners. Powell still dances the old routines she did several years ago. Eddy as a singer is wonderful, but his acting is very wooden and forced. Bolger should have more dancing. The one bright spot of the show is Morgan, who steals the entire production. Running time, 122 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Judy Garland, Mickey Rooney, Sophie Tucker—Nice little picture which agreeably surprised the customers. I played it two days and did not regret it. Should be worth more even later due to the publicity Judy Garland is now getting.—J. A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

TRADER HORN (reissue): Harry Carey, Edwina Booth—The combination really did business. If your week-end crowd likes plenty of action and comedy, this combination will take the place of your double feature and with just a little advertising do plenty of business. Metro sells these worth the money.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE ONLY YOUNG ONCE: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney—Excellent picture. Along the lines of the Fox "Jones Family." No draw, but pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Paramount

ANGEL: Marlene Dietrich, Herbert Marshall, Melvyn Douglas—I never could see this star and my patrons evidently think the same way because they were noticeable by their absence. Me and the usher kinda liked this picture, though.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

BARRIER, THE: Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker—We did average business with this picture and a companion feature on our best days. Some action, but wonderful photography and scenery, just the dish for your amateur cameramaniacs and worth a plug in their behalf. Not a big picture, but a satisfying one for small town patrons.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

BARRIER, THE: Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker—Very good northern picture with beautiful scenes in it. Poor weather and bad roads made this lose money. Running time, 93 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

BORDERLAND: William Boyd—All to the good and above the average western pictures. Book it; you will not be sorry. Running time, 82 minutes. Played February 9.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

BORN TO THE WEST: John Wayne, Marsha Hunt —Paramount has done very well by the small town exhibitor with their out-of-door pictures. Their care in making these pictures evidences itself in the product. This one is excellent and received very favorable comment from all. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DAUGHTERS OF SHANGHAI: Anna May Wong, Charles Bickford—Well made and Anna May did her stuff very well, but did not especially please. Lacked 3,000 miles of Shanghai locale (which patrons expected). Was a throw-back to the old serial days when lady heroines did everything from cooking to killing the villain. The director in this had Anna May stand watching while her hero had a heck of a fight.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Bing Crosby—Did a fair business and pleased most of the customers.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Bing Crosby, Martha Raye—This picture was good enough, but we couldn't make it do business. Maybe because people are fed up on musicals. Paramount got the receipts and while I enjoyed the picture, the price of the seat came high, no tax included.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Bing Crosby, Martha Raye—The customer enjoys this, goes out and then doesn't know what he has seen. However, it will do good business and please all who see it, even though it is not as good as ye olde time Crosby pictures, such as "Anything Goes" and lately, "Waikiki Wedding." Played November 24-25.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

EASY LIVING: Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold—Normal business for a well liked production. Both actors have a following in Sodus. Played February 5. —C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

FORLORN RIVER: June Martel, Larry Crabbe, Syd Saylor—Wholly satisfactory in every department, this is a cinch for the western fans and consequently for the B.O. Syd Saylor gets a good many laughs as Nevada's sidekick. Another notch on Paramount's topnotch western staff. Played November 26-27.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME: Irene Dunne, Randolph Scott—No good for me. The picture is not so bad but it lacks something. Too much singing for no good reason by Miss Dunne.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME: Irene Dunne, Randolph Scott—There was one or two reels of this picture that were plenty good but the agony that has to be endured before the director got them on the screen. It drew just fair business. Nobody praised it but they didn't knock it, so will rate it just fair.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HOLD 'EM NAVY: Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle—Nice little program picture that gave me better than average business. Running time, 67 minutes. Played February 4.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

HOLD 'EM NAVY: Mary Carlisle, Lew Ayres—The producers changed the old football idea slightly when they made this one. Instead of the hero making the winning touchdown, he helps a pal, and gets the girl just the same. Those who like football pictures will like it but it isn't quite up to the standard of the oldtime football thrillers. Running time, 67 minutes. Played January 17.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Maine. Rural patronage.

HOLD 'EM NAVY: Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle—This was a good football picture, played on Christmas Day and was well received and appreciated by a good crowd of holiday patrons. Maybe not so seasonal right now but your younger people will enjoy it any time.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HOPALONG RIDES AGAIN: William Boyd—Everyone was pleased. Business fair; but very good western picture. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 5.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

INTERNES CAN'T TAKE MONEY: Barbara Stanwick, Joel McCrea—Many compliments on this swell show. I ran it only one day, which was my mistake. It's old but worth the playing time you can give it. Average business, which would have been increased if I had run it two days and got the benefit of the word of mouth advertising. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 2.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE PRINCESS: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland—Business normal and the picture proved satisfactory. Played January 29.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MOUNTAIN MUSIC: Bob burns, Martha Raye, Rufe Davis—One of the "nuttiest", "screwiest" features ever witnessed. There isn't anything to it but it kept our audience in a continued roar of laughter and after all that's what counts. Martha Raye and Bob Burns carry it along at top speed assisted by a capable aggregation of supports, with Rufe Davis and his guitar taking top honors. It's crazy, it's daffy, it's silly but what of it. Box office in any man's theatre. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 12.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MOUNTAIN MUSIC: Bob Burns, Martha Raye—As Martha would say with that tiny mouth, Oh Boy! The first night of this picture was o.k. but with the first night customers so pleased it sure did a swell at the B. O. second night. Thanks to Bob and Martha. Played January 31-February 1.—W. M. Pinckard, Princess Theatre, Carthage, Tenn. Small town patronage.

NORTH OF THE RIO GRANDE: William Boyd, George Hayes—These Hopalong Cassidy westerns are the best on the market and if you can use westerns you will make no mistake in running these. I cannot get by with them here as my patrons do not care for them. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 11.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

NOW AND FOREVER: (Re-issue) Gary Cooper, Carole Lombard, Shirley Temple—We bought this picture in the lowest allocation from Paramount, and as a result of the drawing power of the three stars we cleaned up on it. Not a very good ending to the picture and Shirley doesn't have so very much to do. I had a few mild complaints from patrons, but the box office was very happy. Played February 4-5.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Maine. Rural patronage.

SOULS AT SEA: Gary Cooper, George Raft, Frances Dee—My people don't even know that there is an ocean, so sea stories don't go here. Then, they don't appreciate the brutality that some directors seem to think belong on the screen. Consequently, we had to take a rap on this and was Paramount sorry. We ask you.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SOULS AT SEA: Gary Cooper, George Raft—One of the Paramount bell ringers. Competent cast and effective treatment throughout. Cooper as good as ever and Raft surpassing anything he has ever done. A little above average business. Played November 28-29.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

TEXAS TRAIL: William Boyd, George Hayes—These Hopalong Cassidys are the one redeeming feature of the Paramount lineup. Without them they would be almost a washout. It'll be goodby Paramount after this year in this town.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THIS WAY PLEASE: Buddy Rogers, Betty Grable—Picture is good entertainment. It pleased. Did some extra business.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THIS WAY PLEASE: Charles Buddy Rogers, Betty Grable, Ned Sparks, Mary Livingston—This is quite a pleasing little comedy, the outstanding part of which was Rufe Davis in his sound-effects-man role. In the opinion of many Mary Livingston will outshine her famous husband in the movies, if given good parts to play. Ned Sparks is just as good as ever and as usual produced most of the laughs. As for Fibber McGee and Molly, well, quite a few wanted to see what they looked like after hearing them on the air, but reported disappointment after the show. Running time, 63 minutes. Played February 5-6.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crossby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye—Played late, account of theatre hasn't been open long. Business terrible. Not as good as "Double or Nothing". But it will do to trade in one of the new ones, for instance "Blossoms on Broadway". Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 6-7.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye—Picked this up for a midweek and was surprised that it didn't do any above average. Comments were not noticeable either pro or con. Was a little disappointed in this.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee, Bob Burns—Many favorable comments on this worthwhile entertaining picture.—J. A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee—Just when you have about lost all hopes for the future of motion pictures Frank Lloyd crashes through with "Wells Fargo", a picture that is outstanding in every way, will rank as high now as "Cimarron" did in its time. You will forget there is a recession while this one is showing in your theatre. Play it extended time.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Republic

GLAMOROUS NIGHT: Mary Ellis, Victor Jory—This is my first contribution to your column and I hate to start by griping but this one is too rare to do anything else but gripe about. While I sit here in the office typing this letter I can hear the crowd booing. We have a reputation for running an orderly house but tonight is their night to howl and I don't blame them a bit for I am half through the showing of "Glamorous Night". Republic led me into this one blindly and believe me they have taught me a lesson. If you don't hear from me in the future you'll know one of my customers committed justifiable murder on his way out of the show. Played February 1.—C. O. Farrar, Grand Theatre, Vienna, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

MANHATTAN MERRY-GO-ROUND: Phil Regan, Ann Ovorak—Boy, oh, boy, here is a picture. Advertise it big and watch 'em come and go away with smiles. The print we used had excellent recording. Some of the scenes were rather dark but the main idea is it will please all. Running time, 84 minutes. Played January 28-29.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

OH, SUSANNA! Gene Autry—Autry is always good. Folks here are going blooey over him. This picture is about average for all Autry pictures we have played. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 2-3.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

OLD CORRAL, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Oh Boy, everything is smooth sailing when this boy hits town. Played January 29.—W. M. Pinckard, Princess Theatre, Carthage, Tenn. Small town patronage.

PORTIA ON TRIAL: Frieda Inescort, Walter Abel—Good enough for any theatre to run and exploit, for it will give satisfaction. It's drama with a punch, simple and sincere. Business good and patrons pleased. Running time, 67 minutes. Played January 19-20.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Oregon. Small town and rural patronage.

SPRINGTIME IN THE ROCKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Ours is not to reason why. All we know is that the announcement of an Autry picture means crowds, and in spite of the unusual weather, this one pulled them in. Patrons were pleased that the music in "Springtime" was generously sprinkled throughout the picture. All in all it seemed to be just what they wanted, so we were all satisfied. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 4-5.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Oregon. Small town and rural patronage.

YODELIN' KID FROM PINE RIDGE: Gene Autry—Just an average Autry picture. Thin story. He can sing, but he can't act. The kids start "booing" when we show an Autry slide on the screen and that proves he's all washed up here. Am glad the contract is finished.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kansas. Small town patronage.

RKO-Radio

ANNAPOLIS SALUTE: James Ellison, Marsha Hunt—Very good program picture which drew below average business.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ANNAPOLIS SALUTE: James Ellison, Marsha Hunt, Harry Carey—Good programmer which will make the grade in all situations. Harry Carey is good as the dyed-in-the-wool navy man. Played December 3-4.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

DAMSEL IN DISTRESS, A: Fred Astaire, Burns & Allen, Joan Fontaine—This has always been an Astaire town, but they did not come out for "Damsel", and those that did were not enthusiastic. Would say that a poor title, radio stars in support, Ginger Rogers lacking, and Fred himself mechanical were causes. The "drum dance", was an example of the lack of spontaneity. To us it lacked "it."—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

DAMSEL IN DISTRESS, A: Fred Astaire, Burns & Allen—Not half the show you might be led to believe from the studio publicity. Without Burns & Allen it would have been very poor indeed. With all his dancing ability, Fred Astaire cannot carry a picture alone. Pulled only fairly well and pleased to just about the same degree. Running time, 99 minutes. Played January 21-22.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Oregon. Small town and rural patronage.

DAMSEL IN DISTRESS, A: Fred Astaire, Burns & Allen, Joan Fontaine—Very good picture which pleased generally. Only average business at box office.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DAMSEL IN DISTRESS, A: Fred Astaire, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Disappointing at the box office. Played on Sunday-Monday-Tuesday and am sorry. Received no expressions for or against the picture from my patrons. Personally thought it quite good. Running time, 98 minutes.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

FIT FOR A KING: Joe E. Brown—This is the kind of entertainment our people want and pleased all and did above average business. Running time, 73 minutes. Played December 31-January 1.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

FIT FOR A KING: Joe E. Brown—Just an average Joe E. Brown picture which flopped at box office. Joe's stories have not been so good since leaving Warner Bros.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FIT FOR A KING: Joe E. Brown, Paul Kelly, Helen Mack—Although a little slow in the first two reels, this emerges as satisfactory entertainment for nearly any bill. Joe's wild bike and hayrack ride will bring the house down. In spots where Brown is popular, this will be a topnotch attraction. Played November 21-22.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

FORTY NAUGHTY GIRLS: James Gleason, Zasu Pitts—Lots of laughs in this murder mystery. However can't rate it any above an average programmer. —L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

HIGH FLYERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Personally I always liked these comedians and I thought this picture was plenty good, but they seem to have lost their following, though my business was nearly up to the Saturday average. If your people like this pair the show is all to the good for fun and frolic. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 29.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

HIGH FLYERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—An average Wheeler-Woolsey picture which drew well. Advertised it as their last appearance.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HITTING A NEW HIGH: Lily Pons, Jack Okie—Played this on bargaian night. It neither drew nor pleased. Strictly not a small town picture. Running time, 85 minutes.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

LIFE OF THE PARTY, THE: Gene Raymond, Harriet Hilliard—A clever comedy but business only average.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LIFE OF THE PARTY, THE: Joe Penner, Gene Raymond, Harriet Hilliard, Parkyarkarkus, Victor Moore, Helen Broderick—A swell musical comedy that will take care of itself anywhere. Joe's one man band is a scream. Victor Moore and Helen Broderick help a lot, too. Songs are a little below par. Played October 17-18.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

MAKE A WISH: Bobby Breen, Marion Claire—Good clean little picture but no action and not much story. Business below average. Marion Claire is surprisingly good in her part and easy on the eyes. She deserves more and better parts.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kansas. Small town patronage.

RIDING ON AIR: Joe E. Brown—As we used this picture on our Bank Night, I don't know whether it was the money or the picture which drew the crowd. However all those who came (and there were plenty) seemed to enjoy the picture thoroughly. Thrills and laughs rolled into a perfect little picture for any small town audience. Running time, 71 minutes. Played January 24.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Maine. Rural patronage.

SATURDAY'S HEROES: Van Heflin, Marian Marsh—Interesting little program picture, designed for the lower brackets, which will please most anywhere. However, it should not be played out of the football season. Van Heflin is well cast and with care can be worked up to more important parts. Played November 16.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

SHALL WE DANCE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rodgers, Edward Everett Horton—Very good, although not as good as "Swing Time". Horton very nearly stole this show. Songs and dances far above average. Satisfactory in every way. Played December 29-30.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

SHE'S GOT EVERYTHING: Gene Raymond, Ann

STAGE DOOR: Ginger Rogers, Katharine Hepburn —Plenty good, and was enjoyed by a better than average Sunday crowd. No walkouts, no kicks and many compliments. Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 9.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers—This is a darn good show that pleased all. Play it up big and you won't be sorry. Running time, 92 minutes. Played January 16-18.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Ginger Rogers, Katharine Hepburn, Adolphe Menjou—Good picture which did less than average at box office. Pleased the ladies but the men did not rate it highly. Altogether too much talk.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kansas. Small town patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers, Adophe Menjou—You could write pages about this picture and all you could say would be that it is grand. Many folks thought that Rogers stole the show. Personally I agreed with them. I never have seen so many pleased faces as folks left the theatre. Any exhibitor playing pictures like this does not have to find a good hiding place as we have had to do after playing some of them. Running time, 92 minutes. Played February 5-7.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Played this very late but it did not hurt it a bit. Did good business and personally still consider it the best of Astaire and Rogers series. Played December 8-9.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

THERE GOES THE GROOM: Burgess Meredith, Ann Sothern—Not much of a picture. Did average business. Too silly. Should be double featured. Looks like we'll all have to start this double billing much as I hate to do it.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WISE GIRL: Ray Milland, Mariam Hopkins—Our prevue crowd seemed to be pretty well satisfied with this one. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 5-6.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor—Personally I thought pretty good, but business very poor. Pleased about 50%. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 3-4.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor—Not so hot. It misses fire and patronage was only 50% of normal. Running time, 81 minutes. Played January 23.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor—We find Ed Cantor at his best in this picture. The colored stars were at their best. This had plenty of box office for us. Good entertainment. Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 9-11.—Howard B. Lee and John O. Hopkins, National Theatre, Wilmington, Del. General patronage.

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor, June Lang—Not quite up to Cantor standard but will do. Grand business first night. But due to Cantor comments did not draw on the second night. Played February 7-8.—W. M. Pinckard, Princess Theatre, Carthage, Tenn. Small town patronage.

ANGEL'S HOLIDAY: Jane Withers—The first Jane Withers picture which ever flopped at the box office, and there was no reason, as it is a very good picture.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kansas. Small town patronage.

BIG BUSINESS: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—These do all right on a double bill but I don't even try to run them alone. Some of my patrons like these but most of them would rather be some place else and Fox has the nerve to ask plenty of money for them but I don't know why.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CAFE METROPOLE: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power—I did not hear one single good word from our audiences about this picture. It is a picture which has absolutely no place on the program of any small town theatre. At least that is my opinion, and my patrons seemed to agree with me. Yes, we certainly are forced to take plenty of "duds" just to get the Shirley Temples. Running time, 83 minutes. Played January 21-22.—George W. Pattengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Maine. Rural patronage.

CALIFORNIAN, THE: Ricardo Cortez, Marjorie Weaver—This picture will take the place of your western and do a fair job of it. There is a certain amount of draw attached to the title and there is a certain amount of action that will please your thrill hunters and action seekers.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE OLYMPICS: Warner Oland—Used on a double bill. About the average Chan and they are all well received.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN ON BROADWAY: Warner Oland, Joan Marsh—These Charlie Chans do have a following but not enough to justify the rental. Not big enough for anything but your bargain night and not worth more than your lowest allocation.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CHECKERS: Jane Withers, Stuart Erwin, Una Merkel—A satisfactory picture to satisfactory business. But with Jane Withers' showing in the recent poll, it would not seem too much to ask of Fox to give this star a break in future releases. Bigger stories, better parts and dialogue that will get away from the sameness that has been the rule in her past pictures. Running time, 78 minutes. Played February 6-7-8.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Oregon. Small town and rural patronage.

DANGER—LOVE AT WORK: Jack Haley, Ann Sothern—This picture was booked two days but patrons walked out on the first day so we cancelled it. This one is not worth double features. Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 7.—Howard B. Lee and John O. Hopkins, National Theatre, Wilmington, Del. General patronage.

45 FATHERS: Jane Withers, Thomas Beck—This little girl is beginning to mean something at my box office but not as much as Fox thinks because she isn't worth the allocation in this town, yet. On a par or better than any of her previous efforts and worth your best playing time.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

45 FATHERS: Jane Withers, Thomas Beck—Everyone seemed to be of the same opinion that this is Jane's best picture. Business fair considering conditions, etc. Running time, 71 minutes.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

HAWAIIAN BUCKAROO: Smith Ballew, Evalyn Knapp—The unusual locale and the many laughs put this several notches above the average western. I played this brand new and found it refreshingly different. Very well received.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple—Probably the best Temple to date. How they went for it, but I hit a bad spell of weather, which was the only reason that I did not break Shirley's record in this town. This is as near a picture that will please everybody as you will ever get. If you have it coming get behind it for all you are worth. It will more than justify your efforts. Running time, 88 minutes. Played January 30.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple, Jean Hersholt—This little girl still does business. A very good picture, next to the best she has made for some time. Running time, 88 minutes. Played January 7-8.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

HOT WATER: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—They make up the other half of that weekend double bill and get a few laughs but about the only walkouts I get is on these: Phooey!—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

IT HAPPENED OUT WEST: Paul Kelly, Judith Allen—We join several other exhibitors in wondering if Fox will ever make a good western. We have run several of this series and every one is the same in that stories are weak, photography is poor, and the sound is terrible. Nuf sed. Running time, 56 minutes. Played January 31.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Maine. Rural patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers—These reissues are falling down with us. Business is not up to average.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: Will Rogers—Will Rogers still brings in the dollars and sends the people out with a smile. This is the kind of entertainment people want. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 2-3.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

LANCER SPY: Dolores Del Rio, Peter Lorre, George Sanders—We used this on a double bill, even though Fox thought it was good enough for a higher allocation. Glad we did because it wasn't so hot and by itself would have lost money on it. Pass it, if you can.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS IN COLLEGE: Ritz Brothers—While this show is rather silly, and has an overdose of the comedians, it went over fairly well with me, but if I had it to do over I would not use it on Sunday. Running time, 94 minutes. Played January 16.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS IN COLLEGE: Ritz Brothers—Our patrons seem to enjoy the Ritz Brothers. A very interesting picture and plenty of fun. Running time, 81 minutes. Played January 31-February 1.—Howard B. Lee & John O. Hopkins, National Theatre, Wilmington, Del. General patronage.

LOVE AND HISSES: Ben Bernie, Walter Winchell, Simone Simon—A good picture but without the box office appeal of the first Winchell-Bernie release. Simone Simon has a pleasing voice and puts her numbers over in an entertaining manner, but for some reason the patrons failed to turn out. Pleased fairly well. Running time, 84 minutes. Played January 30-31-February 1.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Oregon. Small town and rural patronage.

LOVE IS NEWS: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Don Ameche, Slim Summerville—Another Fox hit made to order for our audience. Don Ameche as the editor of a daily paper, Tyrone Power as a star reporter and Loretta Young as a spoiled heiress get together to give as breezy and refreshing a performance as we ever witnessed. The comedy situations are "sure-fire" and the jail scene with Loretta, Tyrone and Slim Summerville is a knockout. Play this and have no regrets. It's a Fox tonic for a run-down box office. Running time, 78 minutes. Played February 12.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

ROLL ALONG COWBOY: Smith Ballew, Cecilia Parker—This guy couldn't ride in a street car with both doors shut but he can sing a little. My chewers and spitters, the boys with the big hats, don't care for him and I can't blame them. Put him back on the radio; he can't hurt that much.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ROLL ALONG COWBOY: Smith Ballew—It is rather slow for a western. The singing is good and it did a fair business.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SECOND HONEYMOON: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power—Very well liked by our audiences.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SECOND HONEYMOON: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young—We didn't break any house records with this picture and while it was in the top allocation we didn't gross expenses, but Fox did reallocate it, so that we showed a belated profit. Not strong enough for your best nights but better than a programmer. —Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SING AND BE HAPPY: Tony Martin, Leah Ray, Dixie Dunbar—A little class "B" musical from Fox which pleased our crowd. Business was off on account of subzero weather. However, the second night's business was better than the first, and that proves any picture's worth to us. Once again, a Fox picture had a very poor presentation because of the terrible print received from the exchange. Running time, 64 minutes. Played February 11-12.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Maine. Rural patronage.

SING AND BE HAPPY: Tony Martin, Dixie Dunbar—A clever program picture. Not much draw but at least I did not have to hide when the customers came out. Wish we could get more "B" pictures as good as this.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TARZAN'S REVENGE: Glenn Morris, Eleanor Holm—Very amusing. Dress your lobby like a jungle. My patronage ate this up. I think the monkey was the grandest actor of them all. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 8-9.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

TARZAN'S REVENGE: Glenn Morris, Eleanor Holm—A poor carbon copy of the previous Tarzan pictures. Pulled O.K. the first night, but no click the second. As actors, these two are swell athletes and totally unconvincing on the screen. And a highly improbable story did not help matters much either. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 26-27. —M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Oregon. Small town and rural patronage.

THANK YOU, MR. MOTO: Peter Lorre, Pauline Frederick—Nothing outstanding, but seemed to please. At best, just another picture to make up a double bill. No pulling power and business just fair. Running time, 67 minutes. Played February 2-3.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Oregon. Small town and rural patronage.

THIS IS MY AFFAIR: Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Taylor—Very good drama. Drew slightly better than average and pleased all.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WAKE UP AND LIVE: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie—A big flop at box office. Not a bad picture but my customers are getting tired of musicals. Bernie and Winchell may be OK on the radio, but not at the box office.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WEE WILLIE WINKIE: Shirley Temple—Very good picture. Well produced. Shirley is only doing one-third to one-half of the business she did 18 months ago.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WIFE, DOCTOR AND NURSE: Loretta Young,

Warner Baxter, Virginia Bruce—Just what the customers here want. Enjoyed by all who saw it. Just my luck to have bad weather. Played January 24-25.—W. M. Pinckard, Princess Theatre, Carthage, Tenn. Small town patronage.

WIFE, DOCTOR AND NURSE: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Virginia Bruce—You can go the limit on this fine production and your patrons will thank you for it. Our business way above average for this engagement. Running time, 85 minutes. Played January 2.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

WIFE, DOCTOR AND NURSE: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Virginia Bruce—Business was off on this one, but to those of us who saw it, it was a real treat to see this fine cast in action. Direction and photography are excellent, too, though one is not likely to be conscious of these while looking at the loveliest girl in Hollywood. Running time, 85 minutes. Played January 31-February 1.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

WILD AND WOOLLY: Jane Withers—We did very nice business, being favored by good weather, and our folks like Jane Withers. Played January 15.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Louise Hovick, Ritz Brothers—Pleased in a big way on Family Night. Doubtless Alice Faye's very best performance to date. Louise Hovick did well enough, but lately several things would seem to indicate that Fox is afraid its pictures will become too goody-goody. However, I know of several on the lot that I would be glad to trade off to get Janet Gaynor back. Incidentally, I think that Don Ameche tops any other male star. Running time, 99 minutes. Played February 3-4.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

BULLDOG DRUMMOND STRIKES BACK: Ronald Colman, Loretta Young—Don't laugh. I had this paid for a long time before I used it but want to say that it is head and shoulders above 80 per cent of the present day washouts that come out of Hollywood, and on your bargain nights will do plenty of business. The print I had was in very good shape out of Kansas City.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DEAD END: Joel McCrea, Sylvia Sidney, Humphrey Bogart—Another hit from Samuel Goldwyn which with very few exceptions was well accepted here. However, it didn't do as much business as we expected. Played December 5-6.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

52nd STREET: Leo Carrillo, Pat Paterson, Kenny Baker—Good entertainment. Carrillo outstanding and Baker can really sing. Play it any date. You can't go wrong. The outstanding number being Kenny singing "I'd Like to See Samoa of Samoa", with Pat going Hawaiian. Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 6-7.—Pruitt Simms, Dale Theatre, Ozark, Ala. General patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall—A hurricane in every way, especially at the box office. Gave me the highest gross to date in my new theatre. I consider this excellent evidence that stars are not always necessary to bring in the business. Certainly this picture has no outstanding characters. Business far above expectations. Did not spend 10c for extra advertising.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall—The hurricane scene worth the price of admission, with the whole picture building up to it. Dorothy Lamour a natural for the role although many of the patrons disappointed because she didn't sing. The publicity men behind this picture must be tops. For a picture that lacked in cast names as much as this one, it did a terrific business. It's presold, and how! Running time, 104 minutes. Played February 9-13.—Peter Panagos, Sipe Theatre, Kokomo, Ind. General patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Carole Lombard, Fredric March—Clever as they come and played for every hit of comedy and fun by March and Lombard. Business not up to expectations but those who came had a swell time. Running time, 75 minutes. Played January 28-29.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Oregon. Small town and rural patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Carole Lombard, Fredric March—For some unexplainable reason, and in spite of the color, this did not go over especially big. Both the box office and the comments said so. Personally I thought it unusually fine entertainment. I think the title kept the attendance below normal and the word of mouth advertising did nothing to bring them in the second and third nights.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

PRISONER OF ZENDA: Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll—This picture did above average business We find all of United Artist pictures good and we urge you to book it. Running time, 101 minutes. Played February 4-5.—Howard B. Lee and John O. Hopkins, National Theatre, Wilmington, Del. General patronage.

PRIVATE LIFE OF HENRY VIII: Charles Laughton (Re-issue)—Aside from the superb acting of Charles Laughton the picture is poor. However, the array of stars brings them in.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RED SALUTE: Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Young, Cliff Edwards—Played this on Saturday midnight return engagement. Pleased everyone both young and old. Cliff Edwards turns in a standout performance. Played September 18.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

SKY DEVILS: Spencer Tracy, Ann Dvorak—Played a return engagement on this and it certainly did go over with my Saturday audience. Sound recording was a little ragged but it got by. Played July 31.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley—A natural for any spot. Down to earth drama that all will understand and thrill to. Did exceptionally good business here and understand it did the same elsewhere. Running time, six reels. Played November 7-8.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

WOMAN CHASES MAN: Mariam Hopkins, Joel McCrea—A delirious, delightful comedy from Samuel Goldwyn. Although not "Big", the cash customers will have no kicks coming as the picture does not have a dull moment. Played August 8-9.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

BREEZING HOME: Binnie Barnes, Wm. Gargan—Very ordinary racing picture with the long shot managing to bring home the bacon. Poorly received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MERRY-GO-ROUND OF 1938: Alice Brady, Bert Lahr—This did not draw. No stars in it was the reason, I guess. The picture is a good comedy and pleases if you can get them in. Running time, 87 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

100 MEN AND A GIRL: Deanna Durbin—We did very well for this exceptional feature as we placed our personal guarantee back of the offering. Played January 21-22.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

100 MEN AND A GIRL: Deanna Durbin, Adolphe Menjou—I was late running this picture, but it is worth going back for if you have a chance to get it. Gave general satisfaction to average Sunday business. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 6.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

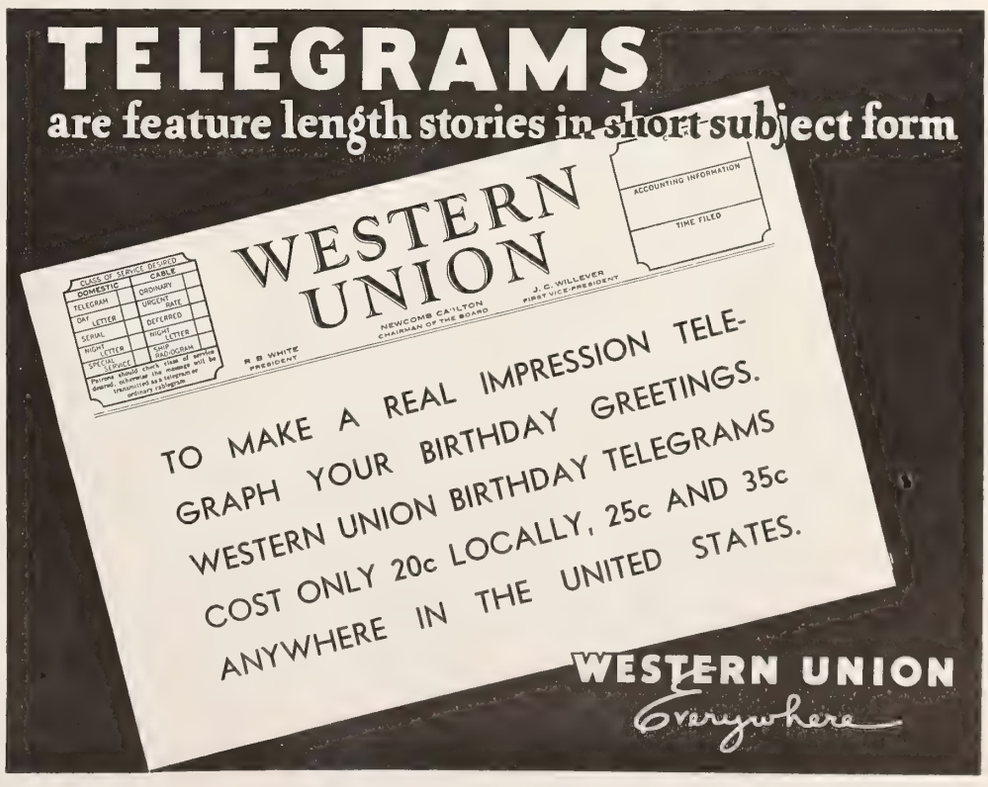
ROAD BACK, THE: John King, Richard Cromwell, Andy Devine—In spite of the adverse reviews and criticisms, I consider this a wonderful picture and the paying public evidently thought so too, for they certainly turned out in droves. Didn't hear any remarks about this picture that were not favorable. Gave this top playing time and was well repaid for doing so. Played August 20-30.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

ROAD BACK, THE: John King, Richard Cromwell—Was a little afraid of this one, but everything came out O.K. It is a big little picture and has everything for entertainment. Did not overdo the advertising. With the weather down to 10 below what can you expect. Running time, 103 minutes. Played January 30-31-February 1.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

SINGING OUTLAW, THE: Bob Baker, Joan Barclay—This is Bob Baker's first western and pretty good. If Bob keeps on improving I think he will make a good western star. The fight in this one was poor. It didn't look real. The action a little slow, the story a little weak. I hope the second one will be better. Running time, 57 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE A SWEETHEART: Alice Faye, George Murphy—Swell. Everybody raved about this picture. There is nothing cheap or nothing spectacular about it, but just plain 100% entertainment. Business slightly above the three previous Sunday changes. Running time, 96 minutes.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage

Warner Bros.



ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland—An outstanding picture that proved to be a topnotcher for our theatre in 1937. A wonderful story and two great stars at their best. Pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 136 minutes.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—This picture was one of our best drawing cards and pleased 100 per cent. Story, filming and stars absolutely tops with our patrons. Running time, 113 minutes.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

FIRST LADY: Kay Francis, Preston Foster—An awful bust with the men. Too much talk. It is a smart picture but no good for us. Kay Francis has been out of luck lately with the kind of stories she plays in.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

GREEN PASTURES, THE: Rex Ingram—This picture did not click so good with our patrons. Most of them, after it was all over, was wondering what it was all about. Running time, 93 minutes.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

IT'S LOVE I'M AFTER: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis, Olivia DeHavilland—Very poor draw but picture is funny and pleased.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA, THE: Paul Muni—A very excellent picture but it did not draw us a box office. If you have not played this, then book it now. Running time, 116 minutes. Played February 2-3.—Howard B. Lee and John O. Hopkins, National Theatre, Wilmington, Del. General patronage.

MIDNIGHT COURT: Ann Dvorak, John Litel—Just a good programer. Use it in a double bill, that is, if you still run them. Running time, 66 minutes. Played February 4-5.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

TOVARICH: Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer—After playing "Tovarich," I understand now why Claudette Colbert sailed for Europe. Very many unfavorable comments from the customers. I sincerely hope Charles Boyer will speak more distinctly in his next picture.—J. A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

TOVARICH: Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer—A poor one day picture. Pleased no one and will not please anyone. Lay off. If you have to play it, buy it cheap and don't run it long. Running time, 94 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WINE, WOMEN AND HORSES: Barton McLane, Ann Sheridan—Only a fair program picture. Barton McLane doesn't mean a thing here. Running time, 64 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

FILMING MODERN YOUTH: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Although I have sent in hundreds of reports on features, my reports on shorts wouldn't total a half dozen. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

Vitaphone

DOG DAZE: Merrie Melody—Good. Running time, 9 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S ROAD RACE: Looney Tunes—This is an extra good black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SUNDAY ROUND-UP, THE: Dick Foran—One of the best two-reelers in a long time. (I don't play many two-reelers though.) Foran is my best western star. I booked this, got some one-sheets and 11x14s and advertised it big, but at the same time making it clear that it was only a two-reel subject and not a feature picture. I think it greatly helped by box office receipts and the people really liked it. If you haven't played it, do so and satisfy your patrons. Warner, can't you make a few westerns with Foran next season? I need him!—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RADIO PATROL: Grant Withers—We are at the end of the first three chapters and going strong. Audience opinion is that this is better than "Jungle Jim" or "Flash Gordon." Why doesn't somebody make another railroad serial!—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Maine. Rural patronage.

TIM TYLER'S LUCK: Frankie Thomas, Jr., Frances Robinson—We are half way through this serial and the kids like it fine. Not any better than the rest of the serials that are being made but the serial fans are staying with it better than most serials. —Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

U. S. STEEL SPENDING $200,000 FOR 3 FILMS

One and Four-Reel Subjects in Color; Third Will Be in Six Reels

The United States Steel Corporation and its far-flung subsidiaries have turned their attention to the theatre screens to supplement their "good will" and "institutional" advertisements.

Production is virtually completed on three films, two of which are in color. The third, a six-reeler in black and white, contains more technical and detailed information about "the story of steel" than the color films, which are one reel and four reels in length.

The one-reel film is being produced expressly for theatrical showings while the four-reeler is intended for cities and towns where steel mills and plants are located. Edwin C. Hill, radio and former newsreel commentator, delivers the narrative for the two color films but no decision has been reached as to whether he will do the commentary for the six-reel production.

Sponsor Mentioned Once

One point emphasized by officials discussing the motion picture venture was that the films will "contain no direct advertising" mention. Stephen Dickinson, a member of the U. S. Steel Corporation's publicity department, said that on the main title there will be "some such line as 'produced with the cooperation of U. S. Steel Corporation' and at the end there will be a notice that the contents are copyrighted by the corporation."

Only once is the sponsor mentioned by commentator, Mr. Dickinson said. In telling the story of steelmaking, Mr. Hill reports "more than 500,000 persons are employed in the steel industry and more than half of them are employed by the United States Steel Corporation and its subsidiaries."

Although no definite distribution plans have been made, Mr. Dickinson explained that officials of the company expect 10,000,000 persons to see the color films, mostly in motion picture theatres. Also, the six-reel film will be loaned to various organizations, clubs, schools, colleges and any other groups interested.

No attempt will be made, Mr. Dickinson said, to have one of the large motion picture companies handle distribution; instead, the prints will be turned over to an industrial-film distributor.

$200,000 Estimated Cost

Production of the films started several months ago. Through the company's advertising agent, Barton, Batten, Durstine and Osborne, the Hollywood Industrial Picture Company, headed by Rowland Reede, was engaged to produce the films. It is estimated the total cost of the films will be more than $200,000.

The color films will be released early in April, the one-reel under the title "Men Make Steel" and the four-reel under the title "Steel—Servant of Man." No title has been chosen for the black and white picture.

In a recent issue of US Steel News, monthly publication of the corporation, the production of the films was featured, and the purpose explained as follows: "most people think the other fellow's job is easier. That is human nature. It helps to explain, too, why so many people have a distorted idea of iron and steel making. 'Sure, it is one of those mass production industries,' they say, putting the emphasis on 'mass.'"

The industry is "massive" but not one of mass production, said the article, ". . . .The many millions outside our industry will never know until they can see with their own eyes and hear with their own ears" that the making and distributing of steel and iron products "call for the combined efforts of many thousands of people with many different kinds of skill and training, and require heavy investments in mines, plants and equipment."

In offering the films to exhibitors, the corporation plans neither to ask for a rental fee nor pay for showings, as is customary. No attempt will be made to rent halls or theatres.

National Decency Legion Classifies 18 Productions

Of 19 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week 11 were approved for general patronage, four were listed as unobjectionable for adults, two were cited as unobjectionable in part, and one was condemned. The pictures and their classification follows.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Adventures of Tom Sawyer," "Alberto di Adamo" (Italian), Arsene Lupin Returns," "Blondes at Work," "Border Wolves," "Daredevil Drivers," "El 113" (Spanish), "Ihr Groesster Erfolg" (German), "Making the Headlines," "Painted Trail," "Sieben Ohrfeigen" (German). Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Affairs of Maupassant" (German), "No Basta Ser Madre" (Spanish), "Zweimal Zwei in Himmelbett" (German), "Manhattan Melodrama" (reissue). Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Baroness and the Butler," "Big Broadcast of 1938." Class C, Condemned: "Assassin of Youth."

Seligman Representing Italian Co.

Leo Seligman of Cinepix Company, New York, said this week that he has been given sole distribution in the eastern territory of the United States of all products of the I. C. I. Cinema Industries, Inc., Rome, Italy. At the present time Mr. Seligman is releasing three Italian films, "Il Destino," "Comtessa Di Parma" and "Cavalleria." Mr. Seligman said that there are six additional features on their way here from Italy.

Warners Complete Studio Laboratory

Warner Brothers' new $500,000 laboratory at the Burbank studio was opened last week to some 200 journalists, educational and civic leaders invited for a tour of inspection conducted by Fred Gage, head of Warner laboratory activities, and luncheon in the studio cafe. The new laboratory which will replace in function the Sunset Boulevard unit used by the company for several years, is equipped to handle all studio and west coast prints up to any predictable increase in company output, other exhibition prints continuing to be printed in the east as formerly.

The building, designed for utilitarian purposes, is strictly modern consisting of two stories and basement with two projection rooms on the upper floor. It covers 19,000 square feet of ground, is of fireproof construction, and temperature is controlled to within one-tenth of a degree. Capacity is given as 1,000,000 feet of film per 24 hours. A 24-unit film storage vault is housed in a separate building.

900 Film Critics Now; 30 Radio Commentators

An all-time high in press attention to motion pictures has been reached, with 900 film editors and critics writing on magazines and newspapers throughout, 30 radio commentators talking about films, and 312 accredited news and magazine writers covering Hollywood today.

The press of the nation is running favorable to motion pictures, in its mention of the industry and industry affairs, some 73.5 per cent of the editorials, columns and news stories dealing with picture trends in 1937 being "complimentary," according to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. In addition, 9 per cent of the comment was neutral and only 17.5 per cent was adverse, a total improvement of 7.4 per cent over 1936, when 66.1 per cent of the press comment was favorable.

The MPTOA added that in "the field of industry affairs," the press showed 61.2 per cent support of present policies, 17.7 per cent of the comment was neutral and 21.1 per cent was adverse in its criticism, a total improvement of 13.6 per cent over 1936.

There was comparatively little press demand for censorship, due, it was said, "to the industry's efficient self-regulation." Of comment on government control or governmental censorship, the MPPDA found 55 per cent favored a continuance of present industry policies, 9.9 per cent was neutral and 35.1 per cent preferred regulation in some form.

Criticsm or comment on individual pictures was not included in the survey. High points of press comment of 1937 were Will Hays' presidential report on the "progressive advancement of the industry," and his discussion of 50 "outstanding" pictures.

Leo Meehan has been appointed publicity director of all Federal Cultural Projects of the WPA in Southern California.

IN COURTS

Court Decision on Chain Tax Awaited

Following the ending of arguments in Dauphin county court, Harrisburg, Pa., contending interests now are awaiting the court's decision in the fight of about 40 chain store and theatre companies who have opposed as unconstitutional the recently enacted Pennsylvania law imposing a tax ranging from $1 to $500 each annually on chain enterprises, according to the number of individual units in a chain.

In the meantime the court's injunction preventing the State Department of Revenue from enforcing penalties against companies not paying the tax will continue. It is fairly certain that whatever way the county court rules the case will be appealed to the state supreme court. Payment of the tax, which became effective June 1st, has been suspended.

Circuit Court Upholds Plagiarism Decision

The United States circuit court of appeals, New York, on reargument has affirmed a decision in favor of Bud Wilkie of Hollywood against Santly Brothers, music publishers, and Bernice Petkere, involving copyright infringement of a song. The suit was held in the United States district court in New York originally, the decision was upheld by the circuit court and the United States supreme court and then sent back to the circuit court for reargument on motion of the plaintiff. Affirmations were given in all instances.

It was alleged the melody of "Confesing" was infringed in the song, "Starlight." Damages are to be computed by a referee.

Fox West Coast Litigation Ended

The litigation arising from the bankruptcy proceedings of Fox West Coast Theatres brought by T. L. Talley and the Corbar Corporation ended this week after years of court battles which carried to the United States supreme court the suit to reopen the bankruptcy case. William G. Neblett, attorney for Talley and Corbar, filed a petition of dismissal in superior court in Los Angeles where the suit, which charged illegal invalidation of leases and other allegedly improper acts, was taken after the supreme court refused a writ of review.

Stokes Replaces Garrett

Warren Stokes has been signed by Station KEHE to replace Bob Garrett, film gossiper, who was ousted on "Pick of the Pictures" program when the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., rescinded his credentials following Mr. Garrett's airing of the story that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer propped up a dead actor to make the final sequence for "Of Human Hearts."

MARCH OF TIME ENDS THIRD YEAR

The March of Time this month rounded out the third year of its existence. According to RKO Radio, who release it, the reel is now seen monthly by 18,000,000 persons in 11,074 theatres through the medium of English, French and Spanish.

In 1937 March of Time received the special award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences "for revolutioning one of the most important branches of the industry — the newsreel"; the Jay Emanuel Grand Shorts Award; the Clement Cleveland Memorial medal for "conquering cancer," and the listing on the honor roll of the Civil Service Assembly of the United States and Canada for "The Spoils System."

Set "Fugitive" Hearing

Hearing of Judge Vivian L. Stanley's $200,000 damage suit against Warner Brothers and various distributors and exhibitors has been set for March 21st in Fulton superior court, Atlanta, Ga. Judge Stanley, a member of the Georgia Prison Commission, charges that the Warner picture, "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang," was based on Robert Elliott Burns' book, "I Am a Fugitive from a Georgia Chain Gang," and held Georgia prison officials up to ridicule.

Mr. Roth started as a composer of popular melodies for shows and musicals. In 1921 he went to the coast as a scenario writer for Fox and later joined Warner Brothers, working at both their Hollywood studio and the Vitaphone studio in New York. He was the author of the scenario of "The Lights of New York," the first all-talking film.

EXHIBITOR, MANAGERS DENY FILMS ARE CUT

Answer Nugent by Pointing Out That Practice Is Barred By Copyright Law

Charging that independent exhibitors were slandered in a recent New York Times story concerning double features, Paul Josephs, operator of the West End Theatre, Newark, this week called upon Frank Nugent, Times film critic, either to publish a retraction or produce documentary evidence to substantiate his claim that many exhibitors "have resorted to the iniquitous practice of cutting the feature films."

In a letter to the film critic, Mr. Josephs pointed out that under the copyright law exhibitors are forbidden to cut or edit films, because they do not own the films. Mr. Josephs' contention was supported by exchange managers in New York.

"Exhibitors have no right to change a film at all," Herman Gluckmann, manager of the Republic Film Exchange, declared. "In rare instances, after a picture is shown to Broadway audiences, a scene may be eliminated because it detracts from the picture, but this is done by the distributor, not the exhibitor."

Harry H. Buxbaum, exchange manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, was even more emphatic in his denial that Mr. Nugent had presented a true picture. "He's talking through his hat," Mr. Buxbaum said. "It's a violation of the copyright laws for an exhibitor to cut a picture." Mr. Buxbaum offered the same opinion as Mr. Gluckman on the cutting of films by distributors, saying that such action is taken only rarely.

J. Bowen, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange manager, elaborated on the general denials by declaring that if exhibitors should eleminate even credit lines, to say nothing of sccenes, the distributor would object.

Both S. S. Krellberg, of Principal Film Exchange, Inc., and Philip M. Brown of Central Film Company, concurred in the viewpoint expressed by other exchange managers.

Urges Exhibitors to Act

Mr. Josephs, viewing the matter from an exhibitor's standpoint, in a letter to MOTION PICTURE HERALD said: "The effect of such a slander on independent exhibitors is too strong to be overlooked. Our business is bad enough as it is without fostering the idea in the minds of the public that they do not get the same picture in the neighborhood houses as in the first-run theatres.

"I think exhibitors all over should get behind a movement to stop this pernicious slander of independent exhibitors wherever it crops up."

Cites Other Reasons

In his letter to Mr. Nugent, Mr. Josephs cited two other reasons besides the alleged practice being a violation of copyright laws.

"Secondly," Mr. Josephs wrote, "most exhibitors in neighborhood theatres receive the film about an hour before it has to go on the screen and sometimes less. Not much time for editing there. Thirdly, it would be darn poor business for an exhibitor to cut the film. Too much cutting would detract from the enjoyment of the picture and too little would not do any good.

"My suggestion is that you check very carefully into this matter and produce documentary evidence or other conclusive proof of your statements. Then either publish a retraction, giving it as much space as you gave to the slander, or publish your proof and I will shut my mouth.

"The only cutting that takes place is done by the distributor. After films are run in first run houses they may become buckled or damaged in spots. The distributor, before sending out the print, will cut a few frames here and there in order to insure that there will be no trouble in running the print. In my experience I have never seen any print cut more than one or two minutes from the original running time."

This point was upheld by exchange managers, who said that frames are cut only when the print is very old and that even then the cuts are not noticeable to theatre goers.

What Nugent Said

Mr. Nugent's charge was contained in an attack on double features.

"Theatre operators themselves," he wrote, "admit the undesirability of a four-hour show. It permits only three audience airings a day. Seeking to hasten matters, many of them have resorted to the iniquitous practice of cutting the feature films. It is true that few two-hour films cannot be edited down; it is also true that few exhibitors are skilled editors. Sound tracks in the neighborhood houses have a habit of trailing unfinished sentences and superimposing one line upon another. Telling sequences, too, have the unhappy faculty of being the first ones sacrificed to expediency. Few of the two-hour first-run films tour the neighborhood chains except as abridged versions. . . .

"There is yet another ostrich-like device of the exhibitor. Since trimming the feature films still does not condense his program sufficiently, and since he cannot omit his newsreel trailers, he discards the short subjects."

Arkansas ITO to Elect; Wisconsin Meeting Delayed

The board of directors of the Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas has set Sunday and Monday, April 10th and 11th, as the date for the organization's annual convention in Little Rock. Officers will be elected and vacancies in the board will be filled at the session.

The directors of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan have failed to set dates for an anticipated conference in Milwaukee. Indications are that the meeting will be held later in the year, probably after the National Allied convention.

FROM READERS

QUESTIONS 'NECESSITY' OF BOARD OF REVIEW

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

I was much surprised to read about myself in the Feb. 12th issue of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD. As long as there has been this publicity won't you do me the extreme courtesy to print an explanation of the statements credited to me.

Our meetings, although held in the building owned by the New Century Guild, are in no way a part of that group. I am sure that they would not care to be mixed up with our meeting. We always refer to our meetings taking place at 1307 Locust St.

Now—more important—the statement "I have been suspicious of the National Board of Review" is a misinterpretation. I meant that I have been "questioning" the "necessity" of the Board in view of the fact that we have the state censor boards, local censorship in various cities, and the Breen committee of the Hays Organization. In order not to be misquoted, I referred all the group to your issue of January 29th.

Your answer to the National Board in this issue states clearly what I personally feel. I am in no way trying to belittle its onetime necessity or in the slightest reflect on anyone connected with its operation.

I have been misquoted so much in our local papers that it is causing me annoyance just at the time when the group that I represent is trying to put through a constructive program—not one of destruction.

You may not know this, but I read the HERALD from cover to cover, and refer to the back issues on file since 1934.—MARGUERITE SESSLER GOLDSMITH, Chairman, Philadelphia Motion Picture Preview Group, Penn Valley, Narberth, Pa.

HE PREFERS "B" PICTURES

In your issue of January 1st we read a very interesting article of W. H. Brenner of the Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. In his article he states that he wants more class "A" pictures and not so many "B" and "C" pictures, from which he suffers at the box office. In our humble opinion we beg to differ, as our situation in a town of 1,800 with a 500 seat house is quite different. We found that if it weren't for the "B" and "C" pictures of action type played on the weekends where we enjoy 50 per cent of our business, we would not show profits, and could not exist without these program pictures. We would like a better class of these pictures and less roadshows and "A" pictures.

We are quite convinced that there is no picture worth a million dollars, and that "B" product could be improved by taking some of the money squandered on super colossal epics and added to "B" budgets in making more family pictures.—HARLAND RANKIN, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

ANNOUNCEMENT

On Tuesday March 8th, a luncheon will be held for the Quigley Awards judges who will determine the Grand Awards Winners for 1937.

Arrangements have been completed for the two winners to go to Hollywood, via United Airlines. The week's stay will embrace a multitude of activities with all expenses paid. Plans are being completed for a gala round of sight-seeing in movieland and honors will be bestowed upon the Grand Awards winners in a manner quite befitting their eminent position as premier showmen.

The list of judges reads like a Who's Who from the blue book of Showmanship. These important industry leaders have eagerly signified their desire to forsake their important duties of the moment to participate in this momentous event.

Extremely gratifying also, is the proud boast of United Airlines through their emissary of good will Bob Neff, that this pioneer air line has just purchased a million dollars' worth of new "Mainliners" containing new comforts, conveniences and engines. The Quigley Grand Awards Winners will be among the first to enjoy the luxury of these new Mainliners.

Twenty-two men are participating in this final judging. The eyes of the Industry are upon these men. Under the new system of Quigley Awards for 1938 you and you and you have a great opportunity. Whether or not you are content to let it slip by or get busy and really do something about it remains with you and you alone. Certainly the reward, plus self-satisfaction, is worthy of the effort.

A REAL HELP

The Home Offices of the various film companies are getting "down to earth" in their aid to men in the field for the exploitation of their product. A complete exploitation campaign in neat, orderly fashion has been devised by Frank McGrann, exploitation chief for Columbia Pictures.

As a test for the effectiveness of one of these campaigns, McGrann selected "Penitentiary." This campaign was sent to three men in the field; namely, Lester Stallman in Bethlehem, George Tyson in Pittsburgh, and W. W. Ackerman in Altoona, all in Pennsylvania.

We all are aware of the multitude of material which a theatre manager receives and cannot use; this material is usually gotten up at a great cost, and finds its way to the waste basket in many instances. Many times managers receive too little aid on pictures which they are endeavoring to "sell."

It seems to us that McGrann has hit on a practical and effective way of combatting these two evils, and has found a happy medium. Included in the "Penitentiary" campaign are a press book, a folder for special art, a folder for special mats, proofs of a newspaper serialization, a proof of a special tabloid, and national exploitation aids.

Press books are usually planned far in advance of release of a picture, and in practically all cases, many ideas are formulated after the press book has been printed. All these additional ideas and angles are also incorporated in these special exploitation campaigns, as well as specific campaigns used by men in the field, who had played the picture in advance of the national release date.

Congratulations are in order for McGrann for saving a lot of money for his company and for saving a theatre manager a lot of time. Most importantly, his material is thorough, effective, and complete. He practically "lays the campaign in your lap," for you to adapt and follow according to what experience in your own community has taught you to be the best method of reaching your particular patronage.

OFF TO INDIA

Appropriately termed "A Night In India Dinner," Ben Cohen, manager of the College Theatre in New Haven, Connecticut, was honored last Saturday night at a testimonial at the Taft Hotel. The occasion was inspired by the announcement that Ben had been selected as the Managing Director for Loew's new M-G-M Theatre in Bombay, India. Ben's promotion is deserved. His clean record embellished with spirited showmanship made him an outstanding man for the post. Ben's parents were present at the dinner; his father, after hearing many leaders of the theatre and civic affairs heap praise of glory on Ben's shoulders, was visibly impressed with the laudatory remarks from these "strangers." He slyly remarked that he knew Ben before he was born.

Mr. Cohen, we think you've got something there.

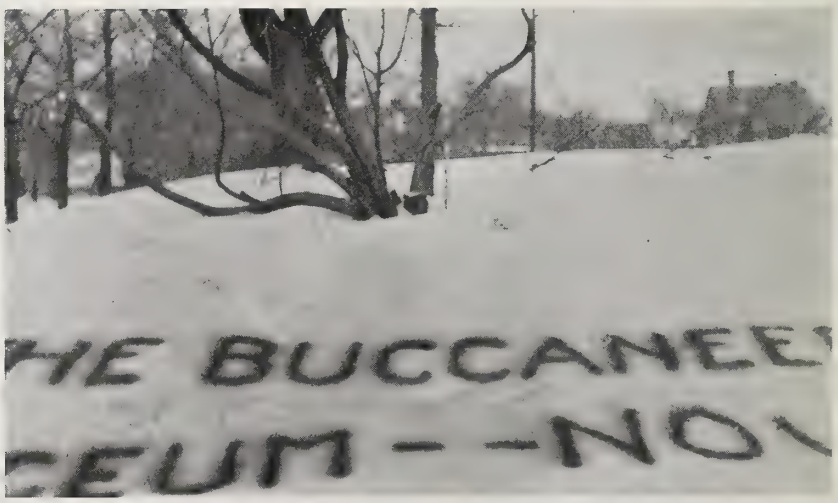
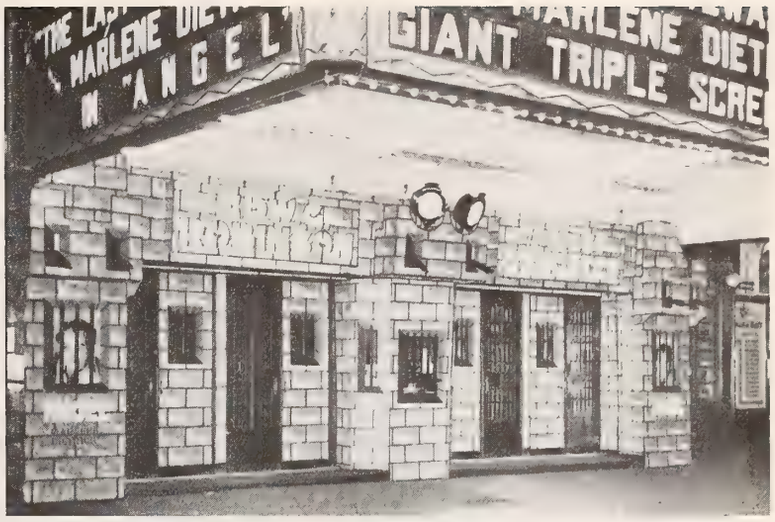
Round Table In Pictures



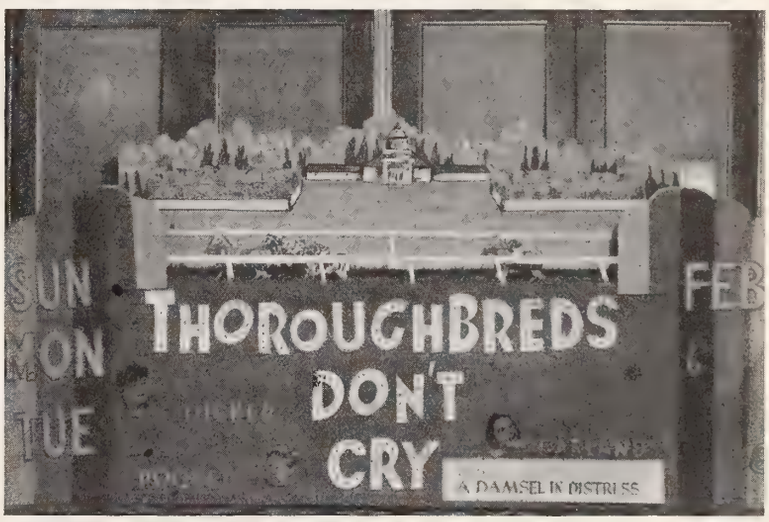
Jackie Cooper, star of "Boy of the Streets," receives from Stewardess Nell Timonen of United Airlines at Burbank, Cal. the first of the breakfasts named in his honor by D. L. Toffenetti, president of the Chicago Restaurateurs and featured in all restaurants during the films' engagement at the Garrick, Chicago. Tieup was effected by Chicago Branch Manager Henri Elman.

Novel lobby display shown below was conceived and executed by manager Pat Argust and assistant Ken Thornton, for their "Swing Your Lady" lobby display at the Spreckels Theatre, San Diego, Cal. Hill Billy singer planted at display strummed and sang hit tunes from the picture. For street ballyhoo, display was planted atop flat truck with singer and toured entire city.

For the date of "The Buccaneer" at the Lyceum Theatre, Duluth, Minn. Round Tabler George Irwin cashed in on recent snow storm to print title letters and theatre name in snow in nearby field. Irwin reports the idea as clicking favorably with his patrons.



Smash "Black Doll" front at left, featuring giant banner and colorful cut-outs atop New York Globe Theatre marquee were planned and executed by manager Lou Brandt. Real pollywog dolls were spotted around the displays and could be seen from blocks away.



Matt Saunders, Loew's Poli, Bridgeport, designed this lobby setpiece, center of which was a turn-table divided into four compartments, each displaying a coming attraction. Rail was chromium and base of marble. Behind on the arch were colored panels and in the rear on both sides were illuminated pillars. Entire display revolved constantly.

Frank K. Eldridge, manager of the Capitol, Concord, N. H. acted as Gov. Murphy's representative and extended New Hampshire official greetings of welcome to Sonja Henie at her hotel in Boston, in which city she was appearing. Concord papers carried photo and stories.

Eye-arresting indeed was Albert Gutterman's "The Last Gangster" display at Loew's Delancey Theatre, N. Y. C., representing a prison with large headlights and dummy machine guns mounted over all. Display was designed and created by H. Cooke of Gutterman's staff.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Theatre News

So successful has become E. E. Bair's house organ, "The Wind-a-Meer Theatre News," distributed at the Windameer Theatre, Cleveland, that the theatreman enlarged the size of his magazine, bringing it up to a three-column affair. In a front page editorial, Bair thanks his patrons for their support and encouragement which enabled him to increase the size of his book.

Newspaper Ad

Unusual in a holdover ad was that used for the "Hurricane" date by Manager Earl Hayter of the Plaza Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., Canada. His copy reads: "We really intended to close this engagement today, but Vancouver just won't let it go." Also unusual for a small theatre like the Plaza was the publication of their time schedule in the ad.

Editorial

Bert Greer, sports editor of the Calgary Daily Herald, running a series of interviews on prominent Calgarians, devoted his column to Round Tabler Pete Egan, manager of the Palace Theatre there. Under the heading "Give the Youngsters a Chance," Greer editorialized on Pete's work in the sports field, having formed the first Junior Hockey Association in Regina in 1927, is now the president of the Calgary Junior Hockey Association and Senior Softball League executive of the Calgary Bronks football team and has been vice president of 30 sports bodies in past years.

Exclusive

Tom Soriero, manager of the United Artists Theatre, Los Angeles, for the past eight weeks has been giving away to his patrons 8,000 copies of the current issue of nationally known magazines, the covers of which are used to advertise the current program at the theatre.

This exclusive tieup was arranged by Soriero who also places the magazines in barber shops throughout the city and at the end of the week distributes them in downtown markets. Tom reports this form of advertising as very effective because the books are taken home, looked at by at least four people thus giving him a circulation of approximately 32,000.

WATCH NEXT'S WEEK'S ROUND TABLE SECTION!

An important announcement concerning the 1937 Grand Awards will be printed in next week's Round Table Section.

On Tuesday, March 8th, the Quigley Awards Judges will hold a session at a special luncheon at the Hotel Astor to determine the Grand Awards Winners for 1937.

A complete listing of the judges invited to attend will be published in this section also, next week.

Contestants for Awards for 1938 are reminded that in addition to the Quarterly Plaques, the Grand Awards will be continued.

Stage Coach

Bill Harwell, Roxy Theatre, Logan, Utah, set up his public address system on top of building on Main Street three days ahead of opening of "Wells Fargo" broadcasting the following message at two minute intervals: "Hear Ye! Hear Ye! 'Wells Fargo' is coming." No mention of theatre was made. For street bally, old stage coach properly bannered and pulled by horses was driven by man in Western outfit with gun and made all sections of town.

Harwell secured permission from post office for regular postman to ride the stage coach to city hall and delivered invitation to Mayor to attend special preview. Papers picked up the gag thus giving Bill further publicity.

Live Baby

Considerable was the excitement in the Brooklyn sector when Paul Binstock, Marboro Theatre, advertised his "live baby" giveaway. Tieing up local baby shop, the showman promoted complete outfit in exchange for credit card in lobby. Through distribution of heralds, cooperating merchants' ads, and his screen Paul plugged the giveaway week ahead building up the gag.

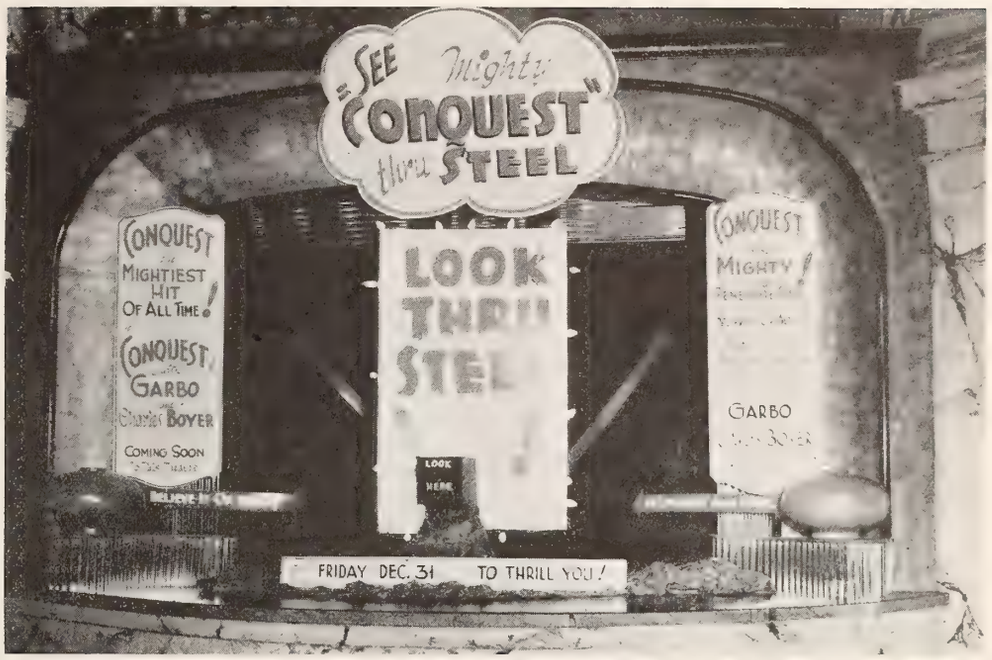
On night of drawing, girl in nurse's uniform holding the baby, which was a live puppy, wrapped in blankets, was introduced on stage by emsee who went through his regular routine of "picking" the lucky mother. Winner was first presented with the layette with due ceremony and then the piece de resistance was the uncovering of the baby, revealing the pooch.

Pony Express

Claude Motley, manager of the Griffith Theatres in Pampa, Texas and Jarrell Rhea, assistant at the La Nora Theatre there performed an unusual publicity gag for "Wells Fargo." Rhea, dressed in cowboy regalia with sideburns and long hair, rode a pony from film row in Oklahoma City to Pampa, a distance of 250 miles carrying the film on horseback, significant of the olden days' pony express. Rhea travelled about fifty miles a day, taking four and a half days to make the trip and the event was tied up with an old settlers' reunion held in Pampa at the time. Papers carried stories and photos.

Anniversary

Recently celebrating his second anniversary at the Majestic Theatre, Mansfield, Ohio, Wayne Williams promoted local baker for large birthday cake which was displayed in lobby, later cut and distributed to patrons. Cooperating store also took full page ad in local paper. Through tieup with printer, Williams promoted memo pocket pads with theatre name at top and merchant's at bottom; these were distributed at theatre during anniversary week. Congratulatory star wires were received from the coast and blown up for lobby display.



Radio

To sell "Ali Baba" at the State Theatre, Harrisonburg, Va., Manager Bill Smith talked over local Cantor birthday celebration broadcast, getting in his plug for the picture and theatre. Spot announcements were also secured week ahead, and four consecutive days before opening, playlet of picture was given over WSVA "Hollywood Newscast" program. Heralds were distributed and inserted in newspapers, large valances and flags dressed the marquee and an extensive outdoor advertising display was used.

"Dallas" Supplement

Reported as a first time for his town's leading newspaper to give such cooperation, George Brandhorst, Rivoli Theatre, Rutherford, N. J., secured the gratis insertion of 3,000 "Stella Dallas" supplements in all papers. Theatre paid for cost of printing which amounted to about a cent a piece, otherwise there was no cost involved, and Brandhorst says it proved highly effective.

Spectators Look Through Steel In Hartford

Jack Simons created an eye-arresting attention-getting display for his showing of "Conquest" at Poli's Theatre in Hartford, Connecticut. The illustrations on the right are explained as follows:

This effect is for apparently seeing through a sheet of steel, wood, or brick wall. The construction is nothing more than two oblong shaped wooden boxes, connected by wooden tubing as per diagram. The dimensions can be any desired, but must be the same throughout.

AA is open and in front of which the spectator stands and looks into.

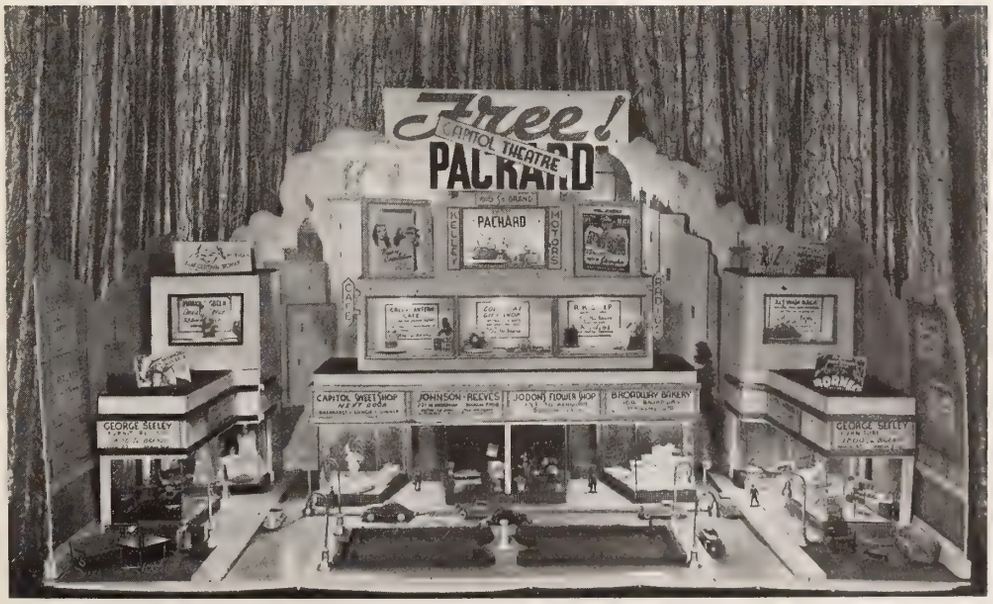
B Mirrors.

C Sheet of steel, iron, brick wall, etc.

D Rear wall in front of which the apparatus stands.



E Still or anything else you want them to see fastened to the wall.

A spectator standing in front of the apparatus looks into opening AA and right through the sheet of steel D and through the second box, both ends of which are open, and beholds the still on the wall. He has apparently seen the object on the opposite side of a sheet of steel. He can walk around all sides of it to convince himself that the boxes are open at the ends A as indicated in the drawing. The explanation is apparent, reflection.

The entire affair is painted black, water color, both inside and outside, and it is best to paint it before adjusting the mirrors in place. Ordinary ten cen store mirrors are used. To complete the illusion, when it is set in place, it is draped up to the bottoms of the two boxes. In other words, the lower or U shaped part of the apparatus is not seen. What you then see is two oblong boxes, open at each end and with a sheet of steel between them. The distance between the two boxes is immaterial and it is best to have at least 8 or 10 inches so that the sheet of steel will hang away from the ends so that they can plainly see there is no opening in the steel.

Miniature Street Scene Shows Off Merchants' Wares

JACK CLELAND'S MERCHANTS' MINIATURE STREET SCENE

One of the most original lobby displays we have yet seen, besides being productive of revenue for the theatre, is illustrated on the left, as created by Publicity Director Jack Cleland of the Fox Capitol Theatre in Glendale, California.

Cleland was handicapped for material to use in his lobby, since he had to wait for the two first-run downtown houses to finish their engagements on pictures before he could advertise them in his lobby.

He put on his thinking cap and his miniature street scene was the result. The display shows off small restaurants, dry goods, hardware, furniture store, etc., windows, fully illuminated and equipped with tiny lawnmowers, cakes and pastries and the like.

The display is sold to merchants by windows. When they are filled, billboards atop the shops are sold. In the remaining space the theatre uses what they wish.

This unusual set-piece was built by members of the staff and friends. It contains a well-lighted street, small cars, a park, benches, etc.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

This cartoon was created by Round Table Cartoonist Milt Rosenfeld.

Three Campaigns For Putting Over "Penitentiary"

Lester Stallman of the College Theatre, Bethlehem, Pa., built a special prison wall front for his showing of "Penitentiary." All newspaper editors and prison officials were present at a special preview.

Included among his activities were the following: comments of prominent police officials were used in teaser newspaper ads in advance; an eye-arresting street ballyhoo the day before the opening consisted of two "prisoners" shackled together, with a prison guard in uniform and carrying rifle, behind them. Sandwich signs on "prisoners" advertised the picture.

Two city policemen were posted in front of the theatre for the first two days of the engagement; a police siren was used every few minutes in front of the theatre attracting much attention.

Buss and Bull, the leading department store of the town, was promoted for a full window of Jean Parker fashion art with appropriate theatre credit. Woolworth's and McCrory's also carried window displays.

Stallman distributed four thousand special tabloids, house to house; also one thousand candy bags, properly stamped, were distributed by McCrory's; an unusual tieup was secured whereby all the salesgirls in the store wore silk banners three days in advance of the opening.

PITTSBURGH

George Tyson of the Alvin Theatre, Pittsburgh, dramatized a trailer presentation the week in advance of showing "Penitentiary." This was made most effective by the use of special sound effects, simulated machine gun shots and police sirens preceding the start of the trailer.

Trailers advertising this attraction also ran in six associated theatres, carrying an endorsement by Senator Harris.

An unusual lobby exhibit consisted of prison antiques featuring ancient doors, guns, ball and chains, huge keys, locks, prison chairs, etc.

Street ballyhoo of five boys in prison-striped uniforms followed by prison guard carrying shotgun paraded main streets three days in advance of opening. The same unit of boys, after opening day, visited restaurants at meal time with sign on backs reading "Don't get excited, we are only advertising 'Penitentiary' at the Alvin."

Five thousand tabloid "News Flashes" distributed by news boys shouting "Here's biggest prison story . . ." etc. One-sheet streamers on eleven circulation wagons tied in the picture with Detective magazines.

One hundred girls in McCrory's and 30 girls in Woolworth's all carried silk badges; both stores were also promoted for full window displays.

His billing consisted of 200 jumbo window cards, 50 window streamers, special cards in lobbies of hotels, one-sheet cards with stills in Grant's and Murphy's store windows, and 35 twenty-four sheets were posted along main arteries.

Radio was covered with a fifteen minute interview over station KDLA day before opening, accompanied by spot announcements of program. Two five-minute dramatic announcements preceded by sirens and shots were broadcast over station WWSW.

ALTOONA

Besides using the dramatized trailer effect and special prison front for his showing of "Penitentiary," W. W. Ackerman of the Olympic Theatre had several unusually effective angles worked out. He used the prison ballyhoo parading the main streets and also had these "prisoners" meet all arrivals at train station.

Spot announcements on the radio, window displays in McCrory's and Kresge's, distribution of "News Flashes" and special heralds all played a prominent role.

Contest was set with Kresge's displaying large bowl of candy bars. Patrons were asked to guess number of bars in bowl for tickets. Five hundred carnations were promoted from leading florist. Two hundred were delivered to prominent citizens with card of greeting and three hundred given away opening day to ladies.

Six-day newspaper serialization was planted along with special art and stories and a three-day "Lettergram" contest planted in the Tribune.

More Information On Eliminating Costly Accidents

Fourth in a series of articles on "Safety" as explained in a special manual issued by the M. & P. Theatres in New England. Quoting from this pamphlet:

"Every one of these preventative suggestions are the culmination of actual accidents —cases taken from our insurance records here at the home office.

BOOTH:

1. Are all projection openings of booth equipped with doors having automatic closing devices and are these devices in proper condition? Are these devices arranged to close automatically at time of fire by melting of a fusible device? Using a cord or a string, or a piece of film, and depending upon it to burn as the automatic device, is not satisfactory. Fusible metal links are required.

2. Is booth provided with proper ventilating system so that in case of fire, fumes will be carried off and will not enter auditorium?

3. Is door of booth self-closing with spring or weight, and has it a latch? Is door kept closed?

4. Is booth equipped with carbon waste cans and ordinary waste cans?

5. Is booth equipped with fire-extinguishers? Each city has different requirements, but do not depend upon sand or the carbon tetrachloride type, nor on the glass bomb type. It is questionable whether foam extinguishers are equal to the regular 2½ gallon acid-soda type.

6. Are films kept in booth and/or rewinding room? They should not be stored in the room space or in other parts of the theatre, except in the booth itself or in proper rooms, adjoining the booth.

7. Is booth provided with film cabinet?

8. Have "NO SMOKING" signs been provided?

AUDITORIUM:

1. Is the general illumination as bright as possible consistent with proper projection? From the viewpoint of accidents the theatre should be kept as light as is possible, without interfering with projection.

2. Are stop lights and aisle lights properly placed and maintained? Are additional lights needed?

3. Are any sudden changes in level in aisles properly lighted?

4. Is there an adequate supply of fire extinguishers?

5. Is fire hose in good condition? It should be examined for evidence of mildew. Be sure that rubber has not dried out. Is nozzle in place? Can valve be operated? Is spanner in place?

6. Have seats been examined for projecting splinters, especially veneer seats? Is upholstering in proper repair?

7. Are hat racks in place and secure so that they will not injure patrons or tear their clothing?

LOEW NEW ENGLAND DIVISION ADS

In response to numerous requests we are herewith presenting a group of "stage show" ads. The neat and easily-readable manner in which a multitude of copy is displayed is an outstanding feature of these ads as gotten up by Erle Wright, advertising director for Loew's New England Theatres.

DUKE PRINCE

managing Shea's Orpheum Theatre in McKees Rock, Pa., is no stranger to our readers, having for some time past contributed some excellent campaigns to our pages. However, it has taken him until now to actually sign on the dotted line and so we bid him welcome. Duke started with M. A. Shea in 1928 at Dover, Ohio, at the Bexley Theatre as usher, errand boy, doorman, etc., and worked his way up to house manager. In 1935 Prince was transferred to Shea's and Grand Theatres in Bradford, Pa., as assistant to Jack Hynes and a year ago took over the Orpheum.

signed up from the Liberty Theatre, Lincoln, Neb., as the assistant manager and before we had a chance to welcome him on this page, he was promoted to manager of the house. Good work, Bill, and we're looking forward to hearing from you. This theatreman started as usher at the Stuart Theatre, moved to doorman at the Liberty, then to the Colonial and then his present theatre and promotion.

manages the Saint Joe Theatre, Port St. Joe, Fla., a Martin-Davis house. Since Turner is the first member to join from his city, the responsibility of keeping us posted from that point will rest with him. Bill has worked as artist and projectionist and seems to know the business from all angles, beginning with the Martin Circuit in 1931, and worked his way up from relief doorman to manager.

manages the Winter Garden Theatre in Jamestown, N. Y., for Warner Brothers. Frank says he started in business as stage doorman at Warners' Stanley Theatre, Utica, N. Y., later was assistant manager of the Avon, there, the Utica in Utica, the Uptown in New York City and then to the Haven in Olean before landing at the Winter Garden.

is the owner and manager of the State Theatre in Clay, Kentucky. Willis managed the Alhambra, in Hopkinsville, the Kentucky there and worked under our good friend Andy Anderson, at the State Theatre. Jim has but recently acquired the lease of his house, so in addition to welcoming him to our pages, we wish him success in his new undertaking.

is in New Braunfels, Texas, managing the Rialto and Rex Theatres. Hotz has worked for the Hall Industries, operating out of Beeville, Texas, since 1929, managing various houses with the exception of a short spell when he went into the booth. However, after a try at this he returned to the "front" and last year when Hall sold out to Jack Pickens Theatres, Hotz was retained by the new management.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk(*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Dear Herald:

You exhibitors who haven't already played "Vogues of 1938" could do a whole lot worse thing than to show it, in my opinion. It is a style show mainly, and, while the men won't rave over it, the women will go for it in a big way. It is entirely in color, with quite an interesting story that is well played and well staged. Warner Baxter, of course, is always excellent, and we believe that Miss Bennett climbed several rungs up the ladder in this one.

Somewhere down in Maine is a town called Mattawamkeag, and George W. Pettingill is the manager of the Cameo theatre, and George sends us a very kind invitation to come up there and see him. Just think of it, getting an invitation from away down in Maine. They would have to furnish some pretty strong proof to convince us that those Maine folks weren't 100 per cent. We'd like to go and see George, and a lot more of the boys, but April Shower is laid up with the mumps.

Whenever we hear a political speaker telling of his desire to "do something for the farmer," we inquire of someone standing near, "What office is he running for?"

A newspaper recently carried the following in a box position on the front page:

"PAGING CHIC SALE"

"The Works Progress Administration reported that last Monday it had completed 10,175 scientifically equipt outhouses in Nebraska at a cost of $602,906 and the work was performed by the W.P.A."—News Item.

The item doesn't say how many other houses had been built in the United States, but it inclined us to the belief that Chic Sale's book, "The Specialist," must have had a wide circulation.

Webster defines a "Privy Council" as "a collection of persons having a secret interest in a legal action."

When we were a boy, old Silas Sink made the bulk of his living trapping muskrats on the Kankakee River in Indiana, and we used to sit in the front of his boat when he was "tendin' traps" and shoot mallard ducks when they flew out of the wild rice along the bayous. Gosh, but wasn't that fun?

February has the most important anniversary dates of any month of the year. Ground Hog Day was the 2nd. William Henry Harrison was born on the 9th, Lincoln on the 12th; Valentine's Day came the 14th; Washington was born on the 22nd. But the public doesn't pay any more attention to the 28th than a bullfrog to a Sunday school. Doggone the doggone luck, anyhow.

We know a fellow who always does just as he says he will, and that's Henry Friedel, branch manager for MGM out in Denver, Colorado.

But then that isn't so surprising when we remember that he acquired his early education under Sam McIntyre of the Metro office in Omaha. Somehow those Omaha managers always bring 'em up right.

It seems that a great many actors and actresses try to monopolize the spotlight, but not so with Spencer Tracy. Spencer is not only a splendid actor but he seems willing to divide with the rest of the help. Maybe Pat O'Brien had something to do with it.

We saw Charlie McCarthy in a one-reeler the other night. Charlie made love to Bergen's girl and Bergen caught him at it. Then, to square himself, he asked Bergen how much he thought they would give him if he choked her, and Bergen said, "Oh, about ten or fifteen years"; and Charlie said, "Well, it's worth it." Charlie is always the "life of the party."

It seems that Senator Soft Soaper from the short grass country, and a lot of women societies, want to censor the movies. Why not let the public do that? The box offices of the country, ought to have something to say about it.

Our daughter, Marjorie, who assists her husband, Walt Bradley, in operating the Moon theatre, recently received an invitation from Lyle Talbot to attend some kind of a round-up at his place at 212 South Peck Drive in Beverly Hills. The invitation is printed on pink paper and is about the size of a chain store advertisement. In each corner are printed the initials "D. T.," which our housekeeper says stands for "Deliriously Tremendous." It says that Lyle will be assisted by some others. While it doesn't say so, we judge that the party will commence when they all get there and will end as soon as the ambulances are all loaded. Lyle, you know, assists Darryl Zanuck (from Wahoo, Nebraska) in framing up entertainment to amuse and entertain the public, and Lyle is a pretty good assistant, too. We hope he has his favorite dish of beans and sowbelly. In his letter to Marjorie he says he reads J. C.'s colyum every week in the HERALD. Huh, it's no wonder he is throwing a party to try and forget about it.

Some people are opposed to tipping, and we are one of "some people." Just why should the public be expected to tip an employee to save the employer from paying a decent wage? Tipping is done mainly to save being considered a "tightwad." Some employers expect their help to be paid entirely by tips, and some employees get more from the tips than from their salary checks.

Halfway Mark

Warner Brothers this week reached the half-way mark in the "Gradwell Sears Drive," a 16-week selling campaign named after the company's general sales manager, and reports a 25 per cent increase in actual billings over any previous sales drive in the company's history.

President Roosevelt this week accepted "with regret" the resignation of Joseph P. Kennedy as chairman of the Maritime Commission, but expressed gratification that Mr. Kennedy is continuing in the Government service as Ambassador to England.
